Elevator Explodes

. . . Four Critical, One Missing

By H. L HOFFMASTER
and JIM CAMDEN
Star Staff Writers

An apparent dust explosion blew much of the top off the Far-Mar-Co grain elevator in Lincoln late Thursday afternoon, causing millions of dollars of damage, injuring five men and leaving one unaccounted for.

Four of the men were in critical condition with third degree burns at the St. Elizabeth Health Center burn unit:

—Donald Brinkman of Palmyra.
—Francis Kreifels of 331 N. 32nd.
—Mike Murphy of North Bend.
—William Palmer of 1741 N. 22nd.

A fifth victim, Ervin Fuehrer of Bradshaw, was treated and released.

Fuehrer and Murphy are truck drivers who were unloading milo at the time of the explosion; the rest are elevator employes.

One Still Missing

Another elevator employe, Terry Praeuner of 7136 Custer, remained missing at midnight Thursday, when firemen gave up searching until morning.

Only his hard hat had been found.

The search was concentrating on the underground conveyor tunnel, now filled with grain, when it was called off.

The 5:15 p.m. blast opened the top of one row of massive silos, split the central tower and spewed grain from the north end of the huge storage complex located south of the State Fairgrounds in the area of 27th and Palmer.

Damage In Millions

No immediate estimate of damage was available, but the 5,250,000-bushel elevator would cost $10 million to $15 million to build today, it was reported. Fire officials said 80% of the elevator was destroyed.

Fire Inspector Jerry Frazier said there were three explosions: the first beneath the building in the conveyor tunnel, the second went up through the building and the third blasted across the tops of the grain bins. "It blew apart like dynamite."

After the explosion, which hurled foot-thick chunks of reinforced concrete up to 150 yards, men leaned out of the middle tower of the row of silos, yelling "Get us out, get us out!"

Stranded 1½ Hours

Brinkman and Palmer were stranded for 1½ hours high atop the 150-foot-high structure while firemen struggled to get up to them.

Firemen first had to put out flames in the central tower before rescuing the trapped men. And after the flames were doused, the portion of the elevator where the rescue was taking place was near collapse because of structural damage.

The brother, Bill, was the last man brought down from the central tower. He was badly burned and had to be lowered by a stretcher

Kreifels, Murphy and Fuehrer were taken to the hospital by ambulances. Palmer and Brinkman were flown to the hospital in an Army helicopter.

Fire Chief Dallas Johnson surveyed the damage from the air afterwards in a helicopter and said: "It looks as bad from up there as it does down here."

Johnson said half of the lids of the silos on either end of the elevator appeared to be blown off and most of the other ones appeared to have damage such as cracks or holes.

The structure is insured for $2,295,000 and Frazier estimated 80% structural damage.

Equipment, grain and incidental losses could add several millions more to the total fire loss figure.

The incident gave rise to rumors of arson in that section of the city, since the night before a man had been slain by police officers.

But authoritites later said that there were no bombs and apparently no arson. Lt. Marvin Morgan of the Lincoln Police Department said that the cause would not be determined for several days.

Arson Not Indicated

Lt. Ernest Berry of the police department, who was on the scene for much of the time, said early Thursday evening "at this time there is no reason to believe that there was a bomb or arson."

Rescue Pictures

"We're surmising it was a dust explosion," Fire Inspector Frazier said.

Farm Elevator Mutual Insurance will be sending in an expert from Kansas for further investigation, Frazier said. He also said that arson or bombing have not been ruled out.

R. Bruce Abernathy, assistant control supervisor for the Lincoln Electric System, said four million watts of power were lost for about 45 minutes when the substation at 26th and Center Sts. was cut off

Herman Hemple, with the LES customer division, said when the elevator complex electric wiring was disrupted by the explosion, the power station went off also.

Marvin Honensee of Fremont, who is general superintendent of the company, was at Fremont when he heard about the blast. He arrived on the scene about 6 p.m.

The blast was apparently responsible for damage to a transformer at Lincoln Grain's elevator near the Far-Mar-Co site.

'Devastating'

"This is devastating."

Jack Lacy, superintendent of the elevator, sat in what was left of the building where trucks were weighed.

"I couldn't even begin to estimate the damage right now," he said.

Knocked Off Feet

Lacy was in the mental building when the explosion occurred, and was knocked off his feet by the blast.

"As soon as it hit, as soon as it happened, I knew what it was."

"It" was an explosion, probably caused when dust collected in an opening along the conveyor and was ignited by a spark from some machinery.

Lacy said that the elevator was equipped with the most modern machinery to keep dust under control. He also said that the elevator had just been cleaned yesterday.

Always Hazardous

But even so, he said, dust is always hazardous.

Lacy was thankful that most of the employes had quit half an hour before the explosion. Even so, four elevator employees and a truck driver were injured in the blast.

Midge Harrison, of 4045 South, a secretary at the elevator, was in the building with Lacy.

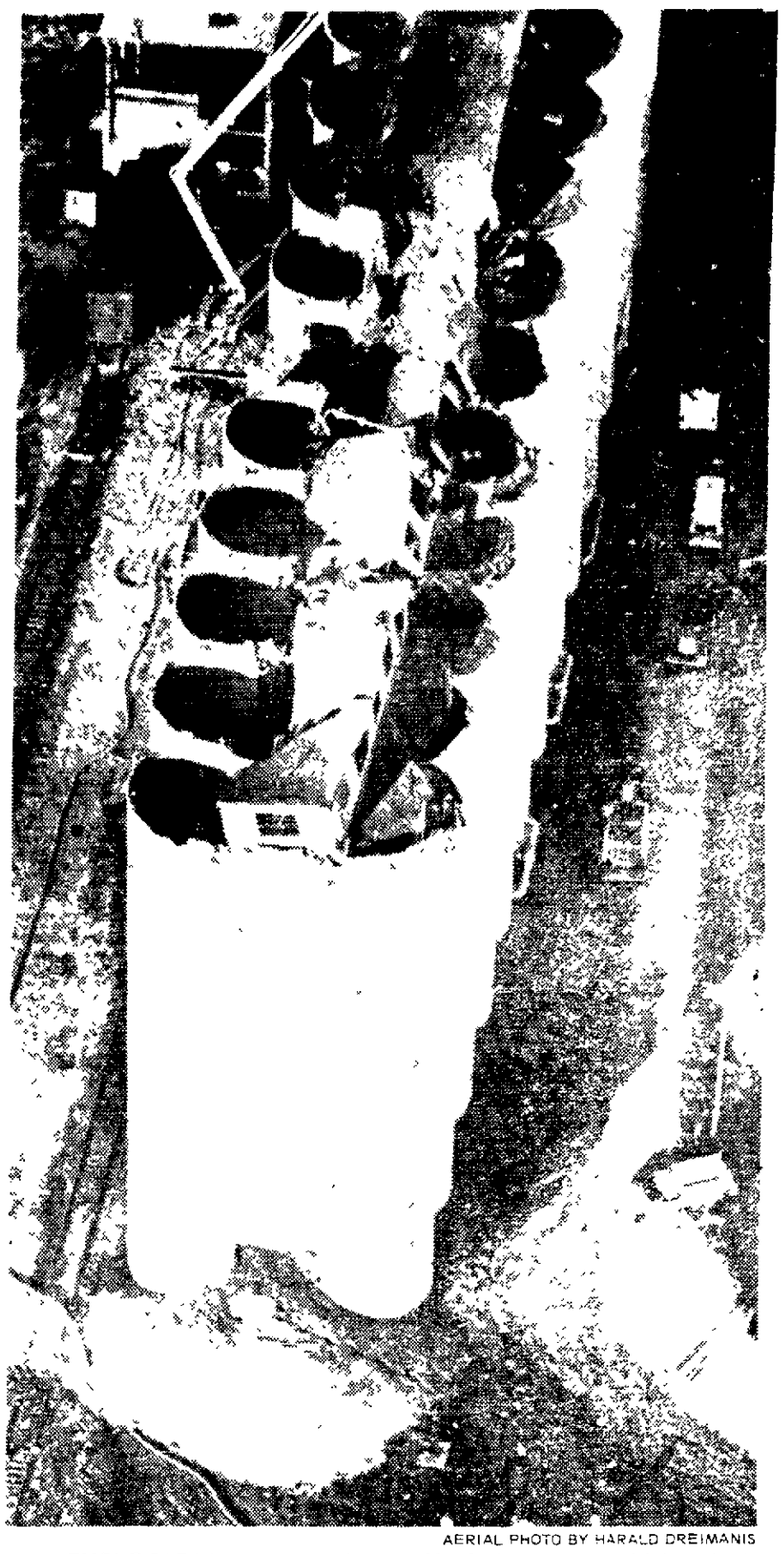

She said either the explosion or Lacy falling knocked her to the ground — she didn't know which.

"We went down .I don't really remember," she said.

Miss Harrison had a desk in a little office just off the weight room. The desk was no longer visible after the explosion. It was covered with a pile of rubble.

When asked what she thought she would be doing at work Friday, she just shook her head.

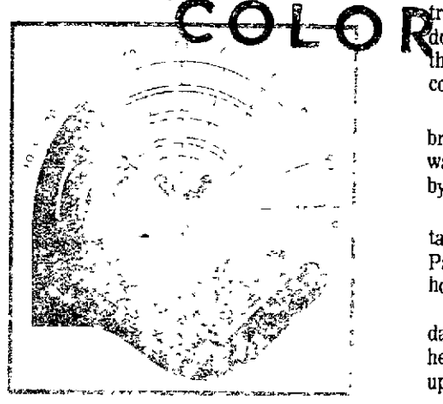

"I don't know," she said.

FBI To Probe Death Of Man Shot By Deputy Sheriff

By GORDON WINTERS
Star Staff Writer

The death of Arvid Sherdell Lewis, 25, killed by a shotgun blast fired through his front door by a deputy sheriff, will be investigated by the FBI.

The shotgun blast was fired by Lancaster County Deputy Sheriff Rodney Loos, who was on the front porch of the home at 2284 Potter with two Lincoln police officers while nine other officers were stationed around the house, according to Lancaster County Atty. Ron Lahners.

FBI reports on the incident will be turned over to the Civil Rights Division of the U.S. Justice Department and U S. District Atty. Dan Wherry in Omaha, according to Lahners.

A person charged with a death under a 1968 amendment to the 1948 Civil Rights Act could be sentenced to life imprisonment, according to Wherry.

Deputy 'Inactive'

Loos has been placed on "inactive status" during the investigation, according to Lahners Chief Deputy Del Zieman said Loos's only duty will be to cooperate with the investigation.

The shot fired by Loos was the only one fired in the incident shortly after 10 p.m. while the 12 officers attempted to search the house with a warrant, Lahners said.

Friends of Dolly Spitznogle, who lived with Lewis and apparently was the only eyewitness to the shooting, quoted her as saying that Lewis was unarmed.

Comment Refused

The woman, who obviously had been weeping when contacted at her home by a reporter, declined comment, stating she had made a statement to the police and "they know what I saw."

Lahners said officers at the scene "indicated Lewis was armed" and said that a firearm was found near Lewis's body lying just inside the front door.

He declined to say what gestures or movements Lewis may have made before the shot was fired, apparently only moments after officers arrived at the house.

The front storm door of the home, of which "a good portion was glass," was closed when Loos fired, Lahners said.

Loos, who has been with the sheriff's office for two years, was using a "standard police shotgun," Lahners said.

Lahners said that two of the officers on the porch were in uniform and one was in street clothes. Some of the other nine officers were in uniform and others were not, he said.

Stan Schiermann, who lives across the street at 1637 N. 23rd, said he saw officers pull up on the side of the home and "hustle" toward the house.

Could See Body

He said he went inside, warned his parents to stay away from the windows, then heard a shot. When he next looked, he said, he could see Lewis's body through the doorway.

Lahners refused to say what the search was for, as did Lancaster County Judge Jeffre Cheuvront, who issued the warrant about 9 p.m. Wednesday, according to Lahners.

The warrant must be filed publicly with the court within 10 days, Cheuvront said

Five of the officers at the scene were Lincoln police officers, three were sheriff's deputies and four were from the Nebraska State Patrol.

Lahners said it is "not unusual" for the three law agencies to work together in the execution of a warrant. He said one factor explaining the large number of officers was that Lewis raised Doberman pinschers

Two Dogs In House

He said there were at least two of the large dogs in his home.

Lahners said that the search was under the supervision of a Lincoln police officer. He refused to give the man's name or rank.

The fact that officers from all three local law enforcement agencies participated in the incident was a major factor in his decision to call for a federal investigation, Lahners said

"There was no independent local agency to conduct the investigation," Lahners said. Other considerations, he said were "the very type of thing it was" and its seriousness.

Within A Week

Lahners said he expects the FBI team of investigators to conclude their investigation within seven days.

Wherry said the team began the investigation Thursday afternoon. He said that the team would not include FBI agents stationed in Lincoln.

An FBI spokesman in the Omaha office of the FBI refused to state how many agents would be involved in the investigation.

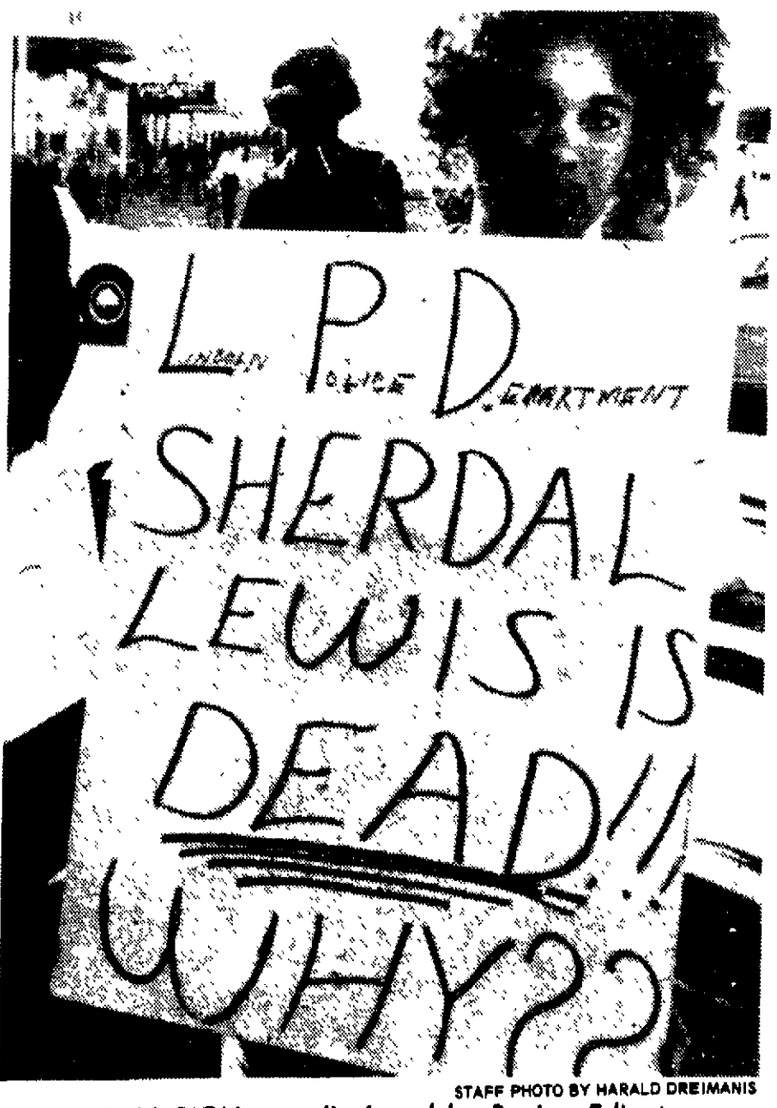

Wherry said he has been involved in about four or five investigations under the Civil Rights Act since he was named U.S. attorney in April.

One of those, he said, involved the fatal shooting by Omaha police of Roy Lee Landrum. Based on that investigation and Wherry's recommendation that he not prosecute, the Civil Rights Division concluded that filing a complaint against the police office was not justified.

Last Police Killing

The last man killed by police in Lincoln was Elijah Childers, who was shot four times when he allegedly charged out of his apartment door with a paring knife when officers went to contact him about a fight in a tavern earlier that evening.

A corner's jury later cleared Detective Don Buckner and Officer Mike Williams of any wrongdoing in the killing

"Who's the next victim! ! ! And why?"

"Police or killers?"

"Is your screen door bullet proof?"

"There was a killing last night in Lincoln. a black man."

The placards fairly screamed out their messages, but few of the people passing by the corner of 12th and O Sts. Thursday afternoon paid them any mind.

Most glanced briefly at the bitter faces of those carrying the signs, then looked down quickly and scurried on.

A young man holding a yellow legal pad explained, "We're trying to get a letter to send to the governor, to the county commissioners, the mayor, the FBI, the police . . ."

His voice waivered with emotion as he explained how friends of Sherdell Lewis had banded together to ensure a thorough investigation of the circumstances surrounding his death.

"They didn't have the right to kill him," he blurted out. "He didn't even shoot."

Another demonstrator, Cleveland Randolph, said he had about 75 names on a petition demanding "a full investigation and justice to the man who killed Sherdell Lewis."

Melvin Morford said most of the signers had been younger people. "At least older women will talk to you," he said, "but men . . ." He gritted his teeth and shook his head.

The group of about 20 protesters — mostly black — grew and died down in waves as people stopped and others moved on.

"This is not the first time," said Sheila Finney quietly. "I've got my son to think about. I don't want anybody knocking at my front door, telling me my son has been killed for opening up his front door."

The gathering took on some of the characteristics of a wake, as the young people remembered their friend and tried to come to the realization that he was dead.

"It's really a shame," Randolph said sadly. "We all feel so bad about it, everybody is really upset."

Ted LaRose said of his friend: "I've never seen him take arms against anyone. He wasn't that kinda guy."

LaRose said he thinks the police are afraid of black men. "I'd hate to think of them coming to my door," he added.

Lynn Finney said he is concerned that the emotional reaction of Lewis' friends "is gonna be released in some way. I don't know what it's going to come to. It's paranoid city. Nobody knows how to react."

He Just Missed It!

Jim Palmer missed injury and perhaps death by only 45 minutes Thursday afternoon

His brother wasn't as lucky

Bill Palmer was badly burned in an explosion and fire which hit the Far-Mar-Co grain elevator in the 27th St. and Potter area.

Jim and Bill take turns with the late shift and "it was Bill's turn," Jim said.

Bill replaced his brother at 4:40 p.m and about 45 minutes later the explosion blew off the top off one row of the silos.

Six men inside the elevator complex were injured, four critically.

One of the men, Ervin Fuehrer of Bradshaw, was treated and released. He was gashed by a piece of falling concrete.

Fuehrer said:

"I was waiting to unload my truck when the elevator exploded. There was no warning . . . no nothing . . . it flat blew up!"

Mel Preslicki said he had just unloaded his truck at the elevator and had driven away when the blast occurred.

"There was this huge kapow," Preslicki said, "I saw this huge ball of fire shooting out the side."

Kim Pope of 5530 Locust St. was working on a house in Belmont, one mile away when the blast occurred. Pope said it felt like an earthquake.

Another man, Darrel Laue, 28, of 1710 N. 27th, was blown from his bike by the explosion Laue was about one block away in Penzer Park. He is a senior photography major at the University of Lincoln and was one of the first photographers on the scene.

Ernest Mettson, a employe of the Lincoln Grain Inc. elevator, down the road from the damaged structure, said he was working when he heard the explosion.

"We looked up when that (the explosion) went off," Mettson said. "You couldn't see nothing but smoke."

Don Miller, who lives at 31st and Fair Streets, said the force of the explosion knocked two plate glass windows out of his house.

"I got here just after the explosion," he said. "It was just smoke everywhere."

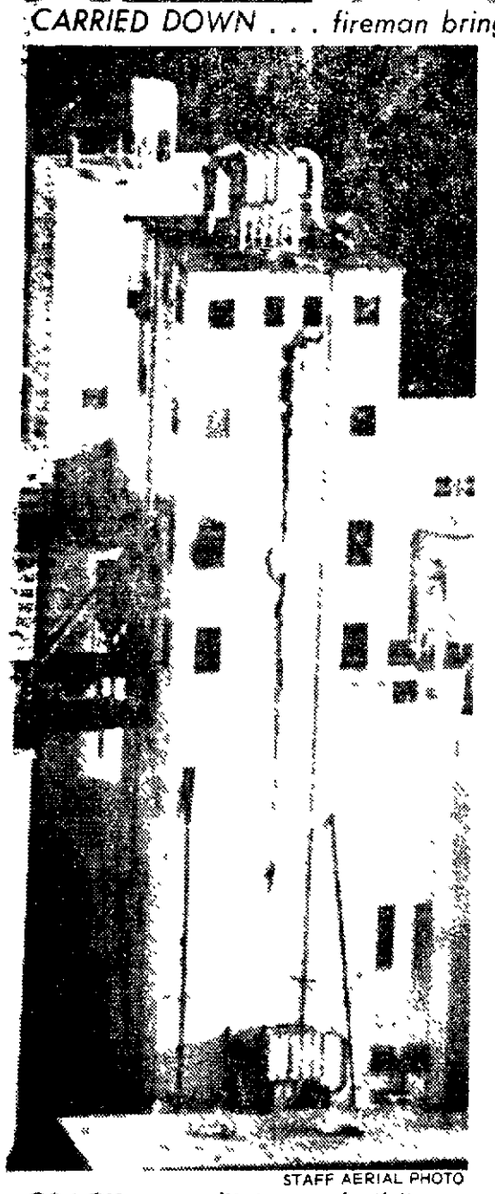

Elevator Explosions Always Feared

Dust is a commonly known, and feared, cause of explosion and fire, according to Rollin Schnieder, extension safety specialist at the University of Nebraska.

It is organic dust from such things as wheat, milo or corn that, mixed in proper proportions with oxygen and ignited can create an explosion, he said. Plain earth dust, he reminded, will extinguish a fire.

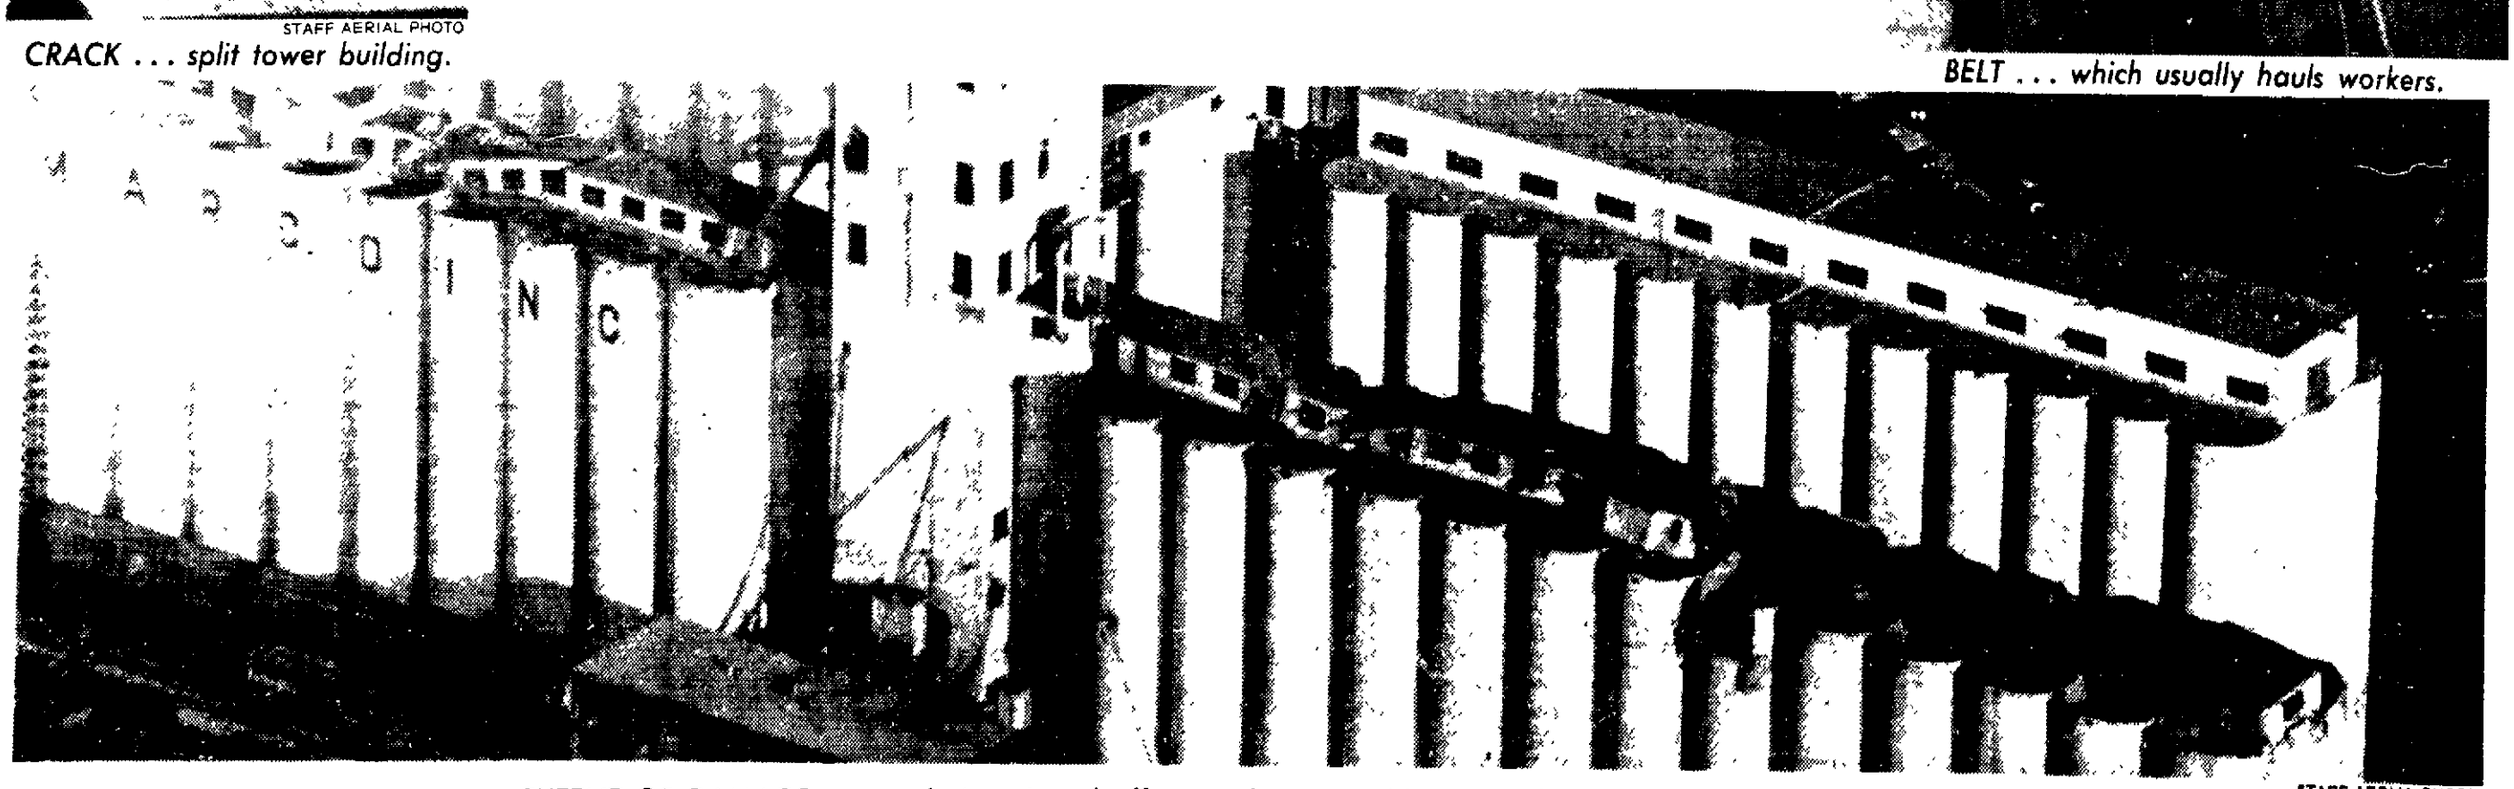

Organic dust can be ignited through spontaneous combustion or from some spark, Schnieder said. Even a sparrow flying into a light bulb can set up a tiny explosion that will trigger a big dust explosion, he said.

Thus, he said, there easily can be a series of explosions when one occurs.

Jim Palmer missed injury and perhaps death by only 45 minutes Thursday afternoon.

His brother wasn't as lucky.

Bill Palmer was badly burned in an explosion and fire which hit the Far-Mar-Co grain elevator in the 27th St. and Potter area.

Jim and Bill take turns with the late shift and "it was Bill's turn," Jim said.

Bill replaced his brother at 4:40 p.m. and about 45 minutes later the explosion blew off the top off one row of the silos.

Six men inside the elevator complex were injured, four critically.

One of the men, Ervin Fuehrer of Bradshaw, was treated and released. He was gashed by a piece of falling concrete.

Fuehrer said:

"I was waiting to unload my truck when the elevator exploded. There was no warning . . . no nothing . . . it flat blew up!"

Mel Preslicki said he had just unloaded his truck at the elevator and had driven away when the blast occurred.

"There was this huge kapow," Preslicki said, "I saw this huge ball of fire shooting out the side."

Kim Pope of 5530 Locust St. was working on a house in Belmont, one mile away when the blast occurred. Pope said it felt like an earthquake.

Another man, Darrel Laue, 28, of 1710 N. 27th, was blown from his bike by the explosion. Laue was about one block away in Penzer Park. He is a senior photography major at the University of Lincoln and was one of the first photographers on the scene.

Ernest Mettson, a employe of the Lincoln Grain Inc. elevator, down the road from the damaged structure, said he was working when he heard the explosion.

"We looked up when that (the explosion) went off," Mettson said. "You couldn't see nothing but smoke."

Don Miller, who lives at 31st and Fair Streets, said the force of the explosion knocked two plate glass windows out of his house.

Elevator Explosions Always Feared

Dust is a commonly known, and feared, cause of explosion and fire, according to Rollin Schnieder, extension safety specialist at the University of Nebraska.

It is organic dust from such things as wheat, milo or corn that, mixed in proper proportions with oxygen and ignited can create an explosion, he said. Plain earth dust, he reminded, will extinguish a fire.

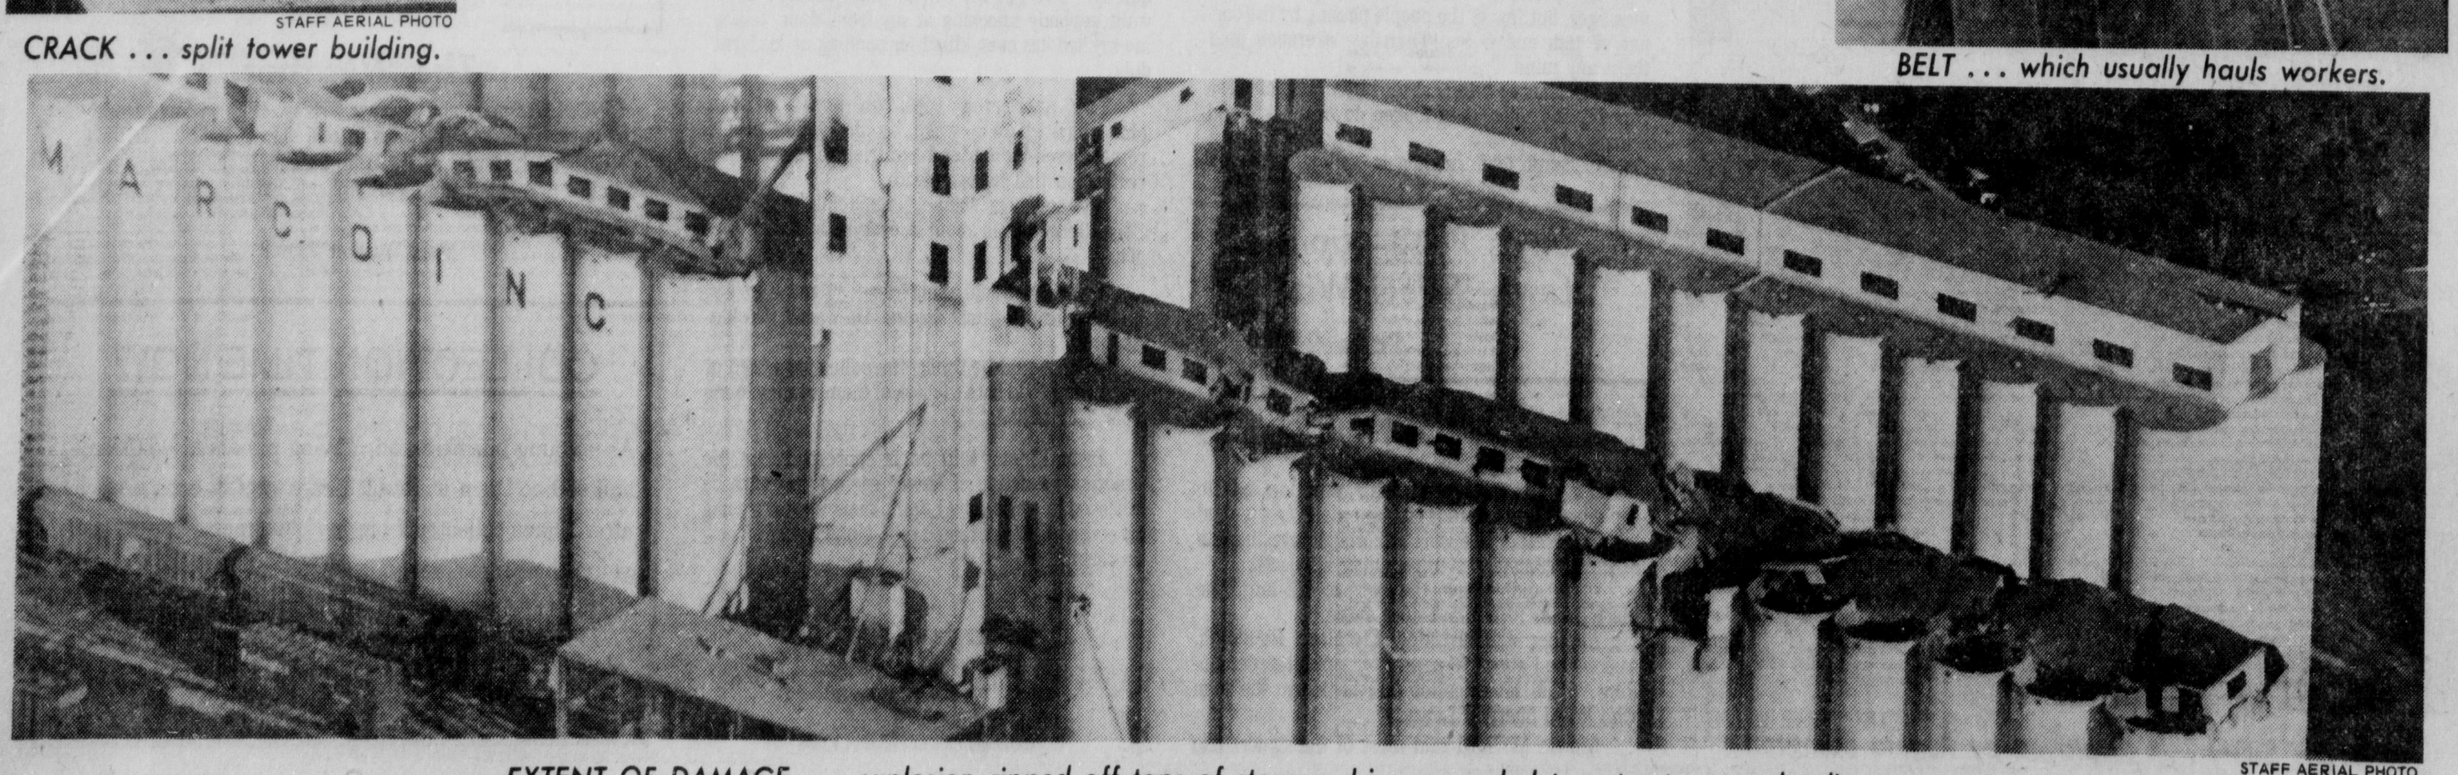

Organic dust can be ignited through spontaneous combustion or from some spark, Schnieder said. Even a sparrow flying into a light bulb can set up a tiny explosion that will trigger a big dust explosion, he said.

Thus, he said, there easily can be a series of explosions when one occurs.

FBI Committed 238 Burglaries

WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI committed at least 238 illegal burglaries upon one group of 14 "domestic subversive targets" from 1942 to 1968 and hid the records in secret files, the Senate Intelligence Committee was told Thursday.

In addition, said Chairman Frank Church, D-Idaho, the FBI told the committee that a separate group of three other targets was subjected to "numerous" unlawful entries from October 1952 to June 1966. The total number in the second group could not be given because no precise record exists, the FBI said.

The word "targets" was not completely explained, leaving it unclear whether the break-ins were upon homes of individuals, offices of organizations, or both.

Church said also the committee has learned the FBI greatly expanded its campus surveillance in the fall of 1970, just three months after President Nixon revoked the so-called Huston intelligence plan which proposed techniques to do just that.

Church read into the record a memo in which the late J. Edgar Hoover, then the director of the FBI, abandoned his previous refusal and permitted FBI field offices to recruit student informers aged 18 or older. The previous age limit set by Hoover had been 21.

Church said the FBI memos indicated the informer expansion was aimed at developing 6,500 new cases on members of Students for a Democratic Society (SDS), and 4,000 new cases on members of black student unions "regardless of their present or past involvement in student disorders."

Charles Brennan, formerly chief of the FBI's Domestic Intelligence Division, testified that in response to repeated White House orders, during both the Johnson and Nixon administrations, the FBI tried and failed to uncover any evidence that funds from Communist nations were used to finance "new left" and antiwar activities and organizations in the United States.

He said, however, that evidence was found that leaders and members of radical American groups attended meetings in Communist countries in which the antiwar movement in the United States was discussed.

"I personally had the feeling that we were dealing with credit-card revolutionaries who did not need money from abroad," Breenan said. "I never discovered anything to the contrary."

Brennan also said the Domestic Intelligence Division of the FBI maintains a security index listing 7,000 persons whom the FBI might seek to detain on the outbreak of war with certain foreign powers.

Brennan said the use of "black bag jobs" (break-ins) decreased in the early 1960s as personnel were drained from domestic intelligence units because of Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy's interest in pursuing organized crime and protecting civil rights.

Hoover later ordered the practice stopped altogether. Brennan said it was his personal opinion the FBI director was motivated by the fact that he had just reached the mandatory retirement age of 70 and that henceforth his tenure would be decided on a yearly basis by whoever happened to be president.

Hoover may well have wanted to get the bureau out of potentially embarrassing areas that might have given his critics a weapon to force his removal, Brennan said.

Hoover noted his opposition to continuing illegal break-ins on the last page of a memo in which his assistant, Carter DeLoach, outlined the bureau's use of them. He called black bag jobs "an invaluable technique in combating subversive activities."

In the memo, which has recently been censored to remove classified material, DeLoach cited a case in which the FBI used a black bag job to obtain the records of three high-ranking officials of a subversive group.

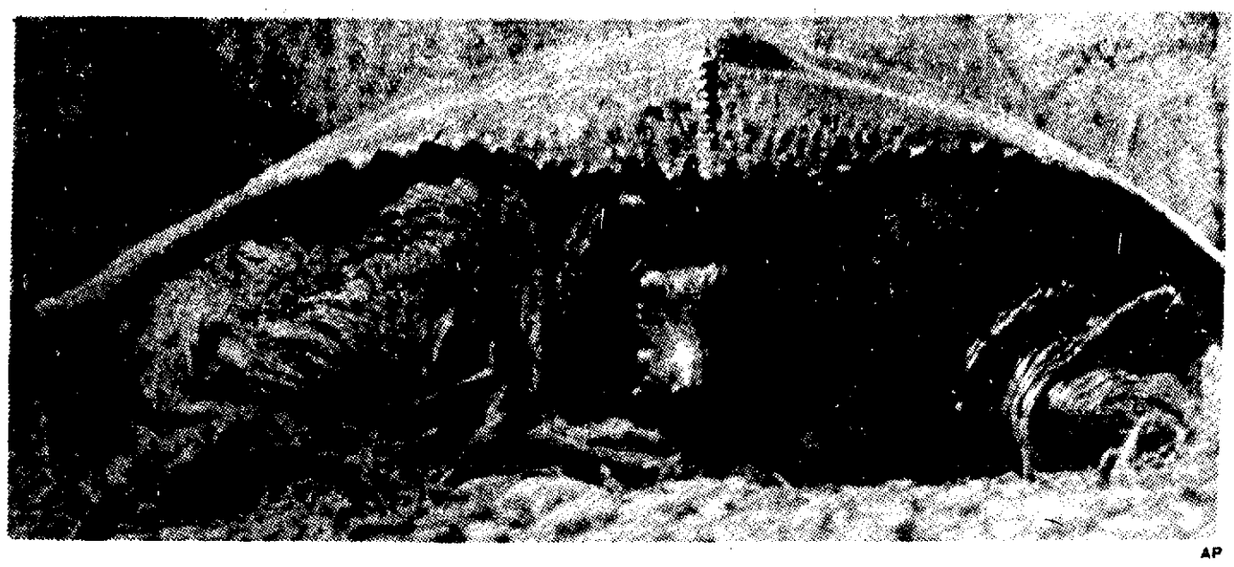

"These records gave us the complete membership and financial information concerning the (deleted) operation which we have been using most effecitvely to disrupt the organization and, in fact, to bring about its near destruction," DeLoach said.

Dated July 16, 1966, the memo is marked at the top, "DO NOT FILE."

In the memo, DeLoach explained the "do not file procedure" for recording black bag jobs which Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., later called, "the perfect cover-up."

DeLoach said authority for an illegal break-in would be obtained from FBI headquarters in Washington — possibly from Hoover himself — and that a memo explaining it would be filed in the assistant director's office and kept separate from normal files under a "do not file procedure."

In the field, an informal memo was written showing that approval for the entry had been obtained. DeLoach said it was kept in the personal safe of the special agent in charge "until the next inspection by bureau inspectors at which time it is destroyed."

Half Grain Said Improperly Graded

Washington (AP) — At least 50% of the grain sent overseas through New Orleans, the nation's largest grain shipping port, in recent years has been improperly graded, a former grain inspector said Thursday.

Testifying before two Senate agriculture subcommittees, Clarence P. Baker Jr. said such misgrading occurred every week during the 13 years he was an inspector.

By misgrading the quality of grain, inspectors approve shipments with a lower quality rating that that for which a purchaser is paying.

Baker and another former inspector, David B. Frey, gave sworn testimony before the two panels probing the grain export industry, detailing what they and a federal prosecutor described as a pervasive system of corruption.

Meanwhile, the Senate passed by voice vote a bill to give the secretary of Agriculture emergency authority to deal with the grain inspection scandal. The one-year legislation would permit the secretary to revoke the designation of an inspection agency if he found it had a conflict-of-interest relationship with a grain elevator or merchandiser. The bill now goes to the House.

In the world grain picture, Soviet field workers were reported lagging behind last year's pace in harvesting grain in Russia before the onset of fall weather. The lag could mean new difficulties for Soviet agriculture. U.S. estimates predict a Soviet crop of 175 million metric tons this year, about 40 million tons below planned totals.

U.S. government documents showed Thursday that the United States will propose next week that a world grain reserve of 30 million metric tons be set up as a hedge against future needs.

The proposal, which is to be presented at the International Wheat Council in London, calls for individual countires to set up reserves, rather than an international pool of grain.

At the Senate hearing, Baker reported that 80% of the grain sent overseas through New Orleans, which handles more grain than any other U.S. port, by the Bunge Corp., one of the largest grain companies, was misgraded.

Over-all, he said, the grades of more than half of the New Orleans grain was misrepresented.

Baker was indicted in an expanding federal probe of the scandal. He was charged with accepting a $2,500 bribe and pleaded guilty. A total of 52 persons or corporations have been indicted in the past 18 months, and 40 have either pleaded guilty or been convicted.

The U.S. attorney who has directed the investigation, Gerald J. Gallinghouse, told the subcommittees he could not guarantee that grain being exported is being inspected properly even now, 18 months after the probe began.

The grain, generally wheat, corn and soybeans, is inspected under the Grain Standards Act, which specifies that private or state agencies, but not the federal government, perform the examination. However, the agency's employes are licensed by the Agriculture Department.

Gallinghouse has coordinated his investigation with the Agriculture Department's Office of Investigation.

But he disputed the department's contention that it began the probe stating that the investigation was initiated through information received by the FBI.

He said that despite complaints made to the Agriculture Department, "no one in the Office of Investigation had any idea of the scope" of the scandal.

In fact, he said, "there has been some dishonesty among a limited number of USDA prsonnel, but certainly not enough to raise any questions on the integrity of the department."

4 Italian Jet Pilots Crash In Formation

Bonn, West Germany (UPI) — Four Italian pilots on dawn patrol flew their supersonic F104G Starfighters into the ground in perfect formation Thursday and were killed in a field near the Luxembourg border.

The impact blasted four separate craters into the earth within a half-square-mile area.

The four jets flown by an Italian air force lieutenant colonel and three captains crashed just five minutes after lifting off the end of the runway at the U.S. Air Force base at Bitburg and disappearing into the overcast sky.

They had flown to Bitburg from their base only 90 minutes earlier on a practice exercise and were returning to their base at Ghedi, near Brescia, in northern Italy.

The U.S. Air Force in Europe said Bitburg control tower lost radio contact with the four Italians almost immediately after they took off.

The Italians crashed near the village of Ralingen, 12 miles south of Bitburg, about one mile from the Luxembourg border.

"They crashed in line, the four craters being within an area of one square kilometer (about four-tenths of a square mile)," a German Defense Ministry spokesman said.

More OPEC Talks Expected

Vienna — Oil-exporting nations are expected to go into a third, unscheduled day of talks Friday with differences over the size of a price increase described as tremendously wide. The leader of the Saudi Arabian delegation, Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani, left Vienna suddenly after what appeared to be almost a breakdown of the conference of ministers of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Controls Extension Agreed

Washington — Restoration of the oil price controls that expired Sept. 1 and their extension through the middle of November was agreed on by President Ford and Democrats in Congress. The agreement removed the threat of an abrupt rise in prices, but it did nothing to lessen the differences between Ford and Congress over a long-term energy policy.

Pike Challenges Withholding

Washington — Rep. Otis G. Pike, D.-N.Y., chairman of the House Select Committee on Intelligence, challenged the Ford administration's right to withhold classified information From Congress and charged the executive branch with "contempt of Congress." He said that he would ask the House to act on the question next week, and that if the House backed him, he would name an official to be found in contempt. It was possible that President Ford would be named.

Ford Reconsiders Plans

Washington — White House officials said that President Ford was reconsidering tentative plans for extensive cross-country travel next month following the two apparent attempts on his life. But they insisted that concern about Ford's safety was only one of several factors that brought about a reappraisal of the scope and nature of the trips.

FCC Reverses Policy

Washington — The Federal Communications Commission reversed a long-held policy by ruling that radio and television broadcasts of candidates' news conferences and political debates would no longer trigger equal-time access for all their opponents. The 5-to-2 ruling, over the Democratic National Committee's objections, could have important and immediate effects on the 1976 presidential campaign.

Banks Holding N.Y.C. Bonds

New York — Banking officials in Washington believe that 100 of the nation's 14,000 banks are holding such large quantities of New York City bonds and notes that they would be in serious trouble if the city defaulted. Their information was based on a recent survey by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. of the 9,000 banks that are not members of the Federal Reserve System. The survey found that about 60 of these banks hold New York City securities with a value equivalent to 50% or more of their total capital — a situation that would put them in an extremely weak position in the event of a default.

House Panel Rejects Pay Raise

Washington (AP) — The House Post Office and Civil Service Committee voted 14 to 8 Thursday against a bill that would raise federal salaries by 8.6%.

House Speaker Carl Albert said the committee's vote probably kills any chance for an 8.6% raise. "You can forget about the 8%," Albert said. "If the committee voted against it, I can't imagine the House voting for it." The bill comes up on the House floor early next week, probably on Tuesday.

Last week the Senate voted to sustain President Ford's recommendation that the pay raise be limited to 5%. If either chamber rejects Ford's recommendation, the 8.6% rate becomes effective.

The 8.6% increase, recommended under a 1970 law designed to make federal pay comparable to that in private industry, would cost an estimated $3.5 billion. Holding the raise to 5% would reduce the cost an estimated $1.6 billion. Pay raises would go to 1.3 million white-collar employes and 2.1 million military personnel.

And, for the first time, this year's pay raise will apply to senators and representatives, federal judges, the vice president, Cabinet officers and other high-ranking government officials. Their salaries has been unchanged since 1969. The President's $200,000-a-year salary would not be affected.

Rep. Herbert E. Harris, D-Va., lost in an effort to get committee approval of the resolution, but committee debate succeeded in getting Rep. Edward J. Derwinski, R-Ill., to withdraw an amendment to Harris's resolution which called for the committee to adversely report out the bill.

Rep. Gladys Spellman, D-Md., also failed in an effort to bring up a bill before the full committee which would separate the congressional pay raise contained in Harris's resolution from pay hikes for federal employes.

The present pay of representatives and senators is $42,500 a year. Federal judges receive $36,000 to $42,000. Supreme Court associate justices and cabinet members are paid $60,000 and the vice president and chief justice, $62,500.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI committed at least 238 illegal burglaries upon one group of 14 "domestic subversive targets" from 1942 to 1968 and hid the records in secret files, the Senate Intelligence Committee was told Thursday.

Washington — The Ford administration, supporting a proposal by Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., asked Congress Thursday for immediate authority to give financial assistance to private companies for the construction and operation of synthetic fuels plants.

House Panel Rejects Pay Raise

Washington (AP) — The House Post Office and Civil Service Committee voted 14 to 8 Thursday against a bill that would raise federal salaries by 8.6%.

House Speaker Carl Albert said the committee's vote probably kills any chance for an 8.6% raise. "You can forget about the 8%," Albert said. "If the committee voted against it, I can't imagine the House voting for it." The bill comes up on the House floor early next week, probably on Tuesday.

Last week the Senate voted to sustain President Ford's recommendation that the pay raise be limited to 5%. If either chamber rejects Ford's recommendation, the 8.6% rate becomes effective.

The 8.6% increase, recommended under a 1970 law designed to make federal pay comparable to that in private industry, would cost an estimated $3.5 billion. Holding the raise to 5% would reduce the cost an estimated $1.6 billion. Pay raises would go to 1.3 million white-collar employes and 2.1 million military personnel.

And, for the first time, this year's pay raise will apply to senators and representatives, federal judges, the vice president, Cabinet officers and other high-ranking government officials. Their salaries has been unchanged since 1969. The President's $200,000-a-year salary would not be affected.

Rep. Herbert E. Harris, D-Va., lost in an effort to get committee approval of the resolution, but committee debate succeeded in getting Rep. Edward J. Derwinski, R-Ill., to withdraw an amendment to Harris's resolution which called for the committee to adversely report out the bill.

Rep. Gladys Spellman, D-Md., also failed in an effort to bring up a bill before the full committee which would separate the congressional pay raise contained in Harris's resolution from pay hikes for federal employes.

The present pay of representatives and senators is $42,500 a year. Federal judges receive $36,000 to $42,000. Supreme Court associate justices and cabinet members are paid $60,000 and the vice president and chief justice, $62,500.

Curtis, Hruska Votes Are Split On Amendment

Washington (AP) — Nebraska's two Republican Senators split their votes as the U.S. Senate, by a vote of 62-32, defeated an amendment to cut $1 billion from a $36.2-billion appropriation bill for the Labor and the Health, Education and Welfare departments.

For the amendment: Curtis.

Against the amendment: Hruska.

Burns Against Having Tax Cuts For 1976

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chairman Arthur F. Burns of the Federal Reserve Board recommended on Thursday that the 1975 tax reductions not be extended into 1976 and said Congress would court disaster if it enacted new spending programs.

Burns said also in testimony before the Senate Budget Committee that despite concern over the nation's 8.4% unemployment rate in August, "Most of the unemployment we have is voluntary."

Asked by reporters later to expand on that remark, Burns asserted that most of the nation's eight million unemployed could find work if they needed it badly enough.

He said newspapers are filled with "pages of ads" for jobs, but most unemployed persons don't want them because their jobless benefits and other governmental assistance leaves them in a position to "pick and choose."

Burns told the committee he is worried that another round of inflation could plunge the nation into new economic difficulties, and he urged Congress to consider cutting the 1976 budget instead of increasing spending.

While the spending programs sought by some economists and union leaders might increase employment in the short run, they would bring on ruinous new inflation within two or three years, Burns said. Further, he added, they would feed inflationary expectations of Americans at a time when confidence is needed.

"To overlook these basic facts of economic life is to court disaster," Burns said.

He said the Federal Reserve Board will continue to resist pressures to increase the money supply above its 12-month target of 5 to 7.5% because it would lead to new inflation and frustrate the recovery from recession.

"The only sound fiscal and monetary policy today is a policy of prudence and moderation," he said.

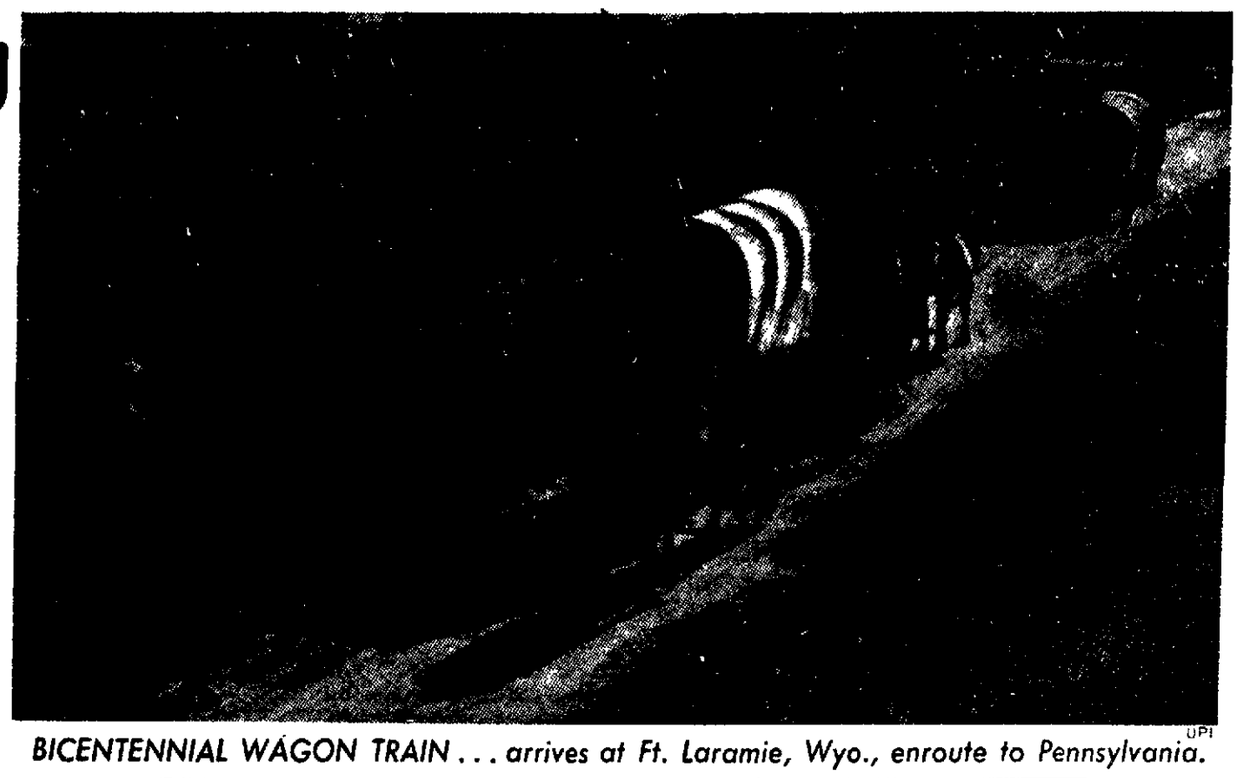

But his arguments for moderate rates of money growth did not appear to convince all members of the budget committee.

"I couldn't care less," said Sen. Henry L. Bellmon, R-Okla. "The thing we're interested in is getting people back to work."

Burns said he does not favor continuing the 1975 individual income tax reductions into 1976.

"I wouldn't do it today. No, I think the recovery is proceeding and proceeding satisfactorily, and I would fear additional stimulus at this time," he said.

President Ford is expected to decide within a month or two whether to ask Congress to extend the tax cuts. Burns told newsmen after the committee meeting that the tax reduction was designed to be temporary, and temporary it should be.

'Naturalists' Rebuffed As Sponsors

GLEN GARDNER, N.J. (AP) — Earl and Lucille Hansen have been rebuffed in their efforts to sponsor two more Vietnamese refugees because they run a nudist colony. "I was watching television one day last June and I saw an appeal for sponsors for Vietnamese refugees at Indiantown Gap in Pennsylvania," said Mrs. Hansen.

They went through the normal refugee channels with the U.S. Catholic Conference and last July ended up with Binh Van Tran, 27, and Hoang Van Nguyen, 24, both veterans of the South Vietnamese Navy

"I called for an application and filled it out, putting down 'naturalist resort' as place of residence. I didn't feel we had anything to hide," Mrs. Hansen said.

"It worked out so well, Earl and I decided last month to sponsor two more. We filled out a second application the same way and sent it off. But a Catholic priest at Indiantown Gap saw that we ran a nudist colony, and he rejected it."

A few days later, the Hansens were contacted by the Rev. Raymond Bianci, who headed the refugee settlement program for the USCC in the Trenton Diocese

"He told us he had been naive and didn't know what a 'naturalist resort' was," Mrs Hansen said. "He said, 'That kind of environment isn't good for them' and told us the USCC might reconsider the original sponsorship."

The Hansen's contacted their attorney, who assured them the original sponsorship was irrevocable

Father Bianci declined to discuss the Hansen case.

Despite the controversy, Binh and Hoang are immensely proud of their rapid Americanization

"I am very happy because I have a good sponsor, and so is my friend," Binh said. "Nudity is no concern of mine. Some people think it's a moral thing I am happy. I obey my conscience I am moral "

Binh and Huong work on the grounds of the resort during the day, then labor in a nearby factory for eight hours each night.

Both readily accept their environment, although neither goes naked except when swimming

Indiana Inmates Described As Thick-Lipped, Wobbly

MICHIGAN CITY, Ind. (AP) — Two pill popping inmates were described Thursday as "glassy-eyed, thick-lipped and wobbly," during a five-hour siege in which they held eight hostages in a prison hospital.

Their physical condition probably helped Indiana State Prison Warden Leo Jenkins negotiate the safe release of the hostages, said Stave Lasley, a spokesman for the Indiana Correction Department.

A shakedown in the hospital ward where the hostages were held turned up a small quantity of barbiturates, Lasley said.

"Only those drugs taken by the two inmates were found," Lasley said. "During the time they held the hostages, they also broke into a prison pharmacy and took several types of depressants."

The inmates, David T. Erikson, 33, and James C. Kelley Jr., 28, arrived at the hospital entrance about 2.45 p.m. Wednesday seeking 'cold-type medication," said Sgt. Guy Tate, one of the hostages.

"The next thing I knew, one of them said, 'Give me the keys.' The inmate put a knife against my throat and naturally I complied."

The inmates, with Tate as their hostage, went into a room where members of the hospital staff were meeting with Dr. Rodger Saylors, general prison physician. All were taken hostages.

Two hostages were released soon afterward. Three others, including Tate, were released at 6:30 p.m. the remaining three were freed an hour later.

Then the inmates surrendered to Warden Jenkins after giving him a list of demands, including requests for more lenient visiting privileges, better hospital conditions, better food and better recreation facilities.

Jenkins said the inmates apparently were looking for drugs and decided only later to issue a list of demands for better prison conditions. The warden said he agreed to review the demands, but emphasized there were no promises.

The knives used by Kelley and Erikson were fashioned within the prison and one appeared to have been made from material used for Indiana license plates.

Erikson was serving 1-10 years for drug possession while Kelley was serving 21 years for voluntary manslaughter.

They faced a prison disciplinary hearing within five days, but authorities said because there were no injuries, no criminal action was planned.

The hospital shakedown had been requested by Tate on Monday and was probably "done quicker than normally" as a result of Wednesday's takeover of a hospital ward, he said.

Government Money Vanishes

Once again, we are reminded of one of the major difficulties in public affairs — the problem of adequate citizen knowledge of government spending. And we are talking about spending of government at the local level, not nationally.

Nationally, it is impossible, of course, for anyone to really know if spending needs are legitimate needs. The federal budget is simply too big for anyone to fully understand.

But the same thing is true locally. This week, Lincoln school officials and state auditors were looking at half a million dollars of under-estimated Lincoln income from state school lands rentals.

School officials state that the underestimation stems from misunderstanding of state auditing instructions and some conflict between the deadline for budget submissions and the receipt of school lands income. Some of the facts make you tend to doubt that, but it might be true.

What is true is the statement of State Auditor Ray A C. Johnson who said: "If we (auditors) have trouble understanding a school district's budget, think of the poor taxpayer at the budget hearing."

We are reminded of a recent Natural Resources District budget hearing at which no citizens at all showed up, despite the fact that the budget involved millions of dollars. Public bodies sometimes seem to think that because citizens do not show up at hearings, they are indifferent to the budget situation.

The reason people do not show up is not indifference, but lack of understanding. Part of the responsibility for this must be shared by the press, which has a difficult time of its own in understanding budgets and presenting them in any meaningful way to readers.

But part of the responsibility must be borne, too, by governmental bodies. School districts, counties, cities and other tax-supported agencies should make a greater effort to present their budgets in a way that is meaningful to people and easy to understand.

Drastic changes in budget procedures from year to year ought to be avoided, as should methods of presentation that can be interpreted only by fiscal experts. If a better job were done of informing the public of annual spending plans, our guess is that public budget hearings would be crowded.

Tax Ends Count, Not Means

According to Sen. Cal Carstens of Avoca, the State Legislature is frustrated in its efforts to respond to citizens' demands for lower property taxes. This frustration stems, in part, from the fact that citizens have not supported efforts to shift school taxes from the property to the state sales and income taxes, he explained.

While the senator may be right in his assertion, he is not examining the entire picture. Others testifying before the Legislature's Revenue Committee at this time came closer to the meat of things in noting that total public spending is at least as important to people as the means of raising revenue.

We would venture the guess that votes against shifting school taxes to the sales and income levies were largely based on a fear of higher total spending. We doubt that many people opposed the shift on any grounds of equity of taxation.

The problem is that if you give local school districts large chunks of money from the state's sales and income taxes, you curtail the districts' spending accountability at the local level. The school districts do the spending but the taxes are raised by the state.

Thus, to be effective, citizens have to take their complaints on spending to the state rather than their own locally elected school officials. That makes it a lot harder for citizens to participate in the spending decisions of local governmental subdivisions.

On the other hand, it would be naive to believe that public officials had no awareness of all this. They know, too, that state support tends to take the burden of taxation off of them, since the tax is levied throughout the state.

Thus, there would have to be a temptation to spend more money with state support than would be the case with total local tax support for all expenditures. Citizens know this and that's why many vote against school support through the state sales and income taxes.

The matter of greater equity in the sales and income taxes than the property tax is not of sufficient importance to outweigh total spending considerations. What citizens want is an equitable tax system. If it could be devised, they would support heavier reliance upon the sales and income taxes than the property tax if that meant no more spending, per se, than the present system.

What To Do And What Not To Do
The Contagion Of Violence:

By ANTHONY LEWIS

BOSTON — When President Ford came out of the St. Francis Hotel in San Francisco, he did not plunge into the crowd to shake hands; he just waved and headed for his car a few feet away. Large numbers of uniformed policemen kept people back with the help of barriers. There were plainclothesmen in and watching the crowd, and Secret Service agents surrounded the President.

Yet in that relatively controlled situation, in the moment available, an apparently would-be assassin got off a shot at Ford. The conclusion must be, as a security expert put it to the Boston Globe, that there is no way to guarantee the President's safety now in an open public setting.

The conclusion is an unhappy one but should not be the occasion for breast-beating about what a sick country this is. It is a very large and diverse country, historically less disciplined than most by either external constraint or internal tradition Among 220 million people, there are bound to be many thousands who are frustrated, angry, deranged

Public reaction to the two apparent attempts on Ford's life within a few weeks has on the whole been sensible. It has been widely recognized, for one thing, that assassination attempts are likely to be psychologically contagious.

From that it follows, as many have said, that for a time at least Ford should avoid open crowd situations. That does not mean holing up in the White House. He can, for example, speak in halls where the audience has gone through metal detectors — the sort of precaution now taken at political conventions. There is no reason to think that a president makes less effective contact with the public in a hall than in street encounters, whether he is sensing opinion or playing politics.

It is evident that press coverage of those charged with attempted assassination and other highly publicized crimes has begun to trouble a lot of people. Our Constitution leaves the decisions to editors, and competition does not usually lead to restraint. But it may well be true — and editors ought to think about it — that dramatization of the psychological rejects who almost always are our assassins encourages others.

The Ford episodes have also, rightly, renewed calls for more effective gun control. One thought here is that attention should not be directed entirely at new federal legislation, desirable as that is. If parts of this country resist what others think urgently necessary, the American federal system allows for diverse regulation. Many states and cities have gun laws now that are feebly enforced; cases are dropped, and judges do not impose serious sentences.

THE PRESIDENT . . . as shot is fired just outside San Francisco's St. Francis Hotel Monday . . .

There is room for action where the gun problem is most acute.

Those are some of the areas where affirmative steps might be taken to improve presidential security. It may be just as important to consider what not to do.

There is some loose talk, for instance, to the effect that the Secret Service and local police forces should take special measures against "known risks" in any locality visited by the President.

What does that mean?

In a country this size there are millions of potentially dangerous persons — those with records of threatening mental disturbance, say, or of violent crime. If there were effective ways of listing them and accurately weighing their risk to the President, there might be thousands in any large city. Are the police supposed to memorize their pictures, or visit every one?

To raise such questions is to realize the larger danger. Putting increased pressure on the presidential security forces is to court serious consequences to liberty. The next step would be to talk about preventive detention of "risks." The blunt fact is that a president cannot walk through the streets with absolute safety unless we adopt authoritarian methods.

There have been stories lately about the fact that Lee Harvey Oswald wrote a letter threatening the Dallas police or the FBI before President Kennedy visited Dallas in 1963. But the letter did not refer to the President. If the FBI later destroyed it, as reported, that does raise questions. But it would be something else to suggest that anyone who ever quarreled with the police should be targeted a risk in connection with a presidential visit. The net would be too large.

That leads to another thought, a personal one, deeply felt. It is that the Ford episodes show the futility — worse, the damage — of the endless effort to show that the assassinations of President Kennedy and of Robert Kennedy were the work of conspiracies.

From what we know now of Lynette Alice Fromme and Sara Jane Moore, they are the classic alienated figures of our society — troubled individuals working out their resentments or fears. But if Gerald Ford had indeed been murdered, very likely Mark Lane would be talking about a grassy knoll or Allard Lowenstein about multiple guns.

The search for conspiracy only increases the elements of morbidity and paranoia and fantasy in this country. It romanticizes crimes that are terrible because of their lack of purpose. It obscures our necessary understanding, all of us, that in this life there is often tragedy without reason.

The Blame And The Defense:

By WILLIAM SAFIRE

WASHINGTON — Consider who would have borne the brunt of blame had the second assassination attempt on President Ford been successful.

First would have been the men of the Secret Service, who have gone from heroes to bums in two weeks. Whoever was responsible for brushing aside the specific warning of San Francisco police would have received the same blame that history has allotted the man who failed to guard Lincoln's box at Ford's Theatre.

Next, blame would have been directed at the media. Time and Newsweek, which celebrated the earlier would-be assassin on their covers, would have received the condemnation of even those press and television commentators whose own outlets lavished upon the Manson groupie the attention she craved.

Third, blame would have been fixed on Ford, for doing exactly what his press secretary later claimed he was not doing — flaunting himself before the trigger-crazies, providing "a dare or an egging-on" that amounted to playing politics with his own life.

Finally, the refrain would be played again that ours is a "sick society," its profound pathology given expression through assassination, its bloodlust evident in the unwillingness to embrace gun control, and each of us would be asked to bear a portion of the national guilt.

Each target of blame would have had its defense.

The Secret Service would have said, quite rightly, that to take every kook into custody when a president goes visiting would require not only massive dossierization of our society, but adoption of a principle of mass preventive arrest abhorrent in a democracy.

The media would have said, quite rightly, that news has its own free market, and if editors put their notions of the public interest ahead of their responsibility to satisfy the public's interest, a vital freedom would be lost.

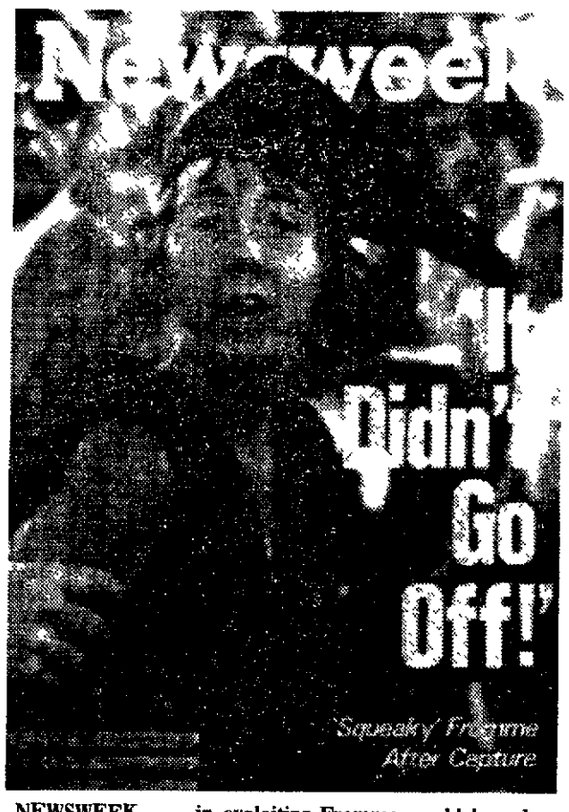

The followers of the fallen President would have said, quite rightly, that there cannot be even the appearance of a surrender to terrorism; that public contact with the people is not just exhibiting machismo, but reaffirming faith in an open society.

And a society whose majority rejects self-flagellation would say, quite rightly, that a small percentage of Kamikaze nuts do not a sick society make.

But all that is in the conditional sense. Fate has given us a reprieve What can the potential targets of future blame do to avert our appointment in Samarra?

First, the Secret Service can lean harder on the President, in that most secret of behind-the-scenes White House tensions. The last flare-up occurred when H. R. Haldeman forced chief of detail Robert Taylor from his job, for being too zealous in holding back crowds and spoiling adulatory pictures. Within the official family, the Service should assert itself aggressively, in the coming year.

NEWSWEEK . . . in exploiting Fromme would have brought press in for share of blame . . .

Next, the media can do with the second would-be assassin what it did with the second moon-landing: commensurately reduce the play. More important, the press can urge the President to adopt a strategy of surprise in his crowd-plunging, never letting a potential assassin know where he is going to appear. This means less press knowledge of the President's plans, and more headaches and expense in the coverage of him, but it's worth it.

The President himself, by his surprise visits and unannounced hand-shaking, can establish the principle (and make the pictures) of an open candidate in an open society — without forcing the public to take his life in their hands.

And American society — that's most of us — can do what we do best, which is to create the public opinion that demands that the President stop making a bull's eye of himself in this high stage of our assassination cycle. He cannot cave in to the crazies, but he must not flout public opinion, which requires him to accommodate his campaigning to our desire for his protection. Vests are in fashion this year.

We are not generally a superstitious people, but many of us have an uneasy feeling that these things come in threes, and the third attempt might not miss. Given that premonition, similar to the almost universal belief that a Kennedy candidacy will provoke attempted murder, we ought to adjust our campaign traditions to reduce our national traumas.

We routinely walk through electronic frisk machines on our way into airplanes; we can do the same into political rallies. We can see a candidate's smile and wave through a plastic bubble on the back of the car; that's our protection more than his.

Campaign fairness demands that no candidate have an edge. By editorial and column, by letters to the President and "sense of the Congress" resolutions, we can bring about a gentle-person's agreement that will reduce the chances of candidatricide without anyone seeming less heroic than his opponent. And — by exploiting the element of surprise in crowd-plunging — without kowtowing to killers.

Either that, or we wind up blaming each other.

Image And Reality

GENIAL IKE
. . . ended a war . . .

SILENT CAL
. . . a rare smile . . .

CALIFORNIA — Public figures acquire "images" which may accurately reflect what they say and do or may instead reflect the reaction to them by the news media. As tastes and issues change, some images may change, but others may stubbornly stay the same, even though they should change.

Take the images of two U.S. presidents, for example: Calvin Coolidge and Dwight Eisenhower.

Coolidge, the dry, unexciting New Englander, is more often than not remembered as a lackluster, almost laughable figure who just happened to occupy the White House for awhile.

Eisenhower, though remembered with affection and respect for his great military accomplishments, has the image, as president, of a genial golf player who didn't stir things up much and who — in the main — presided over a country that rode at anchor for eight years. The late John Kennedy, who followed him, actually campaigned on the slogan, "Get the country moving again."

Are these images true or false? Consider this:

H. L. Mencken said Cal Coolidge has been "weaned on a pickle." Was Coolidge a do-nothing president in one of those lulls in our nation's history? If so, we should have such lulls today.

There was better-than-full employment. Jobs were competing for workers. The cost of living went DOWN 2.3%.

The federal budget was actually reduced and some of the national debt accumulated in World War I was paid off.

During "Silent Cal's" presidency, the number of automobiles owned by Americans tripled and a great new industry — radio — went from $60 million in annual sales to $842 million. They laughed when Calvin Coolidge said, "The business of America is business," but we had true peace and prosperity — those things we are promised so often, but given so seldom.

In the "Eisenhower years" — 1952 to 1960 — we were told an entire college generation was "apathetic" and had stagnated (perhaps because they didn't burn down the campus libraries). Yet, Ike ended a war in Korea that had killed tens of thousands of young Americans. For the rest of his eight years in office, none was being shot at anywhere in the world.

Ike also halted — dead in its tracks — the advance of communism. And, Big Government didn't get any bigger. A citizen could go for an evening stroll in the park without getting bopped over the head. Wages went up steadily, but prices held. Steak was 85 cents a pound and a gallon of gas cost 29 cents. You could be well-dressed in a $50 suit and a pair of $9 shoes.

The work day and the work week grew shorter and our taxes were reduced. Suddenly, more kids were going to college than ever before; more families were buying homes; never had our nation's wealth been so widely distributed; and we were so strong that no one in the world thought of challenging us.

You'll have to make up your own mind about the image versus the real man, but maybe we ought to go back and see what they did that we aren't doing today.

A Story Of Poison Pellets:

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — Deep in the bowels of the Pentagon, another plumbers squad has been operating in the style of the notorious White House plumbers

Its existence was mentioned by Bob Woodward, the star Watergate reporter, in the Washington Post. He wrote about an alleged White House plot to assassinate me in late 1971 or early 1972.

He quoted W. Donald Stewart, a former Pentagon investigator, as saying he had been given "every resource in the book" to stop the leaks to our column. One effort alone, Stewart estimated, cost $100,000.

Stewart claimed he had traced stories in our column to more than 60 classified documents. "Stewart said the leaks to (Jack) Anderson infuriated the White House to the point that then-President Nixon worried about his ability to conduct foreign affairs," wrote Woodward.

The former President revealed the details of the secret Vietnam peace negotiations several weeks ahead of schedule, according to Stewart, because "they were afraid Jack Anderson was going to scoop them."

The truth is, of course, that we exposed Nixon's misrepresentations about the Vietnam war, the India-Pakistan conflict and the ITT-Nixon connections. We also revealed in 1971 that the CIA had attempted to assassinate undesirable foreign leaders.

Ironically, our story about the CIA's plot against Cuban Premier Fidel Castro described an attempt to poison him with pellets that would leave no trace. According to Woodward, that was how the White House intended to do away with me.

What upset Nixon the most, according to our White House sources, was our revelation that billionaire Howard Hughes had sent two $50,000 cash bundles, one to Key Biscayne, the other to San Clemente, for Nixon's use in between his presidential campaigns. The money was accepted by Nixon's friend, Bebe Rebozo.

It wasn't national security but political security, in other words, that caused the former President to unleash both the White House plumbers and the Pentagon plumbers upon us.

Stewart headed the Pentagon plumbers, who operated out of Room 3E993 in the Pentagon. In the spring of 1971, they mistakenly fingered a mild, bespectacled civilian employe, named Gene Smith, as one of our sources.

Smith later told us that Stewart had bullied and badgered him, scalding him with obscenities. Stewart swears that his interrogation of Smith was polite and proper.

In the end, Smith was hauled before a grand jury which concluded that he was innocent of any wrongdoing.

The most graphic account of the Pentagon plumbers in action has been provided by Navy Yeoman Charles Radford, who was also suspected of leaking information to us.

Testifying behind closed doors, he told the Senate Armed Services Committee how the Pentagon Plumbers had wrung a confession out of him. They grilled him abusively, strapped him to a lie detector, brought him back for more questioning and then repeated the process all over again, Radford testified until he broke down and wept.

Radford identified Stewart as his chief inquisitor. Stewart called him a traitor, threatened him with prison and screamed obscenities at him, said Radford.

"He was convinced that I was the one who had passed information to Jack Anderson . . .," Radford said. "He used a lot of words, just a whole string of gutter language that you can imagine."

As the slim, soft-spoken yeoman recounted it, "I was on the machine and then I went back in the other room and talked to him, and then I came back on the machine."

"Did they use a rubber hose on you?" asked then-Sen. Harold Hughes, D-Iowa, incredulously.

"No," replied Radford, "but I would not have been surprised. (Stewart) was pretty angry. He was almost hysterical . . . His eyes were bloodshot, and he looked like he was mad.

"Were you physically threatened in any way?" pressed Hughes.

"No," said Radford, "he did not lay his hands on me in any way. He pounded the desk. He made motions like I suppose he would leap across the desk at me at any moment. But he did not touch me in any way."

"Then you would be threatened this way and then you would be taken in for a polygraph examination?" asked Hughes.

"Yes sir, as I recall, that is how it happened."

"And then you would be called back in for more interrogation after the polygraph test?" asked the senator.

"Yes sir . . .," said Radford. "After I broke down, that is when they let me go home. That is when it ended, after I told them I was passing informa tion . . ."

He confessed that he had slipped information from Henry Kissinger's desk and briefcase, not to us, but to the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

"Then they stopped. Then they let me go home," he said.

"You broke down and cried?" asked Hughes.

"Yes sir," said the yeoman.

Footnote: Stewart has strenuously denied any abuse of Radford and told us that the entire investigation was conducted by the book.

Government Money Vanishes

Once again, we are reminded of one of the major difficulties in public affairs — the problem of adequate citizen knowledge of government spending. And we are talking about spending of government at the local level, not nationally.

Nationally, it is impossible, of course, for anyone to really know if spending needs are legitimate needs. The federal budget is simply too big for anyone to fully understand.

But the same thing is true locally. This week, Lincoln school officials and state auditors were looking at half a million dollars of under-estimated Lincoln income from state school lands rentals.

School officials state that the underestimation stems from misunderstanding of state auditing instructions and some conflict between the deadline for budget submissions and the receipt of school lands income. Some of the facts make you tend to doubt that, but it might be true.

What is true is the statement of State Auditor Ray A. C. Johnson who said: "If we (auditors) have trouble understanding a school district's budget, think of the poor taxpayer at the budget hearing."

We are reminded of a recent Natural Resources District budget hearing at which no citizens at all showed up, despite the fact that the budget involved millions of dollars. Public bodies sometimes seem to think that because citizens do not show up at hearings, they are indifferent to the budget situation.

The reason people do not show up is not indifference, but lack of understanding. Part of the responsibility for this must be shared by the press, which has a difficult time of its own in understanding budgets and presenting them in any meaningful way to readers.

But part of the responsibility must be borne, too, by governmental bodies. School districts, counties, cities and other tax-supported agencies should make a greater effort to present their budgets in a way that is meaningful to people and easy to understand.

Drastic changes in budget procedures from year to year ought to be avoided, as should methods of presentation that can be interpreted only by fiscal experts. If a better job were done of informing the public of annual spending plans, our guess is that public budget hearings would be crowded.

Tax Ends Count, Not Means

According to Sen. Cal Carstens of Avoca, the State Legislature is frustrated in its efforts to respond to citizens' demands for lower property taxes. This frustration stems, in part, from the fact that citizens have not supported efforts to shift school taxes from the property to the state sales and income taxes, he explained.

While the senator may be right in his assertion, he is not examining the entire picture. Others testifying before the Legislature's Revenue Committee at this time came closer to the meat of things in noting that total public spending is at least as important to people as the means of raising revenue.

We would venture the guess that votes against shifting school taxes to the sales and income levies were largely based on a fear of higher total spending. We doubt that many people opposed the shift on any grounds of equity of taxation.

The problem is that if you give local school districts large chunks of money from the state's sales and income taxes, you curtail the districts' spending accountability at the local level. The school districts do the spending but the taxes are raised by the state.

Thus, to be effective, citizens have to take their complaints on spending to the state rather than their own locally elected school officials. That makes it a lot harder for citizens to participate in the spending decisions of local governmental subdivisions.

On the other hand, it would be naive to believe that public officials had no awareness of all this. They know, too, that state support tends to take the burden of taxation off of them, since the tax is levied throughout the state.

Thus, there would have to be a temptation to spend more money with state support than would be the case with total local tax support for all expenditures. Citizens know this and that's why many vote against school support through the state sales and income taxes.

The matter of greater equity in the sales and income taxes than the property tax is not of sufficient importance to outweigh total spending considerations. What citizens want is an equitable tax system. If it could be devised, they would support heavier reliance upon the sales and income taxes than the property tax if that meant no more spending, per se, than the present system.

What To Do And What Not To Do
The Contagion Of Violence:

By ANTHONY LEWIS

BOSTON — When President Ford came out of the St. Francis Hotel in San Francisco, he did not plunge into the crowd to shake hands; he just waved and headed for his car a few feet away. Large numbers of uniformed policemen kept people back with the help of barriers. There were plainclothesmen in and watching the crowd, and Secret Service agents surrounded the President.

Yet in that relatively controlled situation, in the moment available, an apparently would-be assassin got off a shot at Ford. The conclusion must be, as a security expert put it to the Boston Globe, that there is no way to guarantee the President's safety now in an open public setting.

The conclusion is an unhappy one but should not be the occasion for breast-beating about what a sick country this is. It is a very large and diverse country, historically less disciplined than most by either external constraint or internal tradition. Among 220 million people, there are bound to be many thousands who are frustrated, angry, deranged.

Public reaction to the two apparent attempts on Ford's life within a few weeks has on the whole been sensible. It has been widely recognized, for one thing, that assassination attempts are likely to be psychologically contagious.

From that it follows, as many have said, that for a time at least Ford should avoid open crowd situations. That does not mean holing up in the White House. He can, for example, speak in halls where the audience has gone through metal detectors — the sort of precaution now taken at political conventions. There is no reason to think that a president makes less effective contact with the public in a hall than in street encounters, whether he is sensing opinion or playing politics.

It is evident that press coverage of those charged with attempted assassination and other highly publicized crimes has begun to trouble a lot of people. Our Constitution leaves the decisions to editors, and competition does not usually lead to restraint. But it may well be true — and editors ought to think about it — that dramatization of the psychological rejects who almost always are our assassins encourages others.

The Ford episodes have also, rightly, renewed calls for more effective gun control. One thought here is that attention should not be directed entirely at new federal legislation, desirable as that is. If parts of this country resist what others think urgently necessary, the American federal system allows for diverse regulation. Many states and cities have gun laws now that are feebly enforced; cases are dropped, and judges do not impose serious sentences.

The most graphic account of the Pentagon plumbers in action has been provided by Navy Yeoman Charles Radford, who was also suspected of leaking information to us.

Testifying behind closed doors, he told the Senate Armed Services Committee how the Pentagon Plumbers had wrung a confession out of him. They grilled him abusively, strapped him to a lie detector, brought him back for more questioning and then repeated the process all over again, Radford testified until he broke down and wept.

Radford identified Stewart as his chief inquisitor. Stewart called him a traitor, threatened him with prison and screamed obscenities at him, said Radford.

"He was convinced that I was the one who had passed information to Jack Anderson . . .," Radford said. "He used a lot of words, just a whole string of gutter language that you can imagine."

As the slim, soft-spoken yeoman recounted it, "I was on the machine and then I went back in the other room and talked to him, and then I came back on the machine."

"Did they use a rubber hose on you?" asked then-Sen. Harold Hughes, D-Iowa, incredulously.

"No," replied Radford, "but I would not have been surprised. (Stewart) was pretty angry. He was almost hysterical . . . His eyes were bloodshot, and he looked like he was mad.

"Were you physically threatened in any way?" pressed Hughes.

"No," said Radford, "he did not lay his hands on me in any way. He pounded the desk. He made motions like I suppose he would leap across the desk at me at any moment. But he did not touch me in any way."

"Then you would be threatened this way and then you would be taken in for a polygraph examination?" asked Hughes.

"Yes sir, as I recall, that is how it happened."

"And then you would be called back in for more interrogation after the polygraph test?" asked the senator.

"Yes sir . . .," said Radford. "After I broke down, that is when they let me go home. That is when it ended, after I told them I was passing informa tion . . ."

He confessed that he had slipped information from Henry Kissinger's desk and briefcase, not to us, but to the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

"Then they stopped. Then they let me go home," he said.

"You broke down and cried?" asked Hughes.

"Yes sir," said the yeoman.

Footnote: Stewart has strenuously denied any abuse of Radford and told us that the entire investigation was conducted by the book.

Milford Students Design Median

By TOM COOK
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Milford — The students turned out en masse determined to get their way in a confrontation with city officials.

Not in a scene reminiscent of the troubled sixties, but in a community involvement action of the seventies bringing ninth graders and elected officials together for the betterment of Milford.

The end result will be the landscaping of a 300 by 10 foot median on B St. dedicated to Doris and Bob Lukow's two sons, who gave their lives in service to the United States.

The couple's oldest son, Mike, died in action July 11, 1971, in Vietnam, and Dennie died in a training accident this August at Fort Rucker, Ala. Both were Army helicopter pilots.

Family Will Pay

The Lukows conceived the original idea for the memorial and will pay the cost of the project.

Julie Jantzi brought the idea of designing the median to her ninth grade civics class this fall. Each of the 35 students in the class drew blueprints and collected data on the types of shrubs, flowers and decorations they envisioned for the memorial.

The students used seed catalogs and geology books to draw their plans and write pamphlets. Mrs. Lukow was amazed that ninth graders could do such comprehensive and detailed work.

She found it impossible to pick a winning design and told the students ideas from all the plans will be incorporated in the project, which will be coordinated by Merle's Nursery of Seward.

She told the students that many of the ideas they had were original, including a flag pole, which will definitely be included

"It was a real godsend when you got involved," she told the students. "Our boys were both outdoor boys and they would appreciate it very much."

The students weren't disappointed that no one was awarded the $25 savings bond offered by the Milford Kiwanis Club for the best design.

They thought Mrs. Lukow's idea of using the money for a big pizza party sounded like a reasonable proposal.

Students To Help

However, the students aren't done yet. They have offered their services to help plant and landscape the median this fall or spring, and Earl Graves of Merle's said he will use them.

And when the students talk involvement, they talk involvement. Not even the senior citizens are left out of this proposal.

Class member Dawn Roth wrote a letter to the Milford City Council suggesting that senior citizens be used to tend the median flower beds with some student help.

"Some of us started visiting them when we were in seventh grade," Dawn said, "and we'd help pass out dinners and things like that. I think they'll want to do it, because it makes them happy to think somebody is interested in them."

Mrs. Jantzi said she talked to Mary Roberts, administrator of Crestview Nursing Home, who was thrilled by the idea.

"The students and the city are interested in using the manpower of the senior citizens," Mrs. Jantzi said. "Again it is community involvement and getting those people out of those four square walls."

The concept of career and practical education is not new to Mrs. Jantzi. Among the projects her classes have on file in city hall are designs for a city park and renovation of the town's main street, but she said this will be the first project to come to fruition.

"It gives them (students) more practical things to work with and helps create better citizens," she said. "It is so frustrating for me and the students to spend hours of work on something that will be pitched into the wastebasket. It makes it worthwhile for the students and the community."

Mayor Ralph Kapke and members of the council said they were happy to see the students involved in community affairs.

Construction of the median met some stiff opposition, they said, but student involvement and the memorial have turned that around.

Kapke said he thinks pride developed in the students from the project will help city officials to prevent any juvenile problems or vandalism.

"The kids see who is doing it, and they know. They'll take care of it themselves," he said.

Student power can work two ways, he said.

Peru State Backers Mount Defense

By DEAN TERRILL
Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Peru — Alarmed by a suggestion from two state senators that its campus be shut down, Peru State College (PSC) is mobilizing its top strategists to combat the onslaught.

But convening here Wednesday night, the President's Advisory Council had difficulty deciding how to battle back. A main question was whether Sen. Gerald Koch of Ralston and Sen. Roland Luedtke of Lincoln "are wielding a cannon or a pea shooter."

It was pointed out that Koch had served notice that he would try to have the campus written off by the 1975 Legislature. But no bill materialized and it is the group's strong hope that none will in the next session.

Senators Invited

Noting that neither senator has been on campus "for many years, if ever," President Douglas Pearson has sent personal invitations to both. The council also agreed on a broad based strategy aimed at all legislators — a statewide letter campaign enlisting "all our friends and hopefully our friends' friends" to back the state colleges and particularly Peru.

Particularly irked that it was two urban senators who questioned the need for a school the size of Peru, several members of the group said in different ways that "especially in education, quantity doesn't equate with quality."

"We need to impress in Lincoln that the uniqueness of Peru is its size," said William G. Snyder, director of the Peru Achievement Foundation. "Peru State is one place where its people are still No. 1."

Small School Wanted

"Doesn't Koch realize there are still people who want their education in a small school, not one with 20-30,000 students?" asked Charles Caverzagie, Plattsmouth teacher and a PSC alumnus. "If it hadn't been for a small college, many of us never would have gone on to school."

Guy Cooper of Humboldt joined several others in interpreting the statements as "politically inspired." He suggested that the two senators will back off "once it soaks in that this won't enhance their chances to become governor."

"Anyone who attacks Peru is politically dead for the next 50 years," explained Cooper, a senior among the group of community leaders representing several counties. "We're not big in southeast Nebraska, but big enough that nobody had better antagonize us if they want to run for something."

There was some difference of opinion as to whether the college should ignore the senators' statements, made last Friday at an education conference, or combat them. Most members agree with Joe Masopaust of Peru that "when somebody hits you, you'd better hit back."

The one legislator present, Sen. Irving Wiltse of Falls City, suggested that "we must do something now and with as much force as we can put into it."

There was also strong feeling that the school could withstand any legislative attempt to terminate the facilty, regardless. The two senators not only proposed the closing but the conversion of the school into a juvenile corrections center.

But some were more bothered by the "adverse publicity" than by an attempted closing per se.

"It's not any bill itself which would hurt us," observed implement dealer William Shaw of Shenandoah, Iowa. "What already hurts is all this uneasiness."

Church Is Interested In Pershing Campus

By DEAN TERRILL
Southeast Nebraska Bureau

A national church group which has been quietly eyeing Pershing College for about a year would still be interested in the campus if technicalities should rule out its acquisition by Southeast Community College (SCC).

It has been confirmed that the site is under consideration as a liberal arts college and seminary by the International Church of the Foursquare Gospel. The group, although discouraged by an initial SCC vote to acquire the facility, is now publicizing plans not previously announced to the press.

"After a meeting with University of Nebraska Foundation representatives last spring, our international officers sort of backed off," said the Rev. George Cline, pastor of a Foursquare Church at Lincoln. "Million-dollar figures were discussed and that discouraged us. But if things don't work out for Southeast, and a much lower figure is presented, we definitely would be interested."

Several Meetings

The Lincoln minister said there had been several meetings with NU Foundation representatives as well as one last week with NU President D. B. Varner. Two other Nebraska pastors, the Rev. Mel Fryar of Fairbury and the Rev. Paul Jones of Omaha, also participated in some discussions.

Also flying in for one session were Dr. Merrill Nicholls of Los Angeles, Foursquare general supervisor, and the Rev. Don Ballinger, district supervisor of the churches' Midwest district.

Noting that the church operates colleges in Los Angeles and Mt. Vernon, Ohio, the Rev. Mr. Cline said Pershing would be well-suited to an envisioned enrolment of 600-700 students. The proposal also included television and radio operational facilities at the Beatrice site.

'Very Honest'

"Chairman Harry Haynie and other foundation people were very honest and open with us," he continued, "but they said their first obligation was to the Nebraska educational system."

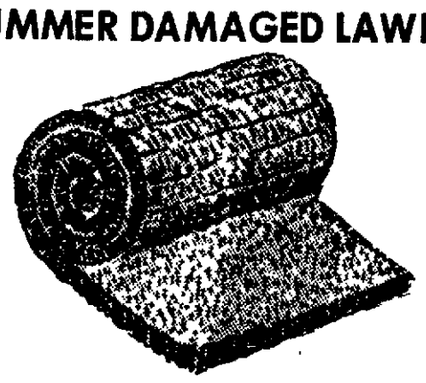

Both the Lincoln ministers and the Rev. Mr. Fryar said they believe funds could be raised to renovate the school. SCC has estimated this cost at $220,000.

NETV Unit To Hear Public Radio Network Report

The Nebraska Educational Television (NETV) Commission will hear a status report Tuesday on a study to determine if a statewide public radio network should be established.

The meeting will begin at 1:30 p.m. in the Nebraska Educational Telecommunications Center, 1800 N. 33rd.

Commission Secretary Jack McBride, NETV general manager, has said the study is being conducted only to determine feasibility and doesn't represent a commitment to set up the network. However, the Nebraska Broadcasters Association has declared opposition.

Commissioners will hear NETV Network programming and operations reports.

Sam Klaver

Omaha Services Held For Veteran Senator

Omaha (AP) — Graveside services were held at Omaha's Golden Hills Cemetery Wednesday for Sam Klaver, whose career was the longest in the history of the Nebraska Legislature.

A family member said Klaver, who had suffered from heart problems and diabetes, died Monday at an Omaha hospital. He was 73.

Klaver served Omaha's 9th Legislative District. He was elected to 15 terms, the first in 1939, and served 28 years in the Unicameral.

Survivors include his widow and a son Lincoln, both of Omaha.

New Bus Firm Under Investigation

Omaha (AP) — The relationship between A.M. General, a subsidiary of American Motors which recently entered the bus building business, and the Urban Mass Transit Administration (UMTA) apparently is under investigation, a Metro Area Transit official said Thursday

Jerome Erdman, Metro Area Transit's executive director, said at a board meeting that he was questioned Wednesday by a television network about problems MAT has experienced with 50 buses bought this summer from A M General

Erdman said he didn't know what the alleged investigation was about, but said the U.S. General Accounting Office had looked at MAT's correspondence with A M. General and UMTA last summer.

UMTA is the agency responsible for providing federal matching money for bus purchases and had encouraged A.M. General to enter the bus building business to increase competition

There was no immediate confirmation of such an investigation from GAO officials in Washington.

NETV Unit To Hear Public Radio Network Report

The Nebraska Educational Television (NETV) Commission will hear a status report Tuesday on a study to determine if a statewide public radio network should be established.

The meeting will begin at 1:30 p.m. in the Nebraska Educational Telecommunications Center, 1800 N. 33rd.

Commission Secretary Jack McBride, NETV general manager, has said the study is being conducted only to determine feasibility and doesn't represent a commitment to set up the network. However, the Nebraska Broadcasters Association has declared opposition.

Commissioners will hear NETV Network programming and operations reports.

Sam Klaver

Omaha Services Held For Veteran Senator

Omaha (AP) — Graveside services were held at Omaha's Golden Hills Cemetery Wednesday for Sam Klaver, whose career was the longest in the history of the Nebraska Legislature.

A family member said Klaver, who had suffered from heart problems and diabetes, died Monday at an Omaha hospital. He was 73.

Klaver served Omaha's 9th Legislative District. He was elected to 15 terms, the first in 1939, and served 28 years in the Unicameral.

Survivors include his widow and a son Lincoln, both of Omaha.

New Bus Firm Under Investigation

Omaha (AP) — The relationship between A.M. General, a subsidiary of American Motors which recently entered the bus building business, and the Urban Mass Transit Administration (UMTA) apparently is under investigation, a Metro Area Transit official said Thursday.

Jerome Erdman, Metro Area Transit's executive director, said at a board meeting that he was questioned Wednesday by a television network about problems MAT has experienced with 50 buses bought this summer from A.M. General.

Erdman said he didn't know what the alleged investigation was about, but said the U.S. General Accounting Office had looked at MAT's correspondence with A.M. General and UMTA last summer.

UMTA is the agency responsible for providing federal matching money for bus purchases and had encouraged A.M. General to enter the bus building business to increase competition.

There was no immediate confirmation of such an investigation from GAO officials in Washington.

MAT awarded the $3.1 million contract for the buses to A.M. General earlier this year after unsuccessfully trying to get UMTA approval of a higher bid submitted by the Flexible Co., another bus manufacturer. MAT had contended that Flexible offered a better bus.

Bicentennial Unit Wants Law Changed

Bellevue (AP) — The Nebraska American Revolution Bicentennial Commission has voted to seek a new law to permit it to use royalties from commemorative items to fund historic projects.

The commission's related association, established to sell such items, also is seeking an attorney general's opinion on whether $25,381 ordered turned over to the state doesn't rightfully belong to the commission.

M.S. Hevelone, a Beatrice attorney, and Mrs. Kay Blackstone of Red Cloud were critical of state rulings and resulting "insinuations" by some members of the news media.

The association members said the Nebraska Centennial's nonprofit association made enough money to turn back $140,000 to the state.

An amendment to a legislative bill, introduced by former State Sen. Wayne Ziebarth of Wilcox, caused the fund ownership controversy.

"It was not the intent of the Ziebarth amendment to keep the commission's associaton from selling commemorative items," commission member Marvin Kivett said.

But Hevelone said the attorney general's office, after a state audit asked by the commission, had decided otherwise.

"It ordered the $25,318 received primarily from royalties from the Franklin Mint on the sale of its Nebraska medallion coin, and other royalties turned over to the state's general fund.

"The ruling, in fact, put the state out of the commemorative item business or even the sale or the use of the official Bicentennial logo at any time," said Don Searcy, the commission's executive director.

The state auditor is seeking an additional $7,000 his office says the association owes the state.

Mrs. Blackstone said Asst. Atty. Gen. Marilyn Hutchinson has intimated the state may sue for the additional money.

Hevelone said the $7,000 is in the inventory of commemorative items the commission now is banned by the state from selling.

"We purposely made our budget request low on the basis of income from sales of medallions and other items," Hevelone said. "Our object was to save taxpayers' money."

Hecelone said, "I strenuously object to the position of some members of the media inferring with slurring remarks that there has been something going on that ought not to be in the association."

Mrs. Blackstone said, "I am disgusted by the way we have been treated by the press It has about ruined the entire Bicentennial program."

Oral Arguments Set On Phone Service Request

The Nebraska Public Service Commission has scheduled oral arguments on a request by 360 Macy-Winnebago residents for reconsideration of their application seeking improved telephone service.

The oral arguments will be held 2 30 p.m , Oct. 14 in the commission hearing room.

Last week, the commission dismissed the application in a 4-1 vote

Bennet Entry Sheep Carcass Winner

Omaha — A crossbred wether that brought Ivan Bruss of Bennet a purple ribbon in the live show produced a champion carcass to net Bruss $100 in the premium money for topping 644 other entries in the Ak-Sar-Ben 4-H sheep carcass contest.

Bringint its owner $50 in premium money as the reserve champion was a Hampshire wether shown by Russell Tooker of Ralston.

A pair of look-alike heifers shown by two northeast Nebraska 4-H youths were named champion and reserve champion market heifers, both Charolais-Hereford crossbreds.

Jim Todd, 17, of Brunswick exhibited the champion, while Johnnie Johnson of Craig took reserve champion honors.

Ann Henderson, 17, of Alliance was named champion beef showman, receiving a gold medal. She ranked fifth in this category at the 1974 Ak-Sar-Ben show.

Hall County 4-H exhibitors were named co-champions for market beef herdsmanship. The Hall County triumph broke a nine-year string of wins by Colfax County.

ABP Attorneys Asked Off Case

Omaha (AP) — The U S. Attorney's office Thursday asked that an Omaha law firm be disqualified from defending American Beef Packers, Inc , against fraud charges

The government said attorneys for the firm have been too close to individuals who are defendants in the case, namely ABP President Frank West and his chief aide, Robert E Lee, to represent the meat packing firms with "undivided fidelity "

In papers filed in U S District Court, Asst U S Atty Michael Schleich said the firm of Fitzgerald, Brown, Leahy, Strom Schorr and Barmettler suffers from a conflict between past representation of ABP officials and present representation of the corporation

The government s prime argument was that the attorneys would be hard pressed to separate "privileged" information obtained through the lawyer-client relationship with West and Lee and nonprivileged information which could be brought out at trial next month

The petition was filed after the firm refused to remove itself voluntarily

In his papers, Schleich stressed that he was not accusing the law firm of any impropriety, but rather was concerned that there might be an appearance of conflict and that attorneys would be hampered in their work by their possession of confidential information

West Lee American Beef and its subsidiary, Beefland International of Council Bluffs Iowa, are charged with 104 counts of fraud in connection with the companies' Jan. 7 Chapter 11 bankruptcy

Douglas Reno and David Pavel of the law firm have worked on the bankruptcy matter since its filing and another of the firm's attorneys, Lyle Strom, has appeared twice in matters pertaining to the criminal charges,

The law firm, if it defends the companies but not the individuals, "will have a duty as defense counsel to impeach, contradict, discredit and impugn the veracity of their former witness-clients when these witnesses testify against their present clients and other defendants

"In cross-examining witness-clients the particular defense counsel will be in the possession of confidences and possibly incriminating disclosures from the witness-client," the brief said

"They will be unable to represent their defendant-client with undivided fidelity," the brief said

The government also said one of the firm s attorneys, Pavel, was named as an unindicted co-conspirator in the indictment

Pavel will be called as a witness for the government, the brief said, and, if the law firm is allowed to remain in the case, ' the defense attorney will be in the position of having to disclose confidential communications between Mr Pavel and Mr Lee and Mr West in order to fully and adequately cross-examine Mr Pavel

ABP Attorneys Asked Off Case

Omaha (AP) — The U.S. Attorney's office Thursday asked that an Omaha law firm be disqualified from defending American Beef Packers, Inc., against fraud charges.

The government said attorneys for the firm have been too close to individuals who are defendants in the case, namely ABP President Frank West and his chief aide, Robert E. Lee, to represent the meat packing firms with "undivided fidelity."

In papers filed in U.S. District Court, Asst. U.S. Atty. Michael Schleich said the firm of Fitzgerald, Brown, Leahy, Strom, Schorr and Barmettler suffers from a conflict between past representation of ABP officials and present representation of the corporation.

The government's prime argument was that the attorneys would be hard pressed to separate "privileged" information obtained through the lawyer-client relationship with West and Lee and nonprivileged information which could be brought out at trial next month.

The petition was filed after the firm refused to remove itself voluntarily.

In his papers, Schleich stressed that he was not accusing the law firm of any impropriety, but rather was concerned that there might be an "appearance" of conflict and that attorneys would be hampered in their work by their possession of "confidential" information.

West, Lee, American Beef and its subsidiary, Beefland International of Council Bluffs, Iowa, are charged with 104 counts of fraud in connection with the companies' Jan. 7 Chapter 11 bankruptcy.

Douglas Reno and David Pavel of the law firm have worked on the bankruptcy matter since its filing and another of the firm's attorneys, Lyle Strom, has appeared twice in matters pertaining to the criminal charges,

The law firm, if it defends the companies but not the individuals, "will have a duty as defense counsel to impeach, contradict, discredit and impugn the veracity of their former witness-clients when these witnesses testify against their present clients and other defendants.

"In cross-examining witness-clients, the particular defense counsel will be in the possession of confidences and possibly incriminating disclosures from the witness-client," the brief said.

"They will be unable to represent their defendant-client with undivided fidelity," the brief said.

The government also said one of the firm's attorneys, Pavel, was named as an unindicted co-conspirator in the indictment.

Pavel will be called as a witness for the government, the brief said, and, if the law firm is allowed to remain in the case, "the defense attorney will be in the position of having to disclose confidential communications between Mr. Pavel and Mr. Lee and Mr. West in order to fully and adequately cross-examine Mr. Pavel."

Hearing On NU Unionization Draws Differing Testimony

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

The judge told the University of Nebraska Regents attorney, "You have an uphill battle" seeking a single, centralized collective bargaining unit for the NU system

An NU Lincoln campus professor testified any faculty union "would be a disaster" if applied system-wide to all three campuses, would "disrupt" and possibly threaten each's autonomy and diversity

But a top NU system administrator stated there's no "generic distinction" among the UNL, Omaha and Medical Center campuses He explained "while there are clear differences" in campus roles, "they are all components ' of an integrated university and contribute to its overall mission

Hearing Begins

So began the Nebraska State Court of Industrial Relations hearing Thursday to determine the appropriateness of a bargaining unit proposed by the UNL Chapter of the American Association of University Professors.

AAUP petitioned the court requesting a UNL faculty election to decide the question of unionizing, and if granted, seeking recognition as the campus bargaining agent

Judge Benjamin Wall of Omaha told regents attorney Bruce Wright that he finds Michigan cases including a State Supreme Court decision "quite persuasive," in ruling there that a single campus collective bargaining unit is appropriate in a multi-campus system There is no such precedent in Nebraska, but the UNL question is identical

UNL Prof Wallace C Peterson, economics department chairman, said NU system collective bargaining "would disrupt the long-standing, established practice" of faculty participation in local campus governance

Differing Emphasis

Steven B Sample, NU executive vice president for academic affairs, testified that UNL, UNO and UNMC all engage in teaching, research and extension with differing emphasis

Decisions for one campus, particularly on funding, affect the other two, Sample said, and ultimately the state service mission of all three rests with regents and the NU president — not the campuses

In earlier testimony, Peterson said preserving campus distinctions — not uniformity — is in the best interests of the state There is "more at issue" than faculty pay he said, citing effective faculty participation in campus operations as "fundamental"

Judge Wall granted petitions for court participation by NU Colleges of Law and Dentistry representatives That status allows their faculties to seek exclusion from any bargaining unit the court might rule appropriate.

The two colleges favor separate units — common in other universities' bargaining arrangements — recognizing their unique professional character, community relationships, separate accreditation and similar policy and control matters

Patrick W Healey, attorney for the UNL chapter of AAUP, said the faculty election should be called for the proposed unit to represent all full-time UNL faculty, excluding administrators with rank higher than department chairman

In his opening statement for regents, Wright objected to a "proliferation of bargaining units" at UNL

While NU campuses "do in fact enjoy some degree of autonomy, at the pleasure of the board (of regents)," Wright said the "overriding fact is that in all essential matters, the University of Nebraska is a centralized, uniform operation"

'Absolute Authority'

And "absolute authority is retained and exercised" by the central administration and regents, he declared There's "no authority or real powers" in employment relationships below that level

Including Prof Peterson, Healey called eight witnesses, all long-time UNL professors who have had AAUP and campus leadership roles

The professors stressed the concept of "collegiality," or a "community of interest" by scholars working harmoniously on each campus, but not systemwide

Chemistry Prof John J Scholz said AAUP, the largest professional organization of academics with 77,000 U S members, stresses strengthening academic freedom, tenure, due process, peer judgment, as well as faculty members' economic well being

English Prof John W Robinson, president of the 200-member AAUP chapter at UNL, said faculty increasingly believe their informal, advisory role in campus governance is "not now as effective as it once was"

Collective bargaining is "not something we dreamed up last May" when regents temporarily suspended tenure-granting, Robinson said He and chemical engineering Prof Richard E Gilbert, Faculty Senate immediate past president, testified the move began three years ago

Now, said Prof Donald C Haack, engineering mechanics, uniform representation would put each campus at "considerable disadvantage," because — opposite Sample's testimony — decisions made on one campus have virtually no concert with those made on another

Differences Seen

AAUP chapter secretary James C Kimberly, sociology professor, and Prof Max Schuster, horticulture researcher, testified UNL is categorized and accredited differently from UNO, for example

NU System Personnel Director Richard B Noonan said most benefits apply uniformly to all staff now But he acknowledged promotion, tenure, hiring and so on differ by campus

Education Prof. Erwin Goldenstein said "meaningful decisions" in campus operation, governance and bargaining "can only be made at the local level"

The hearing will continue Friday A court official said a ruling may be expected in two to four weeks

Malone Center Endorses Board

The Malone Community Center board of directors has endorsed the compromise proposal for a police review board prepared by City Council members Max Denney and John Robinson A board representative will testify for the proposal at the public hearing on the matter

At its meeting the board was also informed that the agency has received a $3 000 bequest from the estate of Mrs Bereniece McGreer No action was taken on how to use the fund

Ford's Omaha Visit Schedule Revealed

Omaha (AP) — President Ford, who last visited Nebraska one year ago, will return to the city of his birth next Wednesday, the first such visit to Omaha since he became President more than 13 months ago.

The White House Conference Office here officially confirmed Thursday that Ford will travel to Omaha to participate in the Nebraska-Iowa White House Conference on Domestic and Economic Affairs.

The economy and energy head the list of items to be discussed during the day-long session.

Ford last visited Nebraska last autumn, making a brief stop in Lincoln to stump for Republican candidates. His last visit to Omaha was in February 1974, when he was vice president.

Although local sponsors of the conference said earlier this month that Ford would attend the conference, White House confirmation was long in coming.

In light of the two recent attempts on his life, and despite Ford's proclamation that he would not be held captive in the White House, there had been questions as to whether he would curtail his travel schedules.

However, the suspense was lifted Thursday, when officials announced that Ford is scheduled to address the conference at 4:30 p.m.

Conference participants will include Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz, Dr. David Mathews, secretary of health, education and welfare, Federal Energy Administrator Frank Zarb, William T. Coleman, secretary of transportation, Russell Train, administrator of the Federal Environmental Protection Agency, and L. William Seidman, Ford's assistant for economic affairs.

The conference schedule, as released by the conference office, calls for the session to begin at 8:30 a.m.

Omaha Mayor Edward Zorinsky, John C. Kenefick, president of the Greater Omaha Chamber of Commerce, and William J. Baroody Jr., the President's assistant for public liaison, will deliver introductory remarks.

Butz will give a 15-minute presentation beginning at 9 a.m., followed by a 45-minute question-and-answer period.

Train is slated to make a 10-minute presentation at 10:10 a.m., again followed by a 45-minute question-and-answer session.

Train will be followed by Coleman, who will make a 15-minute presentation at 11:10 a.m., again followed by a question-and-answer period.

Conference participatns will then break for a luncheon and reception.

At 1:45 p.m., Seidman will begin a 30-minute stint, fielding conference participant questions.

Mathews will take over a 2:15, giving a 15-minute presentation, then opening the floor to questions.

Zarb will be the last administration representative before the President, and will give his 15-minute presentation at 3:30 p.m. Again, a 45-minute question-and-answer period will follow.

Ford will address the conference at 4:30 p.m. and adjournment is scheduled at 5:30 p.m.

The Omaha conference will be the 10th nationwide series this year. In all, 20 are slated. Ford has attended all previous conferences.

Coverage Displeases Schools Supt. Prasch

Lincoln Schools Supt. John Prasch said Thursday two recent stories in The Star have created a false impression about budget information given to state auditors by the school district.

"The original news story (Sept. 24), concerning questions from State Auditor Ray A.C. Johnson" about how Assoc. Supt. for Business Robert Den Hartog's staff completed budget forms, "created the impression that the tax levy could have been lower, had the form been completed correctly," Prasch said.

"This is erroneous," he said.

The stories, however, did not state that the schools' mill levy could have been lower if the figures were reported correctly.

The stories did say that unless other revenue sources dropped or costs increased beyond estimates, the unanticipated increase in school land income would have inflated the school district's unspent balance beyond expectations.

School lands income exceeded estimates for the school year ending Aug. 31 by $587,000.

Conceivably, the 1975-76 mill levy then would be based on an unrealistically low unspent cash balance and could be higher than necessary.

Den Hartog said the increase in school land income was offset by a reduction in special education payments from the state.

Prasch said, "The current budget carries a $1.2 million estimated receipt for 1975-76 from (the school lands) fund and is not understated with respect to last year's receipt," Prasch said.

Den Hartog's 1974-75 school land income figure was an estimate. Johnson, however, had directed the district to supply actual revenue figures for 10 months and estimates for July and August, 1975.

"The follow-up story (Sept. 25), which indicated instructions were not followed (by Den Hartog) in completing the form did not adequately correct the original false impression," Prasch said.

Discrimination Hearing Called

The Nebraska Equal Opportunity Commission has ordered a public hearing on a discrimination complaint filed by a Scottsbluff man.

Eduardo Lopez has complained that the Scottsbluff School District discriminated against him in not promoting him to the position of foreman on the district's janitorial staff. The hearing will be Oct. 30 in Scottsbluff.

In other business, the commission also elected Dan Ferrevra of Scottsbluff as its chairman for the coming year.

Florists Slate Annual Meeting

The Nebraska Florists Society will hold its annual meeting Sunday from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. at the Airport Ramada Inn.

The meeting will feature a design contest by members of the Nebraska Academy of Floral Designers. A display of these arrangements will be open to the public from 11:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the motel lobby. Women will receive free flowers.

Ford's Omaha Visit Schedule Revealed

Omaha (AP) — President Ford, who last visited Nebraska one year ago, will return to the city of his birth next Wednesday, the first such visit to Omaha since he became President more than 13 months ago.

The White House Conference Office here officially confirmed Thursday that Ford will travel to Omaha to participate in the Nebraska-Iowa White House Conference on Domestic and Economic Affairs.

The economy and energy head the list of items to be discussed during the day-long session.

Ford last visited Nebraska last autumn, making a brief stop in Lincoln to stump for Republican candidates. His last visit to Omaha was in February 1974, when he was vice president.

Although local sponsors of the conference said earlier this month that Ford would attend the conference, White House confirmation was long in coming.

In light of the two recent attempts on his life, and despite Ford's proclamation that he would not be held captive in the White House, there had been questions as to whether he would curtail his travel schedules.

However, the suspense was lifted Thursday, when officials announced that Ford is scheduled to address the conference at 4:30 p.m.

Conference participants will include Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz, Dr. David Mathews, secretary of health, education and welfare, Federal Energy Administrator Frank Zarb, William T. Coleman, secretary of transportation, Russell Train, administrator of the Federal Environmental Protection Agency, and L. William Seidman, Ford's assistant for economic affairs.

The conference schedule, as released by the conference office, calls for the session to begin at 8:30 a.m.

Omaha Mayor Edward Zorinsky, John C. Kenefick, president of the Greater Omaha Chamber of Commerce, and William J. Baroody Jr., the President's assistant for public liaison, will deliver introductory remarks.

Butz will give a 15-minute presentation beginning at 9 a.m., followed by a 45-minute question-and-answer period.

Train is slated to make a 10-minute presentation at 10:10 a.m., again followed by a 45-minute question-and-answer session.

Train will be followed by Coleman, who will make a 15-minute presentation at 11:10 a.m., again followed by a question-and-answer period.

Conference participatns will then break for a luncheon and reception.

At 1:45 p.m., Seidman will begin a 30-minute stint, fielding conference participant questions.

Mathews will take over a 2:15, giving a 15-minute presentation, then opening the floor to questions.

Zarb will be the last administration representative before the President, and will give his 15-minute presentation at 3:30 p.m. Again, a 45-minute question-and-answer period will follow.

Ford will address the conference at 4:30 p.m. and adjournment is scheduled at 5:30 p.m.

POSTCARD

by Stan Delaplane

San Francisco — On these breezy days of autumn, a thousand sailboats spread their canvas on the blue bay. It's a grand sight. Best enjoyed looking at it over a can of beer behind floor-to-ceiling glass.

I'm not much on going places if I have to work at it. For every sailor on the bay, there's one tied up while the owner works all weekend polishing it. A boat takes as much care as a baby.

I said to the children: "Fetch me a beer. I've swallowed the anchor."

Not much rest on weekends. We have a school age child and she has school age friends. When she was one year, I thought she would never talk.

I said: "Come child. Kitchykoo. Say da-day."

She only gave me a cold look. She would not sing. Would not rat on her pals.

That went along until she was one plus something. And now I can't shut her up.

I said: "Blast it! Get off the phone! You've been on it for an hour!"

She said: "I will, I will. It's about my homework!"

(You get the idea? I'm making it hard for her to be educated.)

Our scatter looks over a clutch of small boats tied to the docks of Snug Harbor.

Every weekend several are manned by men in yachting clothes. Blue denim sneakers. Windbreakers with built-in flotation stuffing. Admirals' caps reflect the golden sun.

First thing they do is sit down and drink a beer.

Then it's off to the bounding main? No chance, mate. They get down on their hands and knees and they sandpaper the deck! I should go out and spend umpty thousand dollars on something to sandpaper.

I've been through the phone business before. The only solution is to put in their very own phone. Seems extravagant, but what you lose on the merry-go-round you make up for on the swings.

I did this with the older daughter. Put in a phone. Put in about a hundred feet of cord — they like to take the phone into the shower with them.

The phone was always in use. And when her pals couldn't get her on her phone, they dialed mine.

"Would you tell her to call Susie. It's urgent!"

The extra phone took off some of the wear and tear of the talkative weekends. It's not fool proof. There were times when she had both phones at her ears. Taking incoming calls on one, dialing out on the other.

"Wait, wait. I'm talking to her now. I'll ask her."

Lively days for Ma. Bell. I could see we were getting our money's worth at any rate.

Some of the weekend sailors bring their wives to help sandpaper. And some bright fellows invite their friends.

"I thought we'd go out on the boat this weekend. Why don't you come along?"

When the friend arrives, he finds "going out on the boat" doesn't mean the boat is going anywhere. He winds up with sandpaper.

The moppet said: "I've got to phone her. She's my best friend!"

I said: "A messmate before a shipmate and a shipmate before a stranger. Fetch aft the cooking sherry."

Every weekend several are manned by men in yachting clothes. Blue denim sneakers. Windbreakers with built-in flotation stuffing. Admirals' caps reflect the golden sun.

First thing they do is sit down and drink a beer.

Then it's off to the bounding main? No chance, mate. They get down on their hands and knees and they sandpaper the deck! I should go out and spend umpty thousand dollars on something to sandpaper.

I've been through the phone business before. The only solution is to put in their very own phone. Seems extravagant, but what you lose on the merry-go-round you make up for on the swings.

I did this with the older daughter. Put in a phone. Put in about a hundred feet of cord — they like to take the phone into the shower with them.

The phone was always in use. And when her pals couldn't get her on her phone, they dialed mine.

"Would you tell her to call Susie. It's urgent!"

The extra phone took off some of the wear and tear of the talkative weekends. It's not fool proof. There were times when she had both phones at her ears. Taking incoming calls on one, dialing out on the other.

"Wait, wait. I'm talking to her now. I'll ask her."

Lively days for Ma. Bell. I could see we were getting our money's worth at any rate.

Some of the weekend sailors bring their wives to help sandpaper. And some bright fellows invite their friends.

"I thought we'd go out on the boat this weekend. Why don't you come along?"

When the friend arrives, he finds "going out on the boat" doesn't mean the boat is going anywhere. He winds up with sandpaper.

The moppet said: "I've got to phone her. She's my best friend!"

United Way Announces 26% Of Goal

Several firms and many volunteers were recognized Thursday at the first report meeting for the 1976 Lincoln-Lancaster United Way.

Master of ceremonies Bill Edgecomb announced that 26% — $390,717 — of the organization's goal of $1,498,100 has been raised this year. Edgecomb said the drive is about two weeks ahead of schedule and above last year's total at this time.

Gene Ward, campaign chairman from the Lincoln Board of Realtors, said realtor donations have increased 42.4% this year. Employes at Midwest Life Nebraska, First Federal Lincoln, Farmers Mutual Insurance, General Telephone, Control Data and Pegler & Co. were cited for increased contributions.

Preliminary reports from the State Employe campaign indicated many of the departments are exceeding their goals. The 14 loaned executives to the United Way were recognized for volunteer effort in working with other employe drives in Lincoln.

The next official report meeting will be Oct. 9.

Iowa Lawmen Play Cowboys

Des Moines (UPI) — Three Iowa highway patrol troopers played cowboy for about four hours, keeping three horses to between 30 and 150 feet of Interstate 35-80.

The troopers said they used their cars to keep the horses "corraled" until their owner could be located.

Patrolman Bob Alles said he spotted the two Arabian and one American saddle horses.

Collective Pay Bargaining Asked For State Employes

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

Organized labor Thursday asked the Unicameral's Labor Committee for legislation empowering state employes to collectively bargain for their salary levels.

Such authority was included in a 1972 law, but has been effectively negated by other state statutes, including the state pay plan.

Even with the power to bargain for wages, the level of pay would still be subject to the Legislature's approval through the appropriations process.

Although the 1969 public employes negotiation act and its 1972 amendments authorized full collective bargaining procedures, conflicts with othe state laws have prevented "full negotiations," labor spokesman Donald Elrod told the senators.

"Many individual statutes close off bargaining for state employes," he noted. Elrod represents the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employes (AFSCME).

"We need to be able to bargain for all aspects of a contract."

That's what labor can do in the private sector, Elrod noted, and in its negotiations with most city or county government units.

But state laws provide a "stumbling block" for full negotiations for state employes, he said.

Variety Of Subjects

Among them are statutes governing salaries, sick leave, vacation benefits, life and health insurance benefits, retirement benefits, overtime and holidays.

AFSCME currently represents employes in the Department of Public Institutions and the Department of Labor for collective bargaining purposes.

Roger Schulz, executive secretary of the Nebraska Association of Public Employes (NAPE), said state employes cannot bargain for either wages or hours of employment, leaving them with "hardly anything to bargain for," except certain limited conditions of employment.

The Legislature, he said, should "decide (whether) you want collective bargaining" and then define the scope of such an authorization.

State AFL-CIO President William Brennan contested that suggestion.

"The Legislature set its course on government employe bargaining" in 1969, he said, and should not change it.

A review of that policy, as suggested by Schulz, could take "10 to 12 years" to accomplish, Brennan said.

John Russell, labor relations coordinator for the State Personnel Department, said the state is now "struggling between two worlds" in its negotiations with employes.

On the one hand is the negotiations law, and on the other are state laws defining conditions of employment and providing for a uniform pay and benefit system.

Work Classification

If the Legislature believes that economic issues should be negotiated, he said, he hopes it would change the bargaining units from departments or agencies of government to work classification units.

All clerical workers in state government could then negotiate a contract, as could administrative workers or blue collar workers.

With departmental bargaining units, he noted, workers doing the same jobs could be paid widely differing salaries in various departments.

'Different Benefits'

"Each department could have a completely different set of benefits," he said, and that would "blow the uniformity" desired by the Legislature.

Sen. John Murphy of South Sioux City wondered if employes consider the strike a legitimate weapon.

Elrod said AFSCME intends to abide by state law, which prohibits a strike by government employes.

"The only people talking strike in this state are the press and some public officials," Brennan said.

Actually, Elrod said, access to the Court of Industrial Relations offers public employes an avenue other than the strike to travel if negotiations reach an impasse.

Unemployment Compensation Said Used As Form Of Welfare

By United Press International

Despite a claim by the state labor commissioner that unemployment compensation abuses are far from the rule, an Omaha businessmen told a legislative committee Thursday "We're using it as a form of welfare."

R. C. Johnson of the Paxton-Mitchell Co., of Omaha, a foundry, told the Unicameral's Labor Committee, "I don't disagree with the idea of unemployment. There should be something to get people back on their feet."

But, Johnson said, the way the law is apparently set up, or at least the way the State Labor Department administers it, unemployment compensation is "almost an immoral law."

In recent weeks, national charges of unemployment abuse have been made and in response State Labor Commissioner Gerald Chizek said they do not exist in Nebraska.

Johnson disagreed and provided the Labor Committee with information on former foundry employes which showed that of 41 persons who quit their job voluntarily, one had a one-week waiting period before being eligible for unemployment, one had a one and a half week wait, 34 waited two weeks and five waited three weeks.

In terms of specific cases, he cited one where a man went home for lunch and "I never saw him again" and in fact didn't hear about him until he received unemployment compensation notice from the state.

"He didn't even have the decency to tell us he was quitting and yet he only had a two-week waiting period," Johnson said, adding that was only one week more than those who had been laid off by his company for lack of work.

He also cited a case of a woman who worked during the school year and "managed to get laid off for the summer" so she could collect unemployment.

Johnson recommended a crackdown on compensation in general suggesting that investigations be more extensive before compensation is granted and that more effort is aimed at making sure those who get unemployment are really out seeking a job.

He also suggested that those who get unemployment be made to open their finances to public scrutiny.

"Unemployment isn't a right," Johnson said. "It seems to be a public charity for the down and outers and they should be made to open up their books to see if he is entitled."

Under committee questioning, Johnson admitted to the senators that for those who work for his firm "it's a tough job" and the turnover rate is over 50%.

Collective Pay Bargaining Asked For State Employes

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

Organized labor Thursday asked the Unicameral's Labor Committee for legislation empowering state employes to collectively bargain for their salary levels.

Such authority was included in a 1972 law, but has been effectively negated by other state statutes, including the state pay plan.

Even with the power to bargain for wages, the level of pay would still be subject to the Legislature's approval through the appropriations process.

Although the 1969 public employes negotiation act and its 1972 amendments authorized full collective bargaining procedures, conflicts with othe state laws have prevented "full negotiations," labor spokesman Donald Elrod told the senators.

"Many individual statutes close off bargaining for state employes," he noted. Elrod represents the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employes (AFSCME).

"We need to be able to bargain for all aspects of a contract."

That's what labor can do in the private sector, Elrod noted, and in its negotiations with most city or county government units.

But state laws provide a "stumbling block" for full negotiations for state employes, he said.

Variety Of Subjects

Among them are statutes governing salaries, sick leave, vacation benefits, life and health insurance benefits, retirement benefits, overtime and holidays.

AFSCME currently represents employes in the Department of Public Institutions and the Department of Labor for collective bargaining purposes.

Roger Schulz, executive secretary of the Nebraska Association of Public Employes (NAPE), said state employes cannot bargain for either wages or hours of employment, leaving them with "hardly anything to bargain for," except certain limited conditions of employment.

The Legislature, he said, should "decide (whether) you want collective bargaining" and then define the scope of such an authorization.

State AFL-CIO President William Brennan contested that suggestion.

"The Legislature set its course on government employe bargaining" in 1969, he said, and should not change it.

A review of that policy, as suggested by Schulz, could take "10 to 12 years" to accomplish, Brennan said.

John Russell, labor relations coordinator for the State Personnel Department, said the state is now "struggling between two worlds" in its negotiations with employes.

On the one hand is the negotiations law, and on the other are state laws defining conditions of employment and providing for a uniform pay and benefit system.

Work Classification

If the Legislature believes that economic issues should be negotiated, he said, he hopes it would change the bargaining units from departments or agencies of government to work classification units.

All clerical workers in state government could then negotiate a contract, as could administrative workers or blue collar workers.

With departmental bargaining units, he noted, workers doing the same jobs could be paid widely differing salaries in various departments.

'Different Benefits'

"Each department could have a completely different set of benefits," he said, and that would "blow the uniformity" desired by the Legislature.

Sen. John Murphy of South Sioux City wondered if employes consider the strike a legitimate weapon.

Elrod said AFSCME intends to abide by state law, which prohibits a strike by government employes.

"The only people talking strike in this state are the press and some public officials," Brennan said.

Actually, Elrod said, access to the Court of Industrial Relations offers public employes an avenue other than the strike to travel if negotiations reach an impasse.

Unemployment Compensation Said Used As Form Of Welfare

By United Press International

Despite a claim by the state labor commissioner that unemployment compensation abuses are far from the rule, an Omaha businessmen told a legislative committee Thursday "We're using it as a form of welfare."

R. C. Johnson of the Paxton-Mitchell Co., of Omaha, a foundry, told the Unicameral's Labor Committee, "I don't disagree with the idea of unemployment. There should be something to get people back on their feet."

But, Johnson said, the way the law is apparently set up, or at least the way the State Labor Department administers it, unemployment compensation is "almost an immoral law."

In recent weeks, national charges of unemployment abuse have been made and in response State Labor Commissioner Gerald Chizek said they do not exist in Nebraska.

Johnson disagreed and provided the Labor Committee with information on former foundry employes which showed that of 41 persons who quit their job voluntarily, one had a one-week waiting period before being eligible for unemployment, one had a one and a half week wait, 34 waited two weeks and five waited three weeks.

In terms of specific cases, he cited one where a man went home for lunch and "I never saw him again" and in fact didn't hear about him until he received unemployment compensation notice from the state.

"He didn't even have the decency to tell us he was quitting and yet he only had a two-week waiting period," Johnson said, adding that was only one week more than those who had been laid off by his company for lack of work.

He also cited a case of a woman who worked during the school year and "managed to get laid off for the summer" so she could collect unemployment.

Johnson recommended a crackdown on compensation in general suggesting that investigations be more extensive before compensation is granted and that more effort is aimed at making sure those who get unemployment are really out seeking a job.

He also suggested that those who get unemployment be made to open their finances to public scrutiny.

"Unemployment isn't a right," Johnson said. "It seems to be a public charity for the down and outers and they should be made to open up their books to see if he is entitled."

Under committee questioning, Johnson admitted to the senators that for those who work for his firm "it's a tough job" and the turnover rate is over 50%.

New Packaging Combines Advantages Of Frozen, Canned Foods

(EDITOR'S NOTE: It's not frozen food and it's not canned, but according to its packagers it has advantages of both. Daniel C. Brown is based in the Chicago bureau of McGraw-Hill World News.)

By DANIEL C. BROWN

Chicago — Prepared roast beef au jus, or shrimp creole in five to ten minutes? Yes, it's technically possible now, and could be available for every grocery shopper within two years, say Allyn C. Buric, manager of FMC Corp.'s convenience food program in San Jose, Calif.

The key to the fast preparation is that the entree will not be frozen, but will be formulated in much the same way canned food is now, says Buric. In most cases, the tray will be placed in the oven for a short time to bring it from room temperature to serving temperature.

A special box, made of cardboard on the outside and suitably lined, will contain the food, which will be heated during processing inside the box to deactivate micro-organisms. The U.S. Food and Drug Administration is working on approval of a liner for the package. Following that, the container will be test marketed in selected supermarkets by about the middle of next year, Buric predicts.

Expensive gourmet items have been sold in western Europe using the new package. Buric says sales of the gourmet items have tapered off there, mostly because of the recession in Europe, but pasta-based entrees like lasagna and ravioli have become popular because of their lower price, about $1.50.

The new package has been used by the Nestle Company's divisions in Sweden and Germany, and by the Knorr Co. in Switzerland. In the U.S., the package will be used for hard-to-prepare main courses made of fish, meat, poultry, pasta and the like; the food will be aimed at higher income persons and will compete in price with frozen food.

FMC Corp. in this country is working on the production line of machinery that will package the food (FMC stands for Food Machinery Corp., although the company no longer uses those words). Buric says other companies are "seriously interested" in doing the processing, and in providing the packaging materials.

Cost of the packaging, though it is more costly than frozen containers, will be reduced by the fact that refrigeration is not needed in distributing or storing the food, says Buric. The new tray will cost roughly double what a frozen tray costs, but Buric hopes that difference can be regained in lower storage costs during distribution. How much consumers will pay for the products is a question that only test-marketing can fully answer, Buric says.

Energy savings to grocery stores facing higher utility bills these days will play an important part in putting the new package on the shelf also, says Buric. "Supermarket chains that I've talked to, on the West Coast, have been putting in somewhere in the area of 700 lineal feet of frozen storage to accommodate all these new products coming out, and they say they've reached their limit," Buric says.

ALL SMILES . . . Brandi reacts like any child to praise.

Retarded Girl Is Trained At Home

By GRACIA McANDREW
Star Staff Writer

Brandi Havel was born in March 1973.

Brandi is blonde and blue-eyed. She's a stocky little girl.

Now 2½ years old, she wobbles like any youngster who has just learned there is a better method of getting around on all fours.

Her face is drawn into a wrinkled little smile when she is excited or has received praise, but all smiles crumble and she breaks into tears when she is hurt or unhappy.

Brandi also is a victim of Down Syndrome. Down Syndrome — often called Mongolism — is a type of mental retardation, characterized by changes in the facial features such as a wide, flattened forehead and narrow, slanting eyes.

"At first, you don't want to accept the fact that your child is mentally retarded," said Mrs. Jack Havel. "When we brought her home she was just limp."

In fact, "I don't know where we'd be," Mrs. Havel said, if it weren't for the services provided by the Region V Mental Retardation In-Home Training program. For young mentally retarded children and their parents, the program is offered locally through the Lancaster Office of Mental Retardation (LOMR).

"When Brandi was first born, nobody told us anything," Mrs. Havel said. "Our doctor told us there was Beatrice (the Beatrice State Home For Children), that's all."

It was only when Mrs. Havel took Brandi to the Well Child Clinic that she learned about the In-Home Training program.

Enrolled At 3 Months

At the age of three months, Brandi was enrolled in the program and assigned a caseworker and trainer.

Although the success of the training program hinges on the expertise provided by the trainer, parents too are important factors in the child's advancement, she said.

"I can't accomplish much by coming in once a week, so I show Shirley (Mrs. Havel) what to do and give her a written program" to help her, said Brandi's teacher, Laurie Haszard.

"With gross motor skills we are working with large muscle development and basic movement, such as rolling, sitting, crawling and walking," she said. "We show parents how to facilitate these activities and how to make the kids do them."

Development of pre-speech skills emphasizes motor imitation, she said. For example, by teaching Brandi to imitate her mother when Mrs. Havel claps her hands and says "clap," Brandi should soon be able to respond to the verbal command alone.

Fine motor skill exercises, such as working puzzles and putting balls on spindles, help to develop the child's understanding, hand-eye coordination and finger dexterity, Mrs. Haszard said.

"Doing these things before the child is two years old gives them a head start," said Mrs. Swanson. "The age Brandi started was the best time for motor development.

"If she had started at a later stage, it would have been more difficult."

"The children will go through all of the stages eventually anyway, but we can speed them up by stimulation," added Mrs. Haszard.

Mostly Under 2

Available to families of mentally retarded children at no charge, the program provides physical and mental stimulation in the home primarily to children under the age of two years.

"There is no bottom age limit," Mrs. Haszard said. "We will work with children from birth to the age of two."

In most cases, "Kids who are two years old enter the LOMR day care program," she said.

However, in situations similar to Brandi's, full-time day care may be impossible due to other medical problems. Consequently these children may attend the LOMR day care center on a part-time basis, in addition to receiving in-home training beyond the age of two.

"There have been a few periods when Brandi's therapy has been interrupted by surgery," Ms. Swanson said. "But because the training program was provided in the home, she could get back into it right away."

ALL SMILES . . . Brandi reacts like any child to praise.

Retarded Girl Is Trained At Home

By GRACIA McANDREW
Star Staff Writer

Brandi Havel was born in March 1973.

Brandi is blonde and blue-eyed. She's a stocky little girl.

Now 2½ years old, she wobbles like any youngster who has just learned there is a better method of getting around on all fours.

Her face is drawn into a wrinkled little smile when she is excited or has received praise, but all smiles crumble and she breaks into tears when she is hurt or unhappy.

Brandi also is a victim of Down Syndrome. Down Syndrome — often called Mongolism — is a type of mental retardation, characterized by changes in the facial features such as a wide, flattened forehead and narrow, slanting eyes.

"At first, you don't want to accept the fact that your child is mentally retarded," said Mrs. Jack Havel. "When we brought her home she was just limp."

In fact, "I don't know where we'd be," Mrs. Havel said, if it weren't for the services provided by the Region V Mental Retardation In-Home Training program. For young mentally retarded children and their parents, the program is offered locally through the Lancaster Office of Mental Retardation (LOMR).

"When Brandi was first born, nobody told us anything," Mrs. Havel said. "Our doctor told us there was Beatrice (the Beatrice State Home For Children), that's all."

It was only when Mrs. Havel took Brandi to the Well Child Clinic that she learned about the In-Home Training program.

Enrolled At 3 Months

At the age of three months, Brandi was enrolled in the program and assigned a caseworker and trainer.

Although the success of the training program hinges on the expertise provided by the trainer, parents too are important factors in the child's advancement, she said.

"I can't accomplish much by coming in once a week, so I show Shirley (Mrs. Havel) what to do and give her a written program" to help her, said Brandi's teacher, Laurie Haszard.

"With gross motor skills we are working with large muscle development and basic movement, such as rolling, sitting, crawling and walking," she said. "We show parents how to facilitate these activities and how to make the kids do them."

Development of pre-speech skills emphasizes motor imitation, she said. For example, by teaching Brandi to imitate her mother when Mrs. Havel claps her hands and says "clap," Brandi should soon be able to respond to the verbal command alone.

Fine motor skill exercises, such as working puzzles and putting balls on spindles, help to develop the child's understanding, hand-eye coordination and finger dexterity, Mrs. Haszard said.

"Doing these things before the child is two years old gives them a head start," said Mrs. Swanson. "The age Brandi started was the best time for motor development.

"If she had started at a later stage, it would have been more difficult."

"The children will go through all of the stages eventually anyway, but we can speed them up by stimulation," added Mrs. Haszard.

Mostly Under 2

Available to families of mentally retarded children at no charge, the program provides physical and mental stimulation in the home primarily to children under the age of two years.

"There is no bottom age limit," Mrs. Haszard said. "We will work with children from birth to the age of two."

In most cases, "Kids who are two years old enter the LOMR day care program," she said.

However, in situations similar to Brandi's, full-time day care may be impossible due to other medical problems. Consequently these children may attend the LOMR day care center on a part-time basis, in addition to receiving in-home training beyond the age of two.

"There have been a few periods when Brandi's therapy has been interrupted by surgery," Ms. Swanson said. "But because the training program was provided in the home, she could get back into it right away."

Group Honors Teen Volunteer

By NANCY HICKS
Star Staff Writer

"Her time is our time; her energy our energy to use for the good of our residents . . ."

Terri Lynn Cutshall had this time and energy and she gave both freely, continuously last winter as a volunteer at the Lancaster Manor nursing home for older residents.

In recognition of the Lincoln teenager's 400 hours of volunteer service and her devotion to the manor residents, Miss Cutshall has been named Nebraska's first Teen Volunteer of the Year for the Nebraska Health Care Association.

Miss Cutshall's obvious interest and ability to work with older people also led to a full-time job in the activity department of Lancaster Manor.

But last November when she began her volunteer work at the manor, Miss Cutshall had no idea that the school project would lead to an award and a career.

"I didn't know what I wanted to do," said Miss Cutshall. As a part of a volunteer program for high school credit (Educational Participation in the Community), Miss Cutshall picked Lancaster Manor because she had visited the nursing home when her older sister was a manor volunteer.

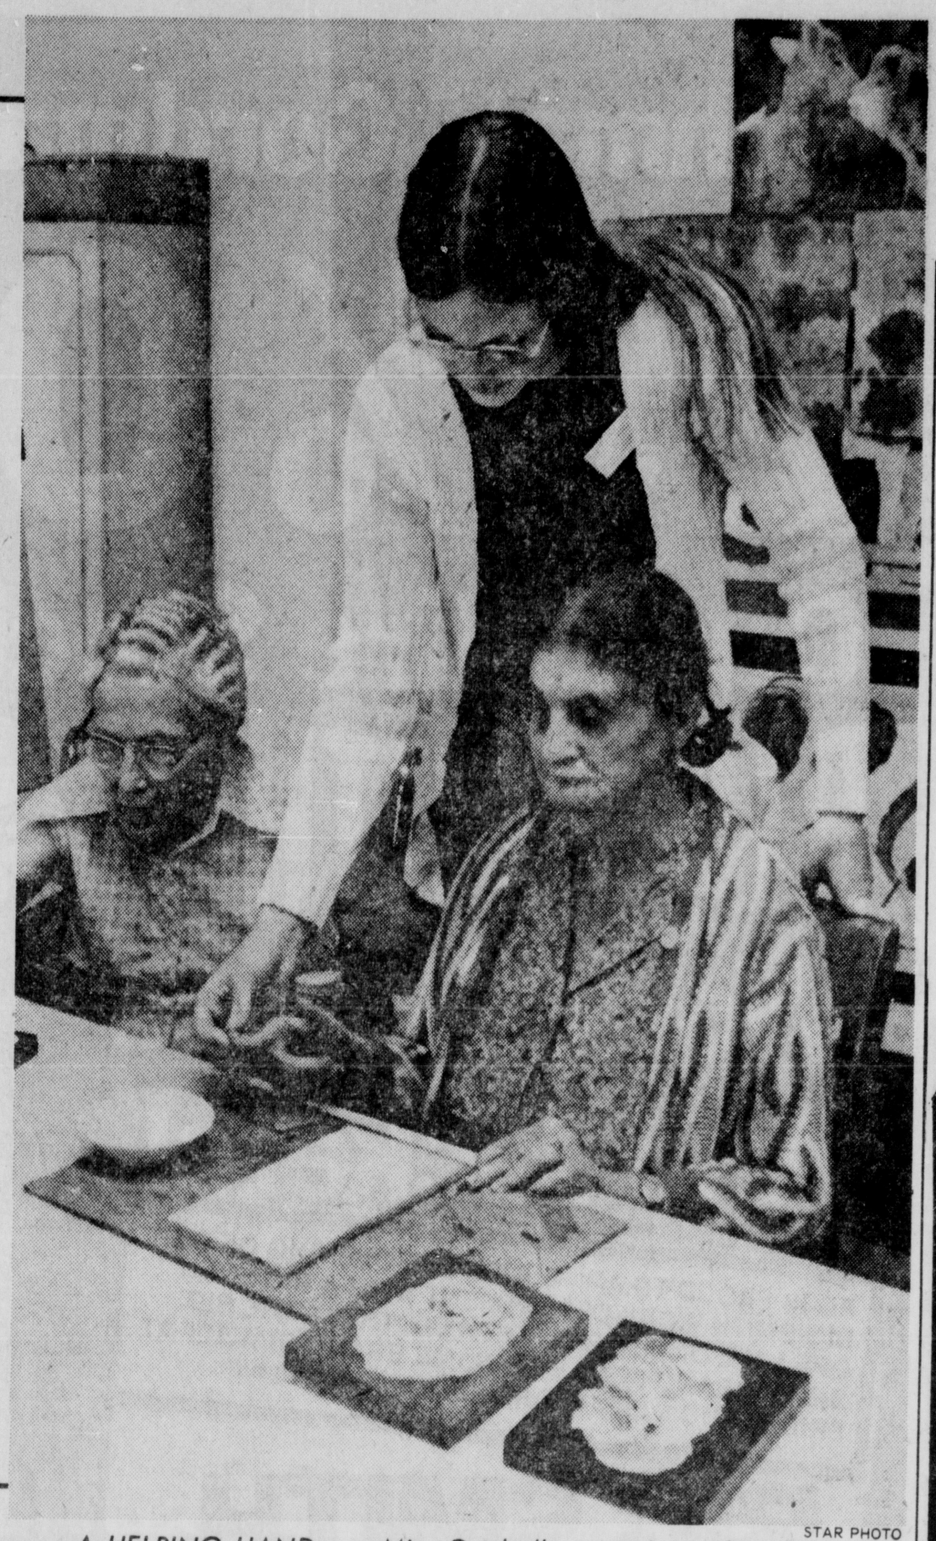

But she became hooked on the work . . . on the older friends she made . . . on the games of checkers and cards. She stayed long after the assigned hours for school credit because "I just liked coming down and talking to the residents."

By the end of the school year she had put in more than 400 volunteer hours, the most hours for any single student in the volunteer program.

And Terri Cutshall, her long hair flying in the breeze she created, had become an integral part of the manor team, and a refreshing example of the new generation's concern for the oldest generation.

Her service was outlined in a letter to the Nebraska Health Care Association and Miss Cutshall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Cutshall, was selected from 13 candidates for the state Teen Volunteer award.

Thursday the 18-year-old Lincoln High graduate took time off from the ceramics, the art projects and her older friends at the manor to receive a handsome plaque and congratulations on the award. Her name will also be submitted for national Teen Volunteer competition, said Jim Brown, assistant executive director of the Nebraska Health Care Association.

'Seen It All' Prompts Readers To Respond

DEAR ABBY: Re: the infuriating letter from SEEN IT ALL may I inquire whether SHE chooses her work clothing to please her neighbors? Why does she expect the pansy planter to kowtow to her prudery? If "Pansy Planter" wished to plant her garden in the nude, why should it affect your priggish letterwriter and her apparently humorless family? Let them erect a wall around their patio if they can't stand the view.

"LIVE AND LET LIVE"

DEAR LIVE: For another view, please read on:

DEAR ABBY: A reader signed SEEN IT ALL complained about a 68-year-old neighbor lady who displayed her uncovered rear end to the entire neighborhood while planting pansies.

Your reply was too mild. I would have told the offended neighbor to take a good, clear color photo of the pansy planter using a zoom lens, have it enlarged, and send it to her with the following note:

"A guest took this while HE was visiting us."

WICHITA, KANSAS

DEAR WICH: You topped me. That should be the end of it.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing this for those waitresses who don't seem to know which side their bread is buttered on.

I have never seen it fail. Every time my husband and I sit down to order in a restaurant, the waitress looks only at my husband and asks him what he wants. She ignores me completely.

He is the only one who is asked if he wants more coffee.

I know that is where the tip comes from, but if the waitress was smart, she would pay a little attention to the woman, because she's usually the one who decides where they dine.

LEFT OUT

DEAR LEFT: Don't blame the waitress for turning to the gentleman for the order. It's customary for him to order for both the lady and himself. However, she should ask the lady (first) if she wants more coffee.

Smoking Moms May Be Cutting Baby's Oxygen

Baltimore (AP) — Pregnant women who smoke may be depriving fetuses of oxygen critical to proper growth and development, say researchers at Johns Hopkins University.

Scientists have known that women who smoke cigarettes tend to give birth to undersized and sometimes dangerously delicate babies, but the cause has remained a mystery.

But Drs. Gail Gurtner and Barry Burns say research with sheep is altering an old theory about how fetuses get oxygen and may establish that carbon monoxide from cigarette smoke disrupts this process.

Classically, doctors have thought that oxygen from the mother's bloodstream traveled through the placenta and into the fetus by a simple process of diffusion.

The researchers report, however, that the placenta contains molecules, simliar to blood hemoglobin, that speed the flow of oxygen from mother to fetus in bucket-brigade fashion from molecule to molecule.

Give a choice, the molecules will carry carbon monoxide rather than oxygen, the researchers say, a process which will tend to concentrate carbon monoxide in a fetus carried by a smoking mother.

This cuts down on the amount of oxygen reaching the unborn child, which needs huge amounts of oxygen for proper tissue growth, according to the researchers.

What would you bid now?

1. Four diamonds. You might feel tempted to simply bid four hearts, because partner may have an awful hand on his bidding to date. However, it costs you nothing to make a slam try by bidding four diamonds. North does not need much for twelve tricks to materialize. Thus, he might have as little as in which case you'd surely want to be in six.

2. Three notrump. It is true that North made an affirmative response by bidding two spades and he probably has 8 or more high-card points. However, the fact that partner has lots of spades doesn't raise your values at all, and, indeed, your hand is greatly reduced in value by this unwelcome news. You therefore try to slow partner down by bidding three notrump, which is not forcing.

North may still go on to a slam — he could have a very good all-around hand and be biding his time — but there's nothing more you can do at this point except bid three notrump.

3. Pass. The purpose of East's preemptive bid is to make things tough for you, and he certainly has succeeded here with his opening three spade bid. There are three main actions you can consider under the circumstances, and any of them could prove to be right or wrong. One is to pass, which is admittedly conservative. Another is to bid four spades, thus inviting partner to bid a slam. The third possibility is to raise four hearts to five. There is no clear-cut answer!

City Council Hears Nuclear Power Foes

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

A crowd of nuclear foes made a last ditch attempt Thursday night to convince the City Council that nuclear plants aren't safe, cost too much money and aren't needed.

The overflow crowd jammed the council chambers to listen to three hours of often empassioned testimony on the nuclear plant controversy.

The lawmakers held the special hearing at the request of nuclear critics who said they needed more time to present their views on the Lincoln Electric System's (LES) proposed plans to buy into the Ft. Calhoun No. 2 nuclear station. A bond ordinance before the council would provide the financing necessary to pay Lincoln's 13% share of the plant.

LES officials estimate that Lincoln would pay $129 million.

Could Cut LES Out

LES Board Chairman Tom Allman told the council any decision to delay action on the bond ordinance Monday would cut LES out of the nuclear power plant deal. The Omaha Public Power District (OPPD) and the Nebraska Public Power District (NPPD) need to know by Oct. 1 whether LES will become part-owners in the plant, Allman said.

A number of people criticized that deadline, including Lincoln State Sen. Steve Fowler. Fowler theorized that OPPD and NPPD need to sell surplus power from the plant and that those two utilities would be charged lower interest rates on their bonds if LES was involved.

Instead of hurrying a decision, Fowler contended that LES "has something to negotiate with."

'Surrendering'

Fowler also warned the lawmakers that they would be "definitely surrendering" their authority to the LES Administrative Board by approving the bond ordinance. The council would be committed to issue bonds to pay for Ft. Calhoun by approving the bond ordinance, he said.

Although citizens' comments centered on the cost of the endeavor, the safety of nuclear power plants and the need for energy conservation measures, it was those cost figures which caught several councilmen's attention.

Councilman Bob Jeambey asked LES Administrator Walt Canney if he could guarantee that the final cost to the city to participate in the plant would be $129 million.

Canney said he couldn't guarantee that figure. But, Canney said, he was satisfied that LES consultants and engineering staffs had provided the best possible data from on which that figure was based.

Jeambey fired questions continuously at Canney in an attempt to determine what the final cost to the city would be, pointing out that cost overruns on other nuclear plants have more than doubled.

Wes Taylor, a nuclear expert from LES's consulting firm Black and Veatch, said he would assume that Lincoln's share of the Ft. Calhoun bill would be higher than $129 million "with an 8% inflation rate."

Jeambey said he's "still not convinced that this will provide us with cheaper powre."

Save Millions

LES Allman stated that LES's planned part ownership in Ft. Calhoun "is going to save ratepayers millions of dollars over the years compared to any other alternative we have."

Dr. Emerson Jones, a nuclear physicist who has acted as a consultant to NPPD, said costs for coal-fired plants will jump just as mush as costs for nuclear plants because of inflation and construction delays.

Ft. Calhoun will be "the most economic source of electricity for NPPD and OPPD," Jones said, adding, "I'm sure that will prevail for Lincoln, also."

Hal DeGraw, a research geologist, told the council that nuclear fuel is becoming scarce and the price will go up.

LES Challenged

Loyd Fischer, an economist, challenged LES's growth rate projections, which he called "totally unreasonable."

Instead of continuing to consume increasing amounts of electricity in the coming years, Fischer contended that "people will respond to the inevitable higher costs by cutting down their use."

Mary Rogge, a housewife, claimed that radiation produced from nuclear plants will cause more deaths from cancer, leukeumia and genetic defects.

Dan Schlitt, a physicist, said there is "no technical solution on the horizon" for disposing of radioactive nuclear wastes produced from nuclear power plants.

Dr. Jones acknowledged that nuclear plants "do represent an element of danger." However, he claimed, that much of the data on radiation danger presented to the council was taken from studies on radiation fall-out when nuclear testing was till allowed.

Despite the dangers, Dr. Jones said that nuclear reactors have been operating for more than 30 years without a major accident.

Saying it was a tough decision councilman Max Denney blamed LES for not keeping the public abreast of its decisions.

"I think LES's public relations stinks," Denney charged.

Dr. Jones said that the nuclear industry has added to the public's confusion about nuclear energy.

"They've done a very poor job of keeping the public informed," he says.

Lincoln Temperatures Dip To (Shudder) 29 Degrees

Temperatures dropped to a chilly 29 degrees Thursday morning at the Lincoln Airport, establishing a new record low mark.

The 29-degree reading is also the coldest on record for this early in the season at Lincoln, the National Weather Service reported.

The old Lincoln record of 31 degrees for Sept. 25 was set way back in 1893.

Widespread frost occurred over eastern Nebraska early Thursday. A weather observer at Fairbury reported heavy frost on the ground.

North Platte's 27 degrees was the state's lowest Thursday.

Sunny and warmer weather is due Friday with highs forecast to reach the mid 70s in the east to mid 80s in the west. Cooler temperatures are expected Saturday in the west with highs in the low to mid 70s.

Self-Styled Revolutionaries Threaten Louvre Bombing

Paris (UPI) — A threat to blow up the historic Louvre museum packed with thousands of tourists Thursday sparked one of the French capital's worst bomb scares since the Algerian war.

Less than half an hour after an anonymous call from self-styled Spanish revolutionaries sent the alarm bells ringing, the museum janitors, mostly war veterans, herded some 6,000 French and foreign tourists out into the street.

"It was the fastest evacuation I can think of since the days of the Nazi blitz," a police official said.

Police described as a hoax the warning to blow up the building with its priceless art treasures and visitors unless France demanded pardon for the 11 Spanish prisoners under death sentence.

The only victim was a custodian who was hit in the face by an unidentified foreign tourist who was furious when ordered to rush out, police said.

Security officials said Louvre Director Pierre Quoniam was right when he sounded the alarm and summoned police bomb disposal squads.

"We had more than 80 major halls and rooms opened today," a custodian said. "Some 2½ million people tour the Louvre each year. It's not possible to rule out a bomb attack."

The Louvre bomb scare was the latest incident in a rash of real bomb and molotov cocktail incidents blamed on opponents of the Franco regime of Spain — the biggest such outbreak since the wave of bombings during the Algerian war years.

Vocational Ed Chief Alberty Dead At 83

Luman H. Alberty, director of vocational education and industrial arts for 31 years in the Lincoln Public Schools, died Wednesday. He was 83.

Alberty taught at Halstead and Winfield, Kan., before he moved to Lincoln in 1926. The Kansas State College graduate attended the University of Minnesota and the University of Wisconsin, where he received his M.A. degree in 1931.

Alberty was past president of the Nebraska Industrial Education Association, twice secretary-treasurer of the Nebraska Vocational Association, member of the Engineers Club of Lincoln, Nebraska Schoolmasters Club and the American Vocational Association.

He is survived by his widow, Mattie Alice; and three children, Robert of Cambridge, Mass.; Bryce and Mrs. Monica Marcotte, both of Rochester, N.Y.

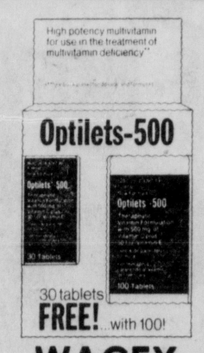

Police Arrest 2 Lincoln Men In Fist Fight

Police arrested two Lincoln men Wednesday night in connection with a fight at the Royal Grove Nite Club, 340 W. Cornhusker Hwy., in which both were injured.

The men began hitting each other with their fists and chairs about 9 p.m., police said.

One man was listed in satisfactory condition at Bryan Memorial Hospital Thursday night with cuts. The other was treated at St. Elizabeth's Health Center and released.

City Council Hears Nuclear Power Foes

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

A crowd of nuclear foes made a last ditch attempt Thursday night to convince the City Council that nuclear plants aren't safe, cost too much money and aren't needed.

The overflow crowd jammed the council chambers to listen to three hours of often empassioned testimony on the nuclear plant controversy.

The lawmakers held the special hearing at the request of nuclear critics who said they needed more time to present their views on the Lincoln Electric System's (LES) proposed plans to buy into the Ft. WHEREAS, it is for the convenience of the inhabitants of said City and for the public that said plat be approved and accepted as filed.

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT ORDAINED by the City Council of the City of Lincoln, Nebraska:

Section 1. That the plat of COLONIAL HILLS SIXTH ADDITION, as an addition in the City of Lincoln, Nebraska, filed in the office of the Planning Department of said City by WEST GATE, INC., is hereby accepted and approved, and said owners are hereby given the right to plat said COLONIAL HILLS SIXTH ADDITION as an addition in said City in accordance therewith. Such acceptance and approval are conditioned upon the following:

First: That said owners shall at their own cost and expense pay for labor, material, engineering, and inspection costs in connection with the construction of sidewalks to be constructed in the sidewalk space along both sides of LaSalle and Spruce Streets and along the east side of 58th Street adjacent to this final plat. The construction of said sidewalks shall be completed not later than October 1, 1979.

Second: That said owners shall at their own cost and expense pay for all labor, material, engineering, and inspection costs in connection with the construction of a system of storm sewerage and drainage to serve said plat. Said system of storm sewerage and drainage shall be constructed as follows:

9. Approximately 240 feet of 18 inch R.C.P. from the south end of the existing 18 inch R.C.P. storm sewer in 58th Street to the intersection of Spruce Street and 58th Street.
b. Approximately 320 feet of 24 inch R.C.P. from the intersection of Spruce Street and 58th Street to the intersection of LaSalle Street and 58th Street.
c. Approximately 110 feet of 24 inch R.C.P. from the intersection west of LaSalle and 58th Streets to the outlet in the future LaSalle Street.

The aforesaid system of storm sewerage and drainage shall be designed and constructed in conformance with "Storm Sewer Design Criteria" published by the Department of Public Works for the City of Lincoln in June, 1974, filed in the office of the City Engineer. Construction of said system of storm sewerage and drainage shall be completed not later than October 1, 1977.

Third: That said owners shall at their own cost and expense pay for all labor, material, engineering, and inspection costs in connection with the placing of permanent monuments at all corners of all lots, streets, avenues, angle points, and ends of all curves of the final plat of COLONIAL HILLS SIXTH ADDITION. The above required lot staking shall be completed prior to the construction on or the conveyance of any lot shown on the final plat.

Section 2. That said owners shall, prior to final passage of this ordinance, execute and deliver to the City of Lincoln:

a. a bond in the sum of $13,200.00 conditioned upon the strict compliance by said owners with the conditions contained in paragraph designated FIRST of the next preceding section of this ordinance;

b. a bond in the sum of $15,300.00 conditioned upon the strict compliance by said owners with the conditions contained in paragraph designated SECOND of the next preceding section of this ordinance; and

c. a bond in the sum of $1,155.00 conditioned upon the strict compliance by said owners with the conditions contained in paragraph designated THIRD of the next preceding section of this ordinance.

The bonds required above shall be subject to approval by the City Attorney. In the event that said owners or their surety fail to satisfy the conditions herein set forth within the time specified in this ordinance, the City Council may order the required work to be performed by the City and recover the cost thereof from said owners and their surety. Such work shall be performed in the manner set forth in Title 26 of the Lincoln Municipal Code known as the Land Subdivision Ordinance as now existing or as may hereafter be amended.

Section 3. Immediately upon the taking effect of this ordinance, the City shall cause the final plat and a certified copy of this ordinance to be filed in the office of the Register of Deeds of Lancaster County, Nebraska. Filing fees shall be paid by said owners.

Section 4. That this ordinance shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage and publication according to law.

WHEREAS, EDWIN F. SCHMIEDING and LILLIAN L. SCHMIEDING, husband and wife, owners of a tract of land described as being all of Outlot "F" of "Sunset View" in the West One-half (½) of Section 8, Township 10 North, Range 7 East of the Sixth Principal Meridian, Lancaster County, Nebraska, and more particularly described as follows: Commencing at the West Quarter (¼) corner of said Section 8; thence perpendicular to the west line of said Section 8 on an assumed bearing of due east a distance of 33.00 feet to a point which is the southwest corner of said Outlot "F", said point also being the point of beginning; thence north 0 degrees 05 minutes east, along the east line of North 40th Street, a distance of 200.00 feet; thence due east, along the south line of "Sunset Acres 2nd Addition", a distance of 386.88 feet; thence south 1 degree 37 minutes west, along the west line of Outlot "A" of "Sunset View", a distance of 0.43 feet to a point of curvature; thence continuing along said west line of Outlot "A", along a curve bearing to the left, having an angle of 52 degrees 36 minutes and a radius of 71.40 feet, an arc distance of 65.55 feet to the point of tangency; thence south 50 degrees 59 minutes east, continuing along said west line of said Outlot "A", a distance of 225.62 feet; thence due west, along the north line of Lot 191 Irregular Tracts, a distance of 589.14 feet to the point of beginning, containing 2.2 acres more or less; have filed said plat in the office of the Planning Department of the City of Lincoln, Nebraska, with a request for approval and acceptance therof, in the manner and form as by ordinance required; and

WHEREAS, it is for the convenience of the inhabitants of said City and for the public that said plat be approved and accepted as filed.

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT ORDAINED by the City Council of the City of Lincoln, Nebraska:

Section 1. That the plat of SUNSET VIEW 1st ADDITION, as an addition in the City of Lincoln, Nebraska, filed in the office of the Planning Department of said City by EDWIN F. SCHMIEDING and LILLIAN L. SCHMIEDING, husband and wife, is hereby accepted and approved, and said owners are hereby given the right to plat said SUNSET VIEW 1st ADDITION as an addition in said City in accordance therewith. Such acceptance and approval are conditioned upon the following:

First: That said owners shall at their own cost and expense pay for labor, material, engineering, and inspection costs in connection with the construction of sidewalks to be constructed in the sidewalk space along the east side of 40th Street adjacent to this plat. The construction of said sidewalks shall be completed not later than October 1, 1979.

Second: That said owners shall at their own cost and expense pay for all labor, material, engineering, and inspection costs in connection with the construction of an ornamental street lighting system along 40th Street, all of which construction shall be equivalent to standards and specifications for residential street lighting for the City of Lincoln. As an alternative, the said owners on or before the effective date of this ordinance may petition the City for the creation of an ornamental street lighting district as required by Article VI, Section 3, of the City Charter to accomplish the construction of said ornamental street lighting system. The construction of said ornamental street lighting system shall be completed not later than October 1, 1977.

Third: That said owners shall at their own cost and expense pay for all labor, material, engineering, and inspection costs in connection with the construction of a system of storm sewerage and drainage to serve said plat. Said system of storm sewerage and drainage shall be constructed as follows:

a. A 36 inch R.C.P. along the south edge of the property from 40th Street to the open channel on the east edge of the plat.
b. A 15 inch R.C.P. intersecting the 36 inch R.C.P. about 180 feet east of 40th Street to collect drainage from theproperty to the south.
c. A 21 inch R.C.P. to pick up the drainage ditch that comes in from the south along the bank of the open channel.
d. Bank protection of a minimum of concrete riprap where the 36 inch R.C.P. enters the open channel.
e. Site grading to insure that water from north of the lots will drain to the parking lot.

The aforesaid system of storm sewerage and drainage shall be designed and constructed in conformance with "Storm Sewer Design Criteria" published by the Department of Public Works for the City of Lincoln in June, 1974, filed in the office of the City Engineer. Construction of said system of storm sewerage and drainage shall be completed not later than October 1, 1977.

Fourth: That said owners shall at their own cost and expense pay for all labor, material, engineering, and inspection costs in connection with the construction of a four (4) foot high chain link fence along the west side of the 100 foot wide drainage easement designated as Outlot "B". The construction of said four (4) foot high chain link fence shall be completed not later than October 1, 1977.

Fifth: That prior to the effective date of this ordinance, said owners shall enter into a written agreement with City which shall provide as follows:

A. That said owners shall develop the common open area grounds with trees, shrubs, and grasses, and shall provide for the maintenance of all common facilities including, but not limited to, the common grounds, plant material, private roadways, private sanitary sewers, private water lines, private storm sewers, and the playground equipment, all of which maintenance shall be performed on a permanent and continuing basis by said owners; provided, however, that said owners may be relieved and discharged from such maintenance obligations upon the creation in writing of a permanent and continuing agency of property owners within said plat, which agency shall assume such maintenance obligation. The instrument creating any such permanent and continuing agency shall have no force and effect until the same shall have been approved by the City Attorney, and filed of record in the office of the Register of Deeds for Lancaster County, Nebraska.

B. That said owners agree to construct a fire hydrant in North 40th Street south of the driveway leading into this development.

Section 2. That said owners shall, prior to final passage of this ordinance, execute and deliver to the City of Lincoln:

a. a bond in the sum of $900.000 conditioned upon the strict compliance by said owners with the conditions contained in paragraph designated FIRST of the next preceding section of this ordinance;

b. a bond in sum of $460.00 conditioned upon the strict compliance by said owners with the conditions contained in paragraph designated SECOND of the next preceding section of this ordinance;

d. a bond in the sum of $2,000.00 conditioned upon the strict compliance by said with the conditions contained in paragraph designated THIRD of the next preceding section of this ordinance;

e. a bond in the sum of $2,000.00 conditioned upon the strict compliance by said owners with the conditions contained in paragraph designated FOURTH of the next preceding section of this ordinance.

The bonds required above shall be subject to approval by the City Attorney. In the event that said owners or their surety shall fail to satisfy the conditions herein set forth within the time specified in this ordinance, the City Council may order the required work to be performed by the City and recover the cost thereof from said owners and their surety. Such work shall be performed in the manner set forth in Title 26 of the Lincoln Municipal Code known as the Land Subdivision Ordinance as now existing or as may hereafter be amended.

Section 3. Immediately upon the taking effect of this ordinance, the City shall cause the final plat and a certified copy of this ordinance together with the written agreement required herein to be filed in the office of the Register of Deeds of Lancaster County, Nebraska. Filing fees shall be paid by said owners.

Section 4. That this ordinance shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage and publication according to law.

Senators Crush Attempt To Nullify Bill Language

Washington (UPI) — The Senate Thursday crushed what may be the last hope of northern liberals to nullify strong antibusing language in a major appropriations bill.

The liberals' own parliamentary mistake led to their downfall.

Sen. Edward Brooke, R-Mass., leader of pro-busing forces, hoped to bring up an amendment to nullify two antibusing amendments added earlier to a $45.1 billion appropriations bill for the Departments of Labor and Health, Education and Welfare.

Brooke's amendment was ruled out of order on a parliamentary technicality.

The senator then tried to appeal the chair's ruling and bring the amendment to a vote, but his effort was tabled 50 to 39.

That meant the appropriations bill, which has been tied up for more than a week because of the busing dispute, is likely to pass as is.

Brooke, the Senate's only black member, failed in his amendment attempt because of an oversight that occurred Wednesday as the Senate prepared to invoke cloture — a decision to limit debate which places the senators and their amendments under tight restrictions.

Only amendments that have been offered and read before cloture is invoked are eligible for consideration, and since Brooke's amendment had not been read, it was out of order.

Opponents argued that overturning the ruling of the chair when the chair was clearly right amounts to "throwing the Senate rules out the window" and would set a dangerous precedent. They said his situation was "unfortunate" but Brooke was a victim of a cloture move which he supported himself.

Brooke and a coalition of northern liberals were concerned about the impact of antibusing amendments introduced by Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., and assistant Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd of West Virginia.

Both amendments prohibit HEW from cutting off federal education funds as a means of forcing schools to bus students to schools other than those nearest their homes.

Senators Crush Attempt To Nullify Bill Language

Washington (UPI) — The Senate Thursday crushed what may be the last hope of northern liberals to nullify strong antibusing language in a major appropriations bill.

The liberals' own parliamentary mistake led to their downfall

Sen Edward Brooke, R-Mass , leader of pro-busing forces, hoped to bring up an amendment to nullify two antibusing amendments added earlier to a $45 1 billion appropriations bill for the Departments of Labor and Health, Education and Welfare

Brooke's amendment was ruled out of order on a parliamentary technicality

The senator then tried to appeal the chair's ruling and bring the amendment to a vote, but his effort was tabled 50 to 39

That meant the appropriations bill, which has been tied up for more than a week because of the busing dispute, is likely to pass as is

Brooke, the Senate's only black member, failed in his amendment attempt because of an oversight that occurred Wednesday as the Senate prepared to invoke cloture — a decision to limit debate which places the senators and their amendments under tight restrictions

Only amendments that have been offered and read before cloture is invoked are eligible for consideration, and since Brooke's amendment had not been read, it was out of order

Opponents argued that overturning the ruling of the chair when the chair was clearly right amounts to "throwing the Senate rules out the window" and would set a dangerous precedent They said his situation was "unfortunate" but Brooke was a victim of a cloture move which he supported himself

Brooke and a coalition of northern liberals were concerned about the impact of antibusing amendments introduced by Sen Joseph Biden, D-Del , and assistant Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd of West Virginia.

Both amendments prohibit HEW from cutting off federal education funds as a means of forcing schools to bus students to schools other than those nearest their homes

FTC Rules Chrysler Corp. Gas Mileage Ads False

Washington (AP) — A Federal Trade Commission administrative law judge ruled today that Chrysler Crop. falsely advertised gasoline mileage claims for its small cars.

Judge Miles J. Brown said Chrysler misrepresented mileage tests reported in the October 1973, issue of Popular Science magazine.

In its ads, Chrysler said the magazine found that all Chrysler small cars had better mileage than all Chevrolet Novas manufactured by rival General Motors, the judge said.

Brown said, however, what Popular Science actually reported was that Chrysler's six-cylinder Plymouth Valiants and Dodge Darts obtained better mileage than Chevrolet Novas, but the small Chrysler cars with V-8 engines consumed more gas than Novas with either six-or eight-cylinder engines.

The judge said the Chrysler ads constituted an unfair trade practice because they had "the tendency and capacity to deceive the prospective customer . . ."

A Chrysler spokesman in Detroit said the automaker would appeal the decision to the full commission.

He said the original FTC complaint, filed last year, involved two of 14 ads Chrysler ran between December 1973, and March 1974.

Ford To Close Assembly Plants

DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co. said Thursday it will shut two midsize-car assembly operations for one week beginning Monday and lay off 5,225 workers.

Ford, which began 1976 car output just six weeks ago, is the only U.S. automaker to curtail production this early in the model year. A company spokesman said the temporary closings are in line with previously determined production schedules for the fall.

The Ford cutbacks come despite recent figures showing strong early sales of 1976 models and predictions by industry analysts of further improvements.

Decision Up To U.S.

London (AP) — Britain has secretly promised to return the Chagos archieplago in the Indian Ocean to Mauritius if the United States should decide against building naval facilities on Diego Garcia, an island in the chain.

Small Car Parts Prices Rising Faster

New York — From February 1974, to last February, the price of a front hood for a 1974 Vega went up 63%. Over the same period of time, the hood on a 1974 Cadillac Calais went up in price by 10%, while the hood on a Cadillac El Dorado went up only four per cent.

The cost of replacing 25 parts on the '74 Vega went up an average of 36%, compared to 16% for the Calais and 12% for the El Dorado. In general, according to a study conducted recently by the Brooklyn-based Auto Body Craftsmen's Guild, the parts price on small 1974 cars made by the "big three" American manufacturers increased disproportionately to those of full- and luxury-size cars. The parts studied included those most often damaged in crashes — the front and rear bumpers, the grill, radiator, water pump, trunk lid and so on.

"I don't understand it," said Albert Porcelli, president of the Craftsmen's Guild. "If the prices went up because steel prices did well, the hood on a Cadillac would make three on the Vega. It doesn't seem proportionate. One effect of this is that it results in a lot of cars being 'totaled out.' If parts prices are high, the cost of repairs is so high that it doesn't pay to do it." The owner of such a car would naturally be in the market, under those circumstances, for another car.

The disproportionate price increases were most pronounced on General Motors cars, and least pronounced on Chrysler products. (Chrysler, however, has not true subcompact like the Vega.)

The Ford cars were in the middle. For example, the cost of repairing the 25 parts of a 1974 Ford Mark IV went up 13%, a Ford Pinto, 21%, and a Maverick 12%. The period over which these increases took place was from January, 1974 to last May.

On the Chrysler cars, the Imperial went up 18%; Fury, 19%; Duster, 22%; Valiant Brougham, 22%, and the Barracuda 19%.

Another interesting feature of the survey was that it showed that the most expensive car to repair was the ElDorado, with a price tag of $2,982.65 for the 25 parts. The cheapest of the luxury cars to repair was the Imperial, at $2,359.76. The cheapest of all 27 cars was the four-cylinder Vega, at $1,100.95.

Porcelli said the study had been done to help the members of the guild. "They can post these figures on the wall to show their customers," he said. "People think you're crazy when you tell them how much it will cost to fix their car. Now they'll be able to see it's the parts and not the labor that's making it so high."

Damages Award Ruling Is Reversed

By United Press International

The Nebraska Supreme Court Thursday reversed and dismissed a lower court decision that George P. Rose should receive $28,000 in a malicious prosecution suit against the First National Bank of Bellevue and its President John S. Reinhart.

In the case, Reinhart had criminal insufficient funds check charges filed against Rose because of a $215.50 check written to one Tony Martinez on the Center Bank of Omaha.

The check was cashed at Reinhart's bank but was returned by Center Bank more than once for insufficient funds, the court said. However, the charges were dismissed because of a venue question and Rose filed for malicious prosecution damages.

A Sarpy County District Court jury ruled in favor of Rose and awarded the $28,000.

The high court said in reversing the lower court decision the evidence showed the instance which resulted in charges against Rose wasn't the first of its kind.

"The facts show that the plaintiff was making a practice of issuing checks upon a bank account in which there were insufficient funds to pay the checks in full upon their presentation and that the defendants were aware of such practice," The Supreme Court said.

Therefore, the court said, the charge filed by Reinhart was justified even though it was dismissed by the Sarpy District Court because of a technical problem.

In another case, the court:

—Ordered a new trial in a suit brought by the Alliance Tractor and Implement Co., against the Lukens Tool and Die Co., in the Scotts Bluff County District Court.

The dispute was over whether the tool and die firm lived up to its contract to sell and install for the Alliance implement firm a machine to manufacture hay rake teeth.

The Alliance firm sought in its action to force the other company to make the machine work for more than five hours, which was the longest time span the machine worked after it was installed, according to the Supreme Court.

The lower court ruled in favor of the tool and die company saying the contract for the machine was substantially met.

The high court reversed and remanded for new trial saying there was no evidence to the effect that the Alliance firm agreed at any point to a machine that would do less than the manufacturer said it would.

Small Car Parts Prices Rising Faster

New York — From February 1974, to last February, the price of a front hood for a 1974 Vega went up 63%. Over the same period of time, the hood on a 1974 Cadillac Calais went up in price by 10%, while the hood on a Cadillac El Dorado went up only four per cent.

The cost of replacing 25 parts on the '74 Vega went up an average of 36%, compared to 16% for the Calais and 12% for the El Dorado. In general, according to a study conducted recently by the Brooklyn-based Auto Body Craftsmen's Guild, the parts price on small 1974 cars made by the "big three" American manufacturers increased disproportionately to those of full- and luxury-size cars. The parts studied included those most often damaged in crashes — the front and rear bumpers, the grill, radiator, water pump, trunk lid and so on.

"I don't understand it," said Albert Porcelli, president of the Craftsmen's Guild. "If the prices went up because steel prices did well, the hood on a Cadillac would make three on the Vega. It doesn't seem proportionate. One effect of this is that it results in a lot of cars being 'totaled out.' If parts prices are high, the cost of repairs is so high that it doesn't pay to do it." The owner of such a car would naturally be in the market, under those circumstances, for another car.

The disproportionate price increases were most pronounced on General Motors cars, and least pronounced on Chrysler products. (Chrysler, however, has not true subcompact like the Vega.)

The Ford cars were in the middle. For example, the cost of repairing the 25 parts of a 1974 Ford Mark IV went up 13%, a Ford Pinto, 21%, and a Maverick 12%. The period over which these increases took place was from January, 1974 to last May.

On the Chrysler cars, the Imperial went up 18%; Fury, 19%; Duster, 22%; Valiant Brougham, 22%, and the Barracuda 19%.

Another interesting feature of the survey was that it showed that the most expensive car to repair was the ElDorado, with a price tag of $2,982.65 for the 25 parts. The cheapest of the luxury cars to repair was the Imperial, at $2,359.76. The cheapest of all 27 cars was the four-cylinder Vega, at $1,100.95.

Porcelli said the study had been done to help the members of the guild. "They can post these figures on the wall to show their customers," he said. "People think you're crazy when you tell them how much it will cost to fix their car. Now they'll be able to see it's the parts and not the labor that's making it so high."

Damages Award Ruling Is Reversed

By United Press International

The Nebraska Supreme Court Thursday reversed and dismissed a lower court decision that George P. Rose should receive $28,000 in a malicious prosecution suit against the First National Bank of Bellevue and its President John S. Reinhart.

In the case, Reinhart had criminal insufficient funds check charges filed against Rose because of a $215.50 check written to one Tony Martinez on the Center Bank of Omaha.

The check was cashed at Reinhart's bank but was returned by Center Bank more than once for insufficient funds, the court said. However, the charges were dismissed because of a venue question and Rose filed for malicious prosecution damages.

A Sarpy County District Court jury ruled in favor of Rose and awarded the $28,000.

The high court said in reversing the lower court decision the evidence showed the instance which resulted in charges against Rose wasn't the first of its kind.

"The facts show that the plaintiff was making a practice of issuing checks upon a bank account in which there were insufficient funds to pay the checks in full upon their presentation and that the defendants were aware of such practice," The Supreme Court said.

Therefore, the court said, the charge filed by Reinhart was justified even though it was dismissed by the Sarpy District Court because of a technical problem.

In another case, the court:

—Ordered a new trial in a suit brought by the Alliance Tractor and Implement Co., against the Lukens Tool and Die Co., in the Scotts Bluff County District Court.

The dispute was over whether the tool and die firm lived up to its contract to sell and install for the Alliance implement firm a machine to manufacture hay rake teeth.

The Alliance firm sought in its action to force the other company to make the machine work for more than five hours, which was the longest time span the machine worked after it was installed, according to the Supreme Court.

The lower court ruled in favor of the tool and die company saying the contract for the machine was substantially met.

The high court reversed and remanded for new trial saying there was no evidence to the effect that the Alliance firm agreed at any point to a machine that would do less than the manufacturer said it would.

Hey Tom . . . *Texas Christian University To Win 41-7

*TCU Over Huskers

Everybody's picking Nebraska to roll up a big score on Texas Christian Saturday afternoon in Memorial Stadium. Some of the guesses I've seen are 52-0 by Mort Olshan, 49-0 by Fred "Game Ball" Rothenberg of The Associated Press, 48-0 by one of the tout sheets, and 45-0 by another rating system. The professional oddsmakers say the Cornhuskers are favored by 37 points.

All week Coach Tom Osborne has been talking about the Horned Frogs having all the psychological factors in their favor and has said he hoped someone would pick the Huskers to lose.

"The players were a little bit exercised at the guy (Rothenberg) who picked Indiana to win," Osborne remarked. This week, I would hope that one of these people over here (pointing to the media table at the Extra Point Club luncheon on Monday) would volunteer to step in and fill the breach.

"That's very important to our football team to have someone who's willing to pick the opposition. The guys were a little bit fired up about it."

Well, Tom, I have one game ball in my den from Indiana's 1968 appearance in the Rose Bowl and I wouldn't mind having another one so here it is: *TCU over Nebraska 41-7.

I realize players sometimes are fickle and might decide to give the game ball to Tony Davis or Mike Fultz or someone who plays well Saturday, but here is Tom's wish: I pick *Nebraska to lose to TCU.

*Actually, my pick is NU 41-7, Tom, but clip this paragraph before you put Sports Signals on the bulletin board.

Hurricane In Miami

Hurricane Eloise swept across the Florida panhandle earlier this week and Hurricane Sooner will invade the Orange Bowl tonight. The result will be devastating for coach Carl Selmer's University of Miami Hurricanes.

Since I'm the conservative type and don't go for a lot of upsets, my pick of Oklahoma is only 56-7. Coach Barry Switzer won't have much choice, though, if the margin is more. He has only 48 players with him.

Like Nebraska, Oklahoma will get a chance to observe his defensive team's ability to halt the pass. Miami threw 32 times in losing 38-23 to Georgie Tech. It was a case of having to pass because the Hurricanes picked up just four first downs rushing. Oklahoma has yet to yield a rushing touchdown and had held its foes to just 1.5 yards per carry.

Switzer's assessment of Miami: "They pass a lot, almost every down. They don't have the overall team speed that Pittsburgh had, but they are more physical. They are stronger than Pitt defensively, but not as quick." Oklahoma defeated Pitt 46-10 last week.

Miami visits Lincoln next Saturday to face the Cornhuskers and then will host Colorado on Oct. 4 in the Orange Bowl to complete a tough three weeks for Selmer and his Hurricanes.

In another game Saturday, it'll be Missouri gaining revenge for last week's 59-20 loss at Madison, Wis. The Tigers will win 30-14. Other Big Eight predictions: Kansas State over Wake Forest 20-14, Iowa State over Florida State 16-14, Oklahoma State over North Texas State 27-0, Colorado over Wichita State 40-0, and Kansas over Oregon State 14-13.

Purdue Stays Winless

It should be a good weekend for this old ex-Hoosier. Purdue w ll fall at Southern California to make the Boilermakers 0-3 while Indiana figures to stop winless Utah and improve its record to 2-1.

Speaking of the Big Ten, word is that Woody Hayes will retire after this season, his 25th as head coach at Ohio State. John Pont, whose Northwestern team is picked to lose to Notre Dame Saturday, may decide to step out of coaching and remain as the Wildcats' athletic director. Woody's Buckeyes will romp over North Carolina.

There could be several other coaching changes in the Big Ten. One is virtually certain at Michigan State when the NCAA slaps the Spartans with a probation for recruiting violations that have been uncovered. Michigan State is picked to fall Saturday to North Carolina State.

Precedent for removing MSU's Denny Stolz was established in the Big Ten in the Illinois slush fund scandal when the Illini's continued membership in the conference hinged on the school firing football coach Pete Elliott and basketball coach Harry Combes.

Other Big Ten picks: Michigan over Baylor, Minnesota over Oregon (that could be the 'Crummy Game of the Week'), Penn State over Iowa and Texas A&M over Illinois.

Southeastern Conference: Alabama over Vanderbilt, Florida over Mississippi State, Georgia over South Carolina, Maryland over Kentucky, LSU over Rice, Tennessee over Auburn. The SEC is 7-11-1 against outside teams.

Southwest: Arkansas over Tulsa, Houston over SMU, Texas over Texas Tech.

Elsewhere: Duke over Virginia, Georgia Tech over Clemson, Pittsburgh over William & Mary;, West Virginia over Boston College, Tulane over Syracuse, Harvard over Holy Cross, Cornell over Colgate, Princeton over Rutgers, Arizona State over Brigham Young, California over Washington State, San Jose State over Stanford, UCLA over Air Force and Washington over Navy.

Slippery Rock won as expected over Muskingum 17-15 last week. The Rockets go to Edinboro State Saturday and will avenge last year's 7-7 tie.

Lack Of Scholarship Didn't Deter Hager

THE LINCOLN STAR
Sports
Friday, Sept 26, 1975 23

Manhattan — Tim Hager is a victim of circumstances, but he could care less.

An all-state quarterback for Lincoln Southeast last season, Hager was victimized by a NCAA ruling that sliced the number of scholarships a college could offer from 45 to 30.

Had the old rule been in effect, Hager would have received a Nebraska scholarship. But the new limit made him a borderline case in the coaches eyes, so he was not offered a scholarship.

Convinced he could play for the Huskers, Hager took the walkon route.

A Starter

He has played well enough in fall camp to earn the starting job Friday when the Cornhusker yearlings meet Kansas State's Junior Varsity here at 3 p.m.

"I'm excited about starting," Hager said, "but I was convinced if I worked hard enough at it I could come out on top."

Hager edged out Californian Mike Kennedy, a scholarship athlete, for the starting job against the Wildcats.

"I've been treated as well as any player on scholarship," Hager said. "But I still think it's harder for a walkon because the coaches feel they have to play the scholarship people because they have money invested in them."

Naturally, Hager has hopes of gaining a scholarship if he performs well this season. But it is not an obsession with him.

Love Football

"I work during the summer and live at home so I can make it financially," Hager explained. "I love football. So I'll stick it out even if I don't get a scholarship. I plan to play until the coaches say they don't want me around anymore."

Hager will be joined in the starting backfield by fullback Mike Washington from Lincoln High, wingback Greg Suelter of Ord and I-back Richard Berns from Wichita Falls, Tex.

Nebraska will face some stiff competition from Coach Don Bocchi's K-State junior varsity which will be aided by several upperclassmen.

Because of the new 48-man travel limit, K-State will have many players on its squad who normally would have traveled with the Wildcat varsity to Winston-Salem, N.C., where K-State faces Wake Forest Saturday.

As it has in the past, Nebraska will use only freshmen on its squad.

Husker coach Jim Ross, starting his seventh years as frosh coach, has indicated he plans to substitute often in the contest.

"We're really not that interested in a starting lineup," Ross said. "We're going to play an offensive and defensive unit in the first quarter and another two units in the second. "After that, we'll just have to see what happens."

PIGSKIN PROPHECY

HOME TEAM IN CAPS. *Night game.

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 26

*Okla. 44 - MIAMI-F. 7—Miami has about a dozen quality football players. Oklahoma has 4 times that many, and that's name of game. Sooners try out Orange Bowl turf for future reference.
(73-Oklahoma 24-20 . . . SR-Oklahoma 1-0)

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 27

Ala. 27 - VANDY 10—Vandy gave Crimson real scrap year ago.

*ARIZ. ST. 27 - Brig. Yng. 10—Game should mark the 'changing of the guard' in WAC.

ARK. 27 - Tulsa 17—Tulsa really 'burning' over '74 shellacking;

Bost Col. 24 - W. VA. 20—BC angry over '74 affair, felt W. Va. took cheap shot to disable ace Esposito.

Calif. 31 - WASH. ST. 24—Need computer to keep score when these two meet. But superior striking weapons on Cal's side this time.

CORN. 27 - Colg. 24—Good news - bad news: Colgate defense back intact, but after '74's horrendous performance, what does it mean?

DUKE 27 - Va. 20—If Navy could rush for more than 400 yds. vs. tissue-thin Virginia defense, one might expect Duke to do likewise.

*Fla. 24 - MISS. ST. 20—Outstanding talent on both sides.

GA. TECH 27 - Clem. 13—Clemson surprised Tech '74 holding Engineers to 20 rushing yds. & 1 1st dn. (on penalty) in 2nd half.

*Ga. 24 - S. CAR. 20—Carlen's spirited Gamecocks could make it sweep vs. Peach State entries on QB Grantz' heroics.

HARV. 20 - H. Cross 14—The Cross debacle at Army does not reflect team's improved status.

IND. 27 - Utah 13—Utes may be an improved team, but look where they had to start from.

*Iowa St. 24 - FLA. ST. 22—ISU hoping Fla. excursion will be sunnier than one to California.

*Kansas St. 26 - W. FOR. 13—Appalachian setback may have taken something out of Deacs.

KANS. 20 - Ore. St. 9—Stunning victory at Ky. proves there's talent at Lawrence, even if it's not abundant.

KY. 24 - Mary. 12—If Maryland had all its troops healthy, it might have been able to give Cats trouble.

*LSU 20 - Rice 7—After Neb. & Tex. A&M, and with Fla. coming up, Owls will look inviting to LSU.

MICH. ST. 20 - N. Car. St. 20—Stolz too kood a coach and Spartans too good a team to let Ohio State disappointment ruin season.

MICH. 27 - Baylor 7—Bo has type of conservative team he favors, despite surprising draw with Stanford.

MINN. 24 - Ore. 7—Should be barometer which conference, B-10 or Pac-8, has the weaker teams.

MISSOURI 24 - Wis. 13—Badgers will face aroused & vengeful team here & could have a 'tiger by the tail'. You can bet Mo. will spend lot of time reviewing last year's TV humiliation.

NEB. 52 - Tcu 0—Christians in Roman days had better chance against the lions.

N. DAME 27 - N.West'n 7—Comparison vs. Purdue doesn't add much insight here. NW's ground game will run into brick wall vs. Irish def.

OHIO ST. 38 - N. Car. 7—Tar off. line not getting job done. Evan with unemotional effort. Griffin, Greene, Johnson & Co. should rip.

Penn St. 24 - IOWA 10—Allowing for anticipated letdown, Paterno's club should ease by weak opponent.

PITT 40 - Wm -Mary 0—After Okla., this will seem like an open date.

Rutg. 23 - PRINCE. 20—Loss of QB Kosup compensated for with fine showing by Allison in Scarlet opener. Game falls into toss-up category.

S. CALIF. 34 - Purd. 10—Purd. 'guinea pig' for ND-USC comparison. McKay 27-7-1 vs. Big-10; goes for all-time USC coaching record.

*Smu 27 - HOUST. (HC) 24—May need an adding machine to keep score

STANF. 20 - San Jose St. 13—Happy Cardinals drop in class hr., but that is usually when you have to worry about them.

TENN. 20 - Aub. 13—Always a battle of redemption. Real war in trenches betw. Aub.'s huge offen. line & Vols' energetic def.

TEX. A&M 27 - Ill. 7—Aggies too physical & talented, as proven by shellacking of LSU. Strike blow for SWC honor.

*TEXAS 30 - Tex. Tech 13—Onus on Tech's questionable offensive line to move Longhorns out of there. Doubt it can do job.

*TULANE 21 - Syr. 10—Green Wave has been in against tuffer & prevailed. Syracuse's dismal road record (1-14 past 3 yrs.) is mitigating factor.

Ucla 34 - A. FORCE 13—Natural spot for Uclan letdown, but Bruins simply have superior talent & should win eased up.

WASH 17 - Navy 14—After bouts with Ariz. St. & Texas, Huskies should be thirsting for success. Massive FB Earl tests Navy's heralded defense.

LSE Girls Golf Looks Promising

By CHUCK SINCLAIR
Prep Sports Writer

When girls golf practice started for the Lincoln public schools this year, coach Mary Lou Gove was looking for a turnout at least equal to last year's, when three of the four schools were able to field a team.

But instead, Gove was greeted by 20 girls, 18 from the same school, Southeast.

Instead of gaining momentum after the initial year of competition, it looked as though golf was doomed as a girls prep sport in Lincoln for the present time because of lack of interest with just one school able to meet team requirements.

It looked like the two who weren't from Southeast, Jody Grassmeyer and Karen Cook of Northeast, would be without a team.

But the two followed much the same path as Southeast's Jane Deeter and East High's Kathy Hughett when they were trying to get the program accepted last year and went out to recruit participants.

"They just went out and recruited three other girls," Gove said. "Their scores definitely aren't the best, but they're having fun and we encourage the interest."

Southeast's turnout was extremely pleasing to Gove who says sophomores Courtney Herman and Sue Hergert should be a strong nucleus to build with in the next two years.

"Coaching girls is a lot different," Gove says. "Especially in a skill game such as golf. In a match we had Saturday at Crete, some of the Waverly girls had never played on a course before they got to Crete.

"The new golf course in Northeast Lincoln should help getting some of the local girls exposed to the game," she adds. "The feeder schools haven't put much emphasis on golf in the past, but now more and more are learning the game at school."

The large turnout from Southeast poses another kind of problem for Gove since tournament participation is usually limited to the top four players from each school.

Although the Southeast team has been trimmed to nine since the opening showing, Gove still tries to play everyone in the dual meets.

"We have a match lined up with Pius X where both schools will play everyone and count the best scores," Gove says. "Pius had a turnout like Southeast's."

Like Northeast and Southeast, Pius uses Holmes Park as its home course.

Northeast and Southeast have the Trans-Nebraska Conference meet Friday at Holmes and the I-80 Oct. 3 with the state meet scheduled for Oct. 16 at Omaha's Benson Park.

Only 59 Set For NU Tilt

The Nebraska football coaching staff still has one spot to fill on the 60-man squad that will dress for the game Saturday in Memorial Stadium against Texas Christian.

The spot was left vacant because of a knee strain which still is bothering tight end Rick Panneton.

Fullback Gary Higgs, who rushed six times for 38 yards against Indiana last Saturday, was excused from practice early because of what might be a slight muscle pull, but Coach Tom Osborne believes he'll be ready to play against the Horned Frogs.

Center Rik Bonness is nearly 100% recovered from a pulled hamstring and Osborne said I-back Dave Gillespie again is running at full speed after being out last week with a hip pointer.

The dressers for TCU:

Monte Anthony, I-B; Rik Bonness, C; Dan Brock, DT; Ken Brown, WB; Jim Burrow, DB; Dave Butterfield, DB; Jeff Carpenter, LB; Tom Coccia, DE; Rich Costanzo, OG; Mike Coyle, K; Curtis Craig, WB; Tom Davis, C; Tony Davis, FB; Dodie Donnell, FB; Percy Eichelberger, LB; Al Eveland, K; Vince Ferragamo, QB; Mike Fultz, DT; Randy Garcia, QB; Dave Gillespie, I-B; Dean Gissler, DT; Jeff Hansen, LB; Ted Harvey, DB; Bob Hayes, OT; Tom Heiser, WB; Gary Higgs, FB; Steve Hoins, OT; Brad Jenkins, TE; Chuck Jones, DB; Greg Jorgensen, OG; John Lee, MG; Randy Lessman, P; Bob Lingenfelter, OT; Steve Lindquist, OG; Terry Luck, QB; Chuck Malito, SE; Bob Martin, DE; Dan Miller, OG; George Mills, DT; Wonder Monds, DB; Larry Mushinskie, TE; John O'Leary, IB; Ray Phillips, DE; Clete Pillen, LB; Jeff Pullen, MG; Dave Redding, DE; Tony Samuels, DE; Dan Schmidt, OG; Dave Shamblin, SE; Kent Smith, DB; Ken Spaeth, TE; Kurt Stacey, DB; Bobby Thomas, SE; Tom Thomas, C; Willie Thornton, MG; Larry Valasek, DB; Stan Waldemore, OT; Jerry Wied, DT; Jim Wightman, LB.

'Mismatches' Not Part Of Coaches' Words

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Editor

Mismatch.

Football coaches despise the word.

Witness, Nebraska coach Tom Osborne on TCU Saturday and a pair of Lincoln prep coaches on Friday night games in the Capital City.

Lincoln Northeast (3-0) is expected to steamroll Lincoln High (0-3) Friday night at Seacrest Field. And a mile away at Thunderbolt Stadium, Class B's top-ranked Lincoln Pius X (3-0) is supposed to accomplish the same thing against Minden (1-2).

Projected mismatches send Northeast coach Bob Els and Pius X coach Vince Aldrich reeling. Both realize Lincoln High and Minden are proud football schools, hoping to shake out of slumps.

Best Opportunity

Usually, when a team's struggling, the best time to shift momentum is against a highly-regarded opponent. That's what scares Els and Aldrich most.

Southeast is the only Lincoln school on the road this weekend. Friday night, the Knights visit Hastings for a Trans-Nebraska Conference contest.

Southeast, which scored a 13-7 win over Ralston last week, has absorbed a couple setbacks ths week.

By far the most critical was the loss of senior tackle Dave Slagel, a tri-captain and the Knights' leading tackler in their first two games.

Slagel underwent surgery Monday night and will be lost for the rest of the season. The other setback was Tim Turner's decision to quit the Southeast squad. He was a starter at offensive guard.

According to Southeast coach Frank Solich, Slagel sustained a leg injury three days before the Ralston game, but was able to play.

Blocked Artery

"He received another blow on the leg and it blocked an artery between his ankle and knee," Solich explained. "It started to cut off the blood flow to the bottom part of his leg.

"It swelled up and he went to the doctor Monday," Solich said. "They operated Monday night to relieve the pressure and, hopefully, to regain his foot movement."

Slagel will be hospitalized 10 days.

"It really shook us up," Solich said. "We were starting to snap out of it after beating Ralston and then to lose a leader like Dave to something as serious as that."

Solich expects another hard-hitting contest at Hastings. Like Southeast, the Tigers are 1-2. "We're both fighting for our lives," observed Solich.

"We've had two straight physical battles with Hastings," he noted. "They beat us up there two years ago, 6-0. We won (20-9) last year, but it went right down to the wire until we got a couple breaks."

Hastings' 14-10 win at Kearney took on added significance last week when Kearney upset powerful North Platte, 7-0. The Tigers also pressed unbeaten Lincoln East before losing, 12-6.

"Hastings is a good football team," Solich said. "They've got to feel like they can beat anyone. They play solid defense and are opening up more on offense. They're causing some problems with more veers and options. They're also throwing and scrambling more.

"Hastings uses an eight-man defensive front," he added. "I hope we can go against it as well as we did against Ralston's eight-man front."

East Varied With Yowell

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Editor

Whatever you might think with regard to Sam Yowell's state-leading rushing statistics, Lincoln East's offense does not gear itself solely to his talents.

"We don't build our veer around Sam like some I-formations do around their I-backs," says East football coach Lee Zentic. "We believe in keeping the offense diversified.

"Sam could average 200 yards a game, if we wanted to play it that way," Zentic says. "But we believe in the team concept."

According to Zentic, Yowell likes that philosophy. "He's a team man all the way," his coach says. "As long as the team is doing well, Sam's happy."

When things become a little sluggish, Yowell likes to hit the homerun ball.

'Big Play' Threat

The 5-10, 175-pound senior fullback reeled off a 33-yard run against North Platte, a 38-yarder against Omaha Gross, a 49-yarder against Hastings and a 74-yarder against Grand Island.

"A year's experience has really helped him," Zentic says of Yowell, the leading rusher and scorer on last year's state championship Spartan team.

"He's a second effort runner," adds Zentic. "Hastings had him pinned a couple times last week, but he broke the tackles. He does a nice job of blocking, too. He's just a good, all-around player."

Most opposing defenses key their linebackers on Yowell, "but he overcomes it," according to Zentic. "If you try to overplay him to the outside, he'll hurt you inside.

"He's got so many things going for him — great speed, balance, hands, footwork, his blocking, even his tackling," Zentic points out.

Although the Spartans don't use him on defense, Zentic claims Yowell "could be an outstanding major college defensive back. I just feel he's too good offensively to be thinking defense yet."

Possible Wingback

Because he isn't a big running back, his place in a program like Nebraska most likely would be at wingback, Zentic theorizes.

"But someone like North Carolina State would definitely use him as a running back," Zentic says. "He's an outstanding athlete. He'll fit in somewhere, maybe even as a split end."

Yowell is averaging 7.2 yards a carry while rushing for 504 yards in four games. Omaha Westside's Bob Billinger and Omaha South's Dave Patlan are his closest challengers in the Class A rushing race.

Zentic hopes Yowell continues to produce his impressive statistics even though East isn't gearing toward him.

"When you use all your weapons," the East coach says, "it's going to be that much tougher for the opponent's defense to stop you when you get to the big game."

If the Spartans pass tests against Ralston and Millard these next two weekends, that "big game" opportunity may arrive Oct. 10 against unbeaten Lincoln Northeast.

Hey Tom . . . *Texas Christian University To Win 41-7

Sports Signals

By Bob Owens
Star Sports Editor

*TCU Over Huskers

Everybody's picking Nebraska to roll up a big score on Texas Christian Saturday afternoon in Memorial Stadium. Some of the guesses I've seen are 52-0 by Mort Olshan, 49-0 by Fred "Game Ball" Rothenberg of The Associated Press, 48-0 by one of the tout sheets, and 45-0 by another rating system. The professional oddsmakers say the Cornhuskers are favored by 37 points.

All week Coach Tom Osborne has been talking about the Horned Frogs having all the psychological factors in their favor and has said he hoped someone would pick the Huskers to lose.

"The players were a little bit exercised at the guy (Rothenberg) who picked Indiana to win," Osborne remarked. This week, I would hope that one of these people over here (pointing to the media table at the Extra Point Club luncheon on Monday) would volunteer to step in and fill the breach.

"That's very important to our football team to have someone who's willing to pick the opposition: The guys were a little bit fired up about it."

Well, Tom, I have one game ball in my den from Indiana's 1968 appearance in the Rose Bowl and I wouldn't mind having another one so here it is: *TCU over Nebraska 41-7.

I realize players sometimes are fickle and might decide to give the game ball to Tony Davis or Mike Fultz or someone who plays well Saturday, but here is Tom's wish: I pick *Nebraska to lose to TCU.

*Actually, my pick is NU 41-7, Tom, but clip this paragraph before you put Sports Signals on the bulletin board.

Hurricane In Miami

Hurricane Eloise swept across the Florida panhandle earlier this week and Hurricane Sooner will invade the Orange Bowl tonight. The result will be devastating for coach Carl Selmer's University of Miami Hurricanes.

Since I'm the conservative type and don't go for a lot of upsets, my pick of Oklahoma is only 56-7. Coach Barry Switzer won't have much choice, though, if the margin is more. He has only 48 players with him.

Like Nebraska, Oklahoma will get a chance to observe his defensive team's ability to halt the pass. Miami threw 32 times in losing 38-23 to Georgie Tech. It was a case of having to pass because the Hurricanes picked up just four first downs rushing. Oklahoma has yet to yield a rushing touchdown and had held its foes to just 1.5 yards per carry.

Switzer's assessment of Miami: "They pass a lot, almost every down. They don't have the overall team speed that Pittsburgh had, but they are more physical. They are stronger than Pitt defensively, but not as quick." Oklahoma defeated Pitt 46-10 last week.

Miami visits Lincoln next Saturday to face the Cornhuskers and then will host Colorado on Oct. 4 in the Orange Bowl to complete a tough three weeks for Selmer and his Hurricanes.

In another game Saturday, it'll be Missouri gaining revenge for last week's 59-20 loss at Madison, Wis. The Tigers will win 30-14. Other Big Eight predictions: Kansas State over Wake Forest 20-14, Iowa State over Florida State 16-14, Oklahoma State over North Texas State 27-0, Colorado over Wichita State 40-0, and Kansas over Oregon State 14-13.

Purdue Stays Winless

It should be a good weekend for this old ex-Hoosier. Purdue w ll fall at Southern California to make the Boilermakers 0-3 while Indiana figures to stop winless Utah and improve its record to 2-1.

Speaking of the Big Ten, word is that Woody Hayes will retire after this season, his 25th as head coach at Ohio State. John Pont, whose Northwestern team is picked to lose to Notre Dame Saturday, may decide to step out of coaching and remain as the Wildcats' athletic director. Woody's Buckeyes will romp over North Carolina.

There could be several other coaching changes in the Big Ten. One is virtually certain at Michigan State when the NCAA slaps the Spartans with a probation for recruiting violations that have been uncovered. Michigan State is picked to fall Saturday to North Carolina State.

Precedent for removing MSU's Denny Stolz was established in the Big Ten in the Illinois slush fund scandal when the Illini's continued membership in the conference hinged on the school firing football coach Pete Elliott and basketball coach Harry Combes.

Other Big Ten picks: Michigan over Baylor, Minnesota over Oregon (that could be the 'Crummy Game of the Week'), Penn State over Iowa and Texas A&M over Illinois.

Southeastern Conference: Alabama over Vanderbilt, Florida over Mississippi State, Georgia over South Carolina, Maryland over Kentucky, LSU over Rice, Tennessee over Auburn. The SEC is 7-11-1 against outside teams.

Southwest: Arkansas over Tulsa, Houston over SMU, Texas over Texas Tech.

Elsewhere: Duke over Virginia, Georgia Tech over Clemson, Pittsburgh over William & Mary,, West Virginia over Boston College, Tulane over Syracuse, Harvard over Holy Cross, Cornell over Colgate, Princeton over Rutgers, Arizona State over Brigham Young, California over Washington State, San Jose State over Stanford, UCLA over Air Force and Washington over Navy

Slippery Rock won as expected over Muskingum 17-15 last week. The Rockets go to Edinboro State Saturday and will avenge last year's 7-7 tie.

Lack Of Scholarship Didn't Deter Hager

THE LINCOLN STAR
Sports
Friday, Sept 26, 1975 23

By DAVE SITTLER

Manhattan — Tim Hager is a victim of circumstances, but he could care less.

An all-state quarterback for Lincoln Southeast last season, Hager was victimized by a NCAA ruling that sliced the number of scholarships a college could offer from 45 to 30.

Had the old rule been in effect, Hager would have received a Nebraska scholarship. But the new limit made him a borderline case in the coaches eyes, so he was not offered a scholarship.

Convinced he could play for the Huskers, Hager took the walkon route.

A Starter

He has played well enough in fall camp to earn the starting job Friday when the Cornhusker yearlings meet Kansas State's Junior Varsity here at 3 p.m.

"I'm excited about starting," Hager said, "but I was convinced if I worked hard enough at it I could come out on top."

Hager edged out Californian Mike Kennedy, a scholarship athlete, for the starting job against the Wildcats.

"I've been treated as well as any player on scholarship," Hager said. "But I still think it's harder for a walkon because the coaches feel they have to play the scholarship people because they have money invested in them."

Naturally, Hager has hopes of gaining a scholarship if he performs well this season. But it is not an obsession with him.

Love Football

"I work during the summer and live at home so I can make it financially," Hager explained. "I love football. So I'll stick it out even if I don't get a scholarship. I plan to play until the coaches say they don't want me around anymore."

Hager will be joined in the starting backfield by fullback Mike Washington from Lincoln High, wingback Greg Suelter of Ord and I-back Richard Berns from Wichita Falls, Tex.

Nebraska will face some stiff competition from Coach Don Bocchi's K-State junior varsity which will be aided by several upperclassmen.

Because of the new 48-man travel limit, K-State will have many players on its squad who normally would have traveled with the Wildcat varsity to Winston-Salem, N.C., where K-State faces Wake Forest Saturday.

As it has in the past, Nebraska will use only freshmen on its squad.

Husker coach Jim Ross, starting his seventh years as frosh coach, has indicated he plans to substitute often in the contest.

"We're really not that interested in a starting lineup," Ross said. "We're going to play an offensive and defensive unit in the first quarter and another two units in the second. "After that, we'll just have to see what happens."

LSE Girls Golf Looks Promising

By CHUCK SINCLAIR
Prep Sports Writer

When girls golf practice started for the Lincoln public schools this year, coach Mary Lou Gove was looking for a turnout at least equal to last year's, when three of the four schools were able to field a team.

But instead, Gove was greeted by 20 girls, 18 from the same school, Southeast.

Instead of gaining momentum after the initial year of competition, it looked as though golf was doomed as a girls prep sport in Lincoln for the present time because of lack of interest with just one school able to meet team requirements.

It looked like the two who weren't from Southeast, Jody Grassmeyer and Karen Cook of Northeast, would be without a team.

But the two followed much the same path as Southeast's Jane Deeter and East High's Kathy Hughett when they were trying to get the program accepted last year and went out to recruit participants.

"They just went out and recruited three other girls," Gove said. "Their scores definitely aren't the best, but they're having fun and we encourage the interest."

Southeast's turnout was extremely pleasing to Gove who says sophomores Courtney Herman and Sue Hergert should be a strong nucleus to build with in the next two years.

"Coaching girls is a lot different," Gove says. "Especially in a skill game such as golf. In a match we had Saturday at Crete, some of the Waverly girls had never played on a course before they got to Crete.

"The new golf course in Northeast Lincoln should help getting some of the local girls exposed to the game," she adds. "The feeder schools haven't put much emphasis on golf in the past, but now more and more are learning the game at school."

The large turnout from Southeast poses another kind of problem for Gove since tournament participation is usually limited to the top four players from each school.

Although the Southeast team has been trimmed to nine since the opening showing, Gove still tries to play everyone in the dual meets.

"We have a match lined up with Pius X where both schools will play everyone and count the best scores," Gove says. "Pius had a turnout like Southeast's."

Like Northeast and Southeast, Pius uses Holmes Park as its home course.

Northeast and Southeast have the Trans-Nebraska Conference meet Friday at Holmes and the I-80 Oct. 3 with the state meet scheduled for Oct. 16 at Omaha's Benson Park.

Only 59 Set For NU Tilt

The Nebraska football coaching staff still has one spot to fill on the 60-man squad that will dress for the game Saturday in Memorial Stadium against Texas Christian.

The spot was left vacant because of a knee strain which still is bothering tight end Rick Panneton.

Fullback Gary Higgs, who rushed six times for 38 yards against Indiana last Saturday, was excused from practice early because of what might be a slight muscle pull, but Coach Tom Osborne believes he'll be ready to play against the Horned Frogs.

Center Rik Bonness is nearly 100% recovered from a pulled hamstring and Osborne said I-back Dave Gillespie again is running at full speed after being out last week with a hip pointer.

The dressers for TCU:

Monte Anthony, I-B; Rik Bonness, C; Dan Brock, DT; Ken Brown, WB; Jim Burrow, DB; Dave Butterfield, DB; Jeff Carpenter, LB; Tom Coccia, DE; Rich Costanzo, OG; Mike Coyle, K; Curtis Craig, WB; Tom Davis, C; Tony Davis, FB; Dodie Donnell, FB; Percy Eichelberger, LB; Al Eveland, K; Vince Ferragamo, QB; Mike Fultz, DT, Randy Garcia, QB; Dave Gillespie, I-B; Dean Gissler, DT; Jeff Hansen, LB, Ted Harvey, DB; Bob Hayes, OT; Tom Heiser, WB; Gary Higgs, FB; Steve Hoins, OT; Brad Jenkins, TE; Chuck Jones, DB; Greg Jorgensen, OG; John Lee, MG; Randy Lessman, P; Bob Lingenfelter, OT; Steve Lindquist, OG; Terry Luck, QB; Chuck Malito, SE; Bob Martin, DE; Dan Miller, OG; George Mills, DT; Wonder Monds, DB; Larry Mushinskie, TE; John O'Leary, IB; Ray Phillips, DE; Clete Pillen, LB; Jeff Pullen, MG; Dave Redding, DE; Tony Samuels, DE; Dan Schmidt, OG; Dave Shamblin, SE; Kent Smith, DB; Ken Spaeth, TE; Kurt Stacey, DB; Bobby Thomas, SE; Tom Thomas, C; Willie Thornton, MG; Larry Valasek, DB; Stan Waldemore, OT; Jerry Wied, DT; Jim Wightman, LB.

'Mismatches' Not Part Of Coaches' Words

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Editor

Mismatch.

Football coaches despise the word.

Witness, Nebraska coach Tom Osborne on TCU Saturday and a pair of Lincoln prep coaches on Friday night games in the Capital City.

Lincoln Northeast (3-0) is expected to steamroll Lincoln High (0-3) Friday night at Seacrest Field And a mile away at Thunderbolt Stadium, Class B's top-ranked Lincoln Pius X (3-0) is supposed to accomplish the same thing against Minden (1-2).

Projected mismatches send Northeast coach Bob Els and Pius X coach Vince Aldrich reeling. Both realize Lincoln High and Minden are proud football schools, hoping to shake out of slumps.

Best Opportunity

Usually, when a team's struggling, the best time to shift momentum is against a highly-regarded opponent That's what scares Els and Aldrich most.

Southeast is the only Lincoln school on the road this weekend. Friday night, the Knights visit Hastings for a Trans-Nebraska Conference contest

Southeast, which scored a 13-7 win over Ralston last week, has absorbed a couple setbacks this week.

By far the most critical was the loss of senior tackle Dave Slagel, a tri-captain and the Knights' leading tackler in their first two games.

Slagel underwent surgery Monday night and will be lost for the rest of the season The other setback was Tim Turner's decision to quit the Southeast squad. He was a starter at offensive guard.

According to Southeast coach Frank Solich, Slagel sustained a leg injury three days before the Ralston game, but was able to play.

Blocked Artery

"He received another blow on the leg and it blocked an artery between his ankle and knee," Solich explained. "It started to cut off the blood flow to the bottom part of his leg.

"It swelled up and he went to the doctor Monday," Solich said. "They operated Monday night to relieve the pressure and, hopefully, to regain his foot movement."

Slagel will be hospitalized 10 days.

"It really shook us up," Solich said. "We were starting to snap out of it after beating Ralston and then to lose a leader like Dave to something as serious as that."

Solich expects another hard-hitting contest at Hastings. Like Southeast, the Tigers are 1-2 "We're both fighting for our lives," observed Solich.

"We've had two straight physical battles with Hastings," he noted. "They beat us up there two years ago, 6-0. We won (20-9) last year, but it went right down to the wire until we got a couple breaks."

Hastings' 14-10 win at Kearney took on added significance last week when Kearney upset powerful North Platte, 7-0 The Tigers also pressed unbeaten Lincoln East before losing, 12-6.

"Hastings is a good football team," Solich said "They've got to feel like they can beat anyone. They play solid defense and are opening up more on offense. They're causing some problems with more veers and options. They're also throwing and scrambling more

"Hastings uses an eight-man defensive front, he added. "I hope we can go against it as well as we did against Ralston's eight-man front."

East Varied With Yowell

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Writer

Whatever you might think with regard to Sam Yowell's state-leading rushing statistics, Lincoln East's offense does not gear itself solely to his talents.

"We don't build our veer around Sam like some I-formations do around their I-backs," says East football coach Lee Zentic. "We believe in keeping the offense diversified.

"Sam could average 200 yards a game, if we wanted to play it that way," Zentic says "But we believe in the team concept."

According to Zentic, Yowell likes that philosophy. "He's a team man all the way," his coach says "As long as the team is doing well, Sam's happy."

When things become a little sluggish, Yowell likes to hit the homerun ball.

'Big Play' Threat

The 5-10, 175-pound senior fullback reeled off a 33-yard run against North Platte, a 38-yarder against Omaha Gross, a 49-yarder against Hastings and a 74-yarder against Grand Island.

"A year's experience has really helped him," Zentic says of Yowell, the leading rusher and scorer on last year's state championship Spartan team.

"He's a second effort runner," adds Zentic. "Hastings had him pinned a couple times last week, but he broke the tackles. He does a nice job of blocking, too. He's just a good, all-around player."

Most opposing defenses key their linebackers on Yowell, "but he overcomes it," according to Zentic. "If you try to overplay him to the outside, he'll hurt you inside

"He's got so many things going for him — great speed, balance, hands, footwork, his blocking, even his tackling," Zentic points out.

Although the Spartans don't use him on defense, Zentic claims Yowell "could be an outstanding major college defensive back. I just feel he's too good offensively to be thinking defense yet."

Possible Wingback

Because he isn't a big running back, his place in a program like Nebraska most likely would be at wingback, Zentic theorizes.

"But someone like North Carolina State would definitely use him as a running back," Zentic says. "He's an outstanding athlete. He'll fit in somewhere, maybe even as a split end"

Yowell is averaging 7 2 yards a carry while rushing for 504 yards in four games Omaha Westside's Bob Billinger and Omaha South's Dave Patlan are his closest challengers in the Class A rushing race

Zentic hopes Yowell continues to produce his impressive statistics even though East isn't gearing toward him.

"When you use all your weapons," the East coach says, "it's going to be that much tougher for the opponent's defense to stop you when you get to the big game"

If the Spartans pass tests against Ralston and Millard these next two weekends, that "big game" opportunity may arrive Oct 10 against unbeaten Lincoln Northeast.

Lincoln's Pulse Beating Rapidly

By LIANE GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

The pulse of the Lincoln community is beating rapidly.

Community leaders, civic organizations and friends of the slain Sherdell Lewis are shocked, angry, frustrated.

City Councilman John Robinson said there should be a complete and thorough probe into training and recruitment practices and assignment of duties of all law enforcement officers in the state.

'Out Of Control'

"Obviously, things have grown out of control," he said, adding that he hopes the federal investigation goes beyond this one incident.

"We have a gut issue of whether or not our law enforcement agencies have gone completely mad," he said.

Jo Bragg, a mayoral candidate in last spring's election, called the shooting "a senseless waste of life."

"This whole situation is beyond me," Ms. Bragg said. "I see racism in the Lincoln Police Department and the Sheriff's department. People who have these jobs haven't had any contact with black people.

"Somehow this all has to stop!"

'Wait For Facts'

Mayor Helen Boosalis pointed out that the county attorney has already called a full-fledged investigation and urged people to wait "so that we have all the facts, the true facts, before we can decide what action must be necessary."

Addressing himself especially to young blacks in the community, The Rev. Garth Collins also urged them to wait and examine that report "and go from there."

He said he realizes "young blacks are pretty angry . . . because a man and a friend has been killed."

One of those angry young people is Marvel Nevels, a young Lincoln woman and a friend of Lewis'.

'Surprised, Shocked'

At first she said she was "surprised" and "shocked" to learn of his death.

"I don't know why," she decided later. "It's becoming pretty normal — it's open hunting season on niggers, isn't it?" she asked bitterly.

Ms. Nevels said she thinks the public outcry will be much louder than that following the death last February of Elija Childers, the last Lincolnite killed by law enforcement officers. Childers was also black.

'Not Going To Slide'

"Sherdell grew up with us. We're not going to let this slide. Twenty-six is awfully young to be dying."

Then she asked, simply: "How is the police department going to replace Barbara Kelley's son?"

The Nebraska Civil Liberties Union said the Lewis shooting "is further evidence of the need for a Police Review Board."

NCLU executive Director Barbara Gaither said the organization will be looking "very closely" at the matter "to determine specific roles for the NCLU."

'Judicial System Changed'

Speaking for Justice Inc., Jackie Lipsky said: "An incident last night has emphasized that Lincoln's police force is equipped with weapons and attitudes that have markedly changed certain aspects of our judicial system."

Using shotguns or hollow-point bullets, police "have it in their power to pass and carry out immediately a sentence of death or maiming," she said.

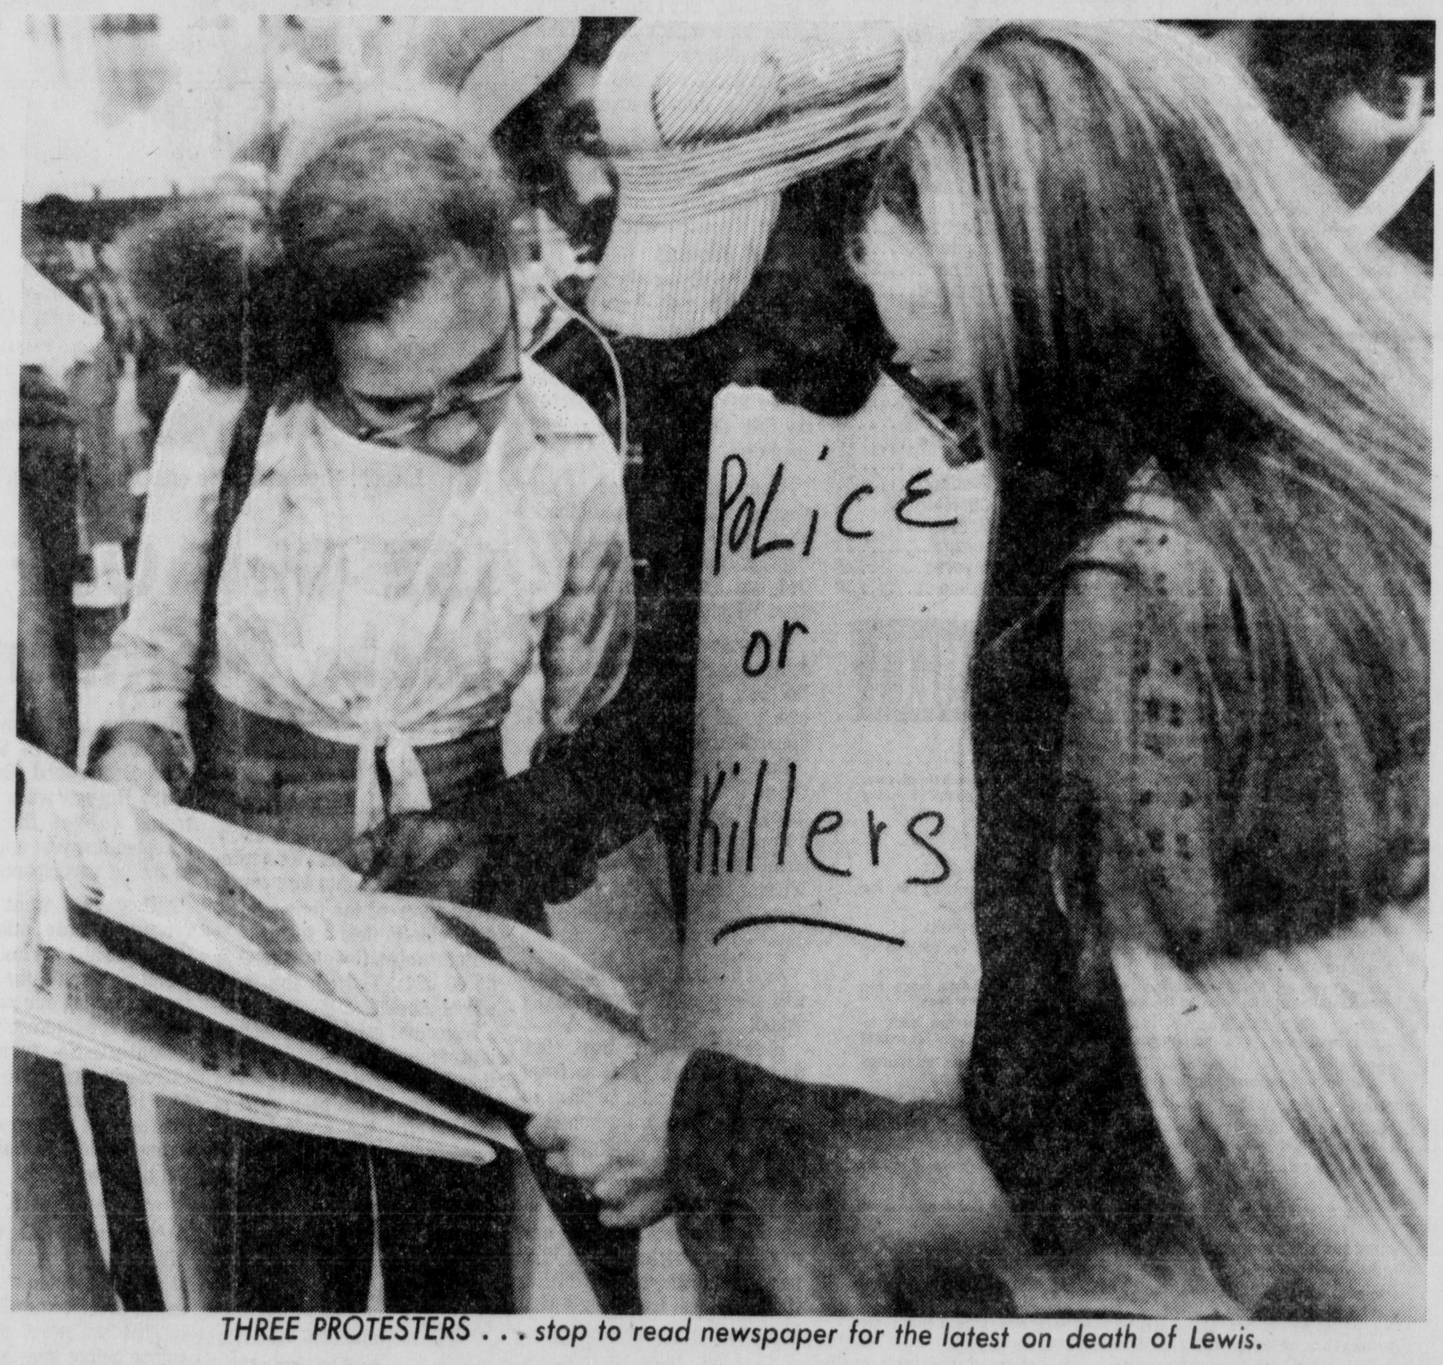

"Is it necessary for our police to kill in order to preserve order? We think not," she said.

In a joint statement, the NCLU and Justice, Inc., called for a review of the use of guns by county sheriff's deputies and Lincoln police officers. The two law-enforcement agencies were also urged to publicly state those gun-use policies.

A receptionist in Gov. J. James Exon's Capitol office, Lou Ann Hilt, said "approximately 30 or 40 " people stopped at the governor's office Thursday to express concern over the case.

"They came in small groups mostly and just said they hoped the governor was concerned with seeing justice done," she said.

Exon was not in his office Thursday.

Sherdell Lewis—Hip, Flashy, Good Friend, Street Wise

By NANCY HICKS

Tall, lean, handsome . . . Arvid Sherdell Lewis.

Hip, sharp, casual . . . Sherdell Lewis was a man, proud of his race, wise in the ways of the streets, bright beyond a doubt.

Lewis, 25, was killed Wednesday night, shot by a deputy sheriff when police tried to enter his home for a search.

The Sherdell Lewis described by friends and acquaintances was much more than a mug in the police files, more than newspaper clippings showing a series of arrests on misdemeanor and felony charges.

He was a man who cared about people, a man respected and liked by friends of all colors. Lewis was a man who loved dogs, and cars, and good clothes and a woman who wore his diamond.

No Uncle Tom

But not a man to be taken lightly, to be messed with. He was no Uncle Tom, no "Yassah" man.

"Lewis probably represented all the things that law enforcement officers hate," said one friend.

"He was a black man, intelligent, street wise, with no visible means of support, yet able to maintain a fairly decent life style."

For a while in the early 1970's Lewis leased a gas station at 27th and R Sts. But most recently he was self employed. He raised and sold dogs, particularly Doberman pinschers.

"He was really into dogs . . . he wanted to start a kennel," friends said.

Flashy Dresser

Lewis was a flashy dresser. He was striking with a leather cap, leather waist length jacket . . . the kind of clothes seen on the streets of Chicago or Detroit, not Lincoln.

He wore jewelry, men's jewelry, sometimes a necklace, or bracelet and many rings, turquoise rings.

And Lewis liked cars, was looking for an antique car to buy. He drove a black Cadillac, a 1972 model but modified, with lots of chrome and leather, four-inch white sidewalls, a television antenna and a diamond-shaped rear window.

Statement Of Power

White folks might call it a "pimpmobile" or a gangster car. It was, like his dress and his bearing, a statement of power, a statement that many white people don't understand and fear, his friends believe.

He was born Dec. 9, 1949, in Omaha, the son of Barbara (Lewis) Kelley and Harry Lewis, who is now deceased. Lewis attended Catholic elementary schools in both York and Lincoln and completed grade school and junior high school at Saratoga Elementary and Everett Junior High Schools in Lincoln. In 1968 he graduated from York High School, then spent one year at JFK College.

A standout athlete, Lewis led his team to a 7-2 football season and earned all conference honors as a back during his junior year at York High School.

That same year the 6 foot, 4 inch Lewis was an all-conference basketball player.

The 1967 team was built around Lewis, who started the season by scoring every touchdown in a 26-0 victory over Fairbury. But an injury that season hampered Lewis' sports success, according to Jerry Yowell of York, his former coach.

Later Lewis went out for track at JFK College and in 1971 coached a Police Department midget league football team in Lincoln, his mother remembers.

That was the Lewis that his family and friends knew.

But Lewis was well known to local police for other reasons.

Charge Pending

In 1970 he was placed on probation after pleading guilty to being an accessory after the fact, a high grade misdemeanor charge. He was currently fighting a charge of delivering a controlled substance (cocaine).

A recent assault charge showed that Lewis was no man to mess with. This spring some Alpha Tau Omega fraternity brothers made the mistake of throwing a water balloon at Lewis's car, according to newspaper reports.

Lewis stopped the car, pulled a stick from his trunk, ran into the house and clouted the pair. Lewis later pleaded no contest and was fined $100 on an assault charge stemming from the incident.

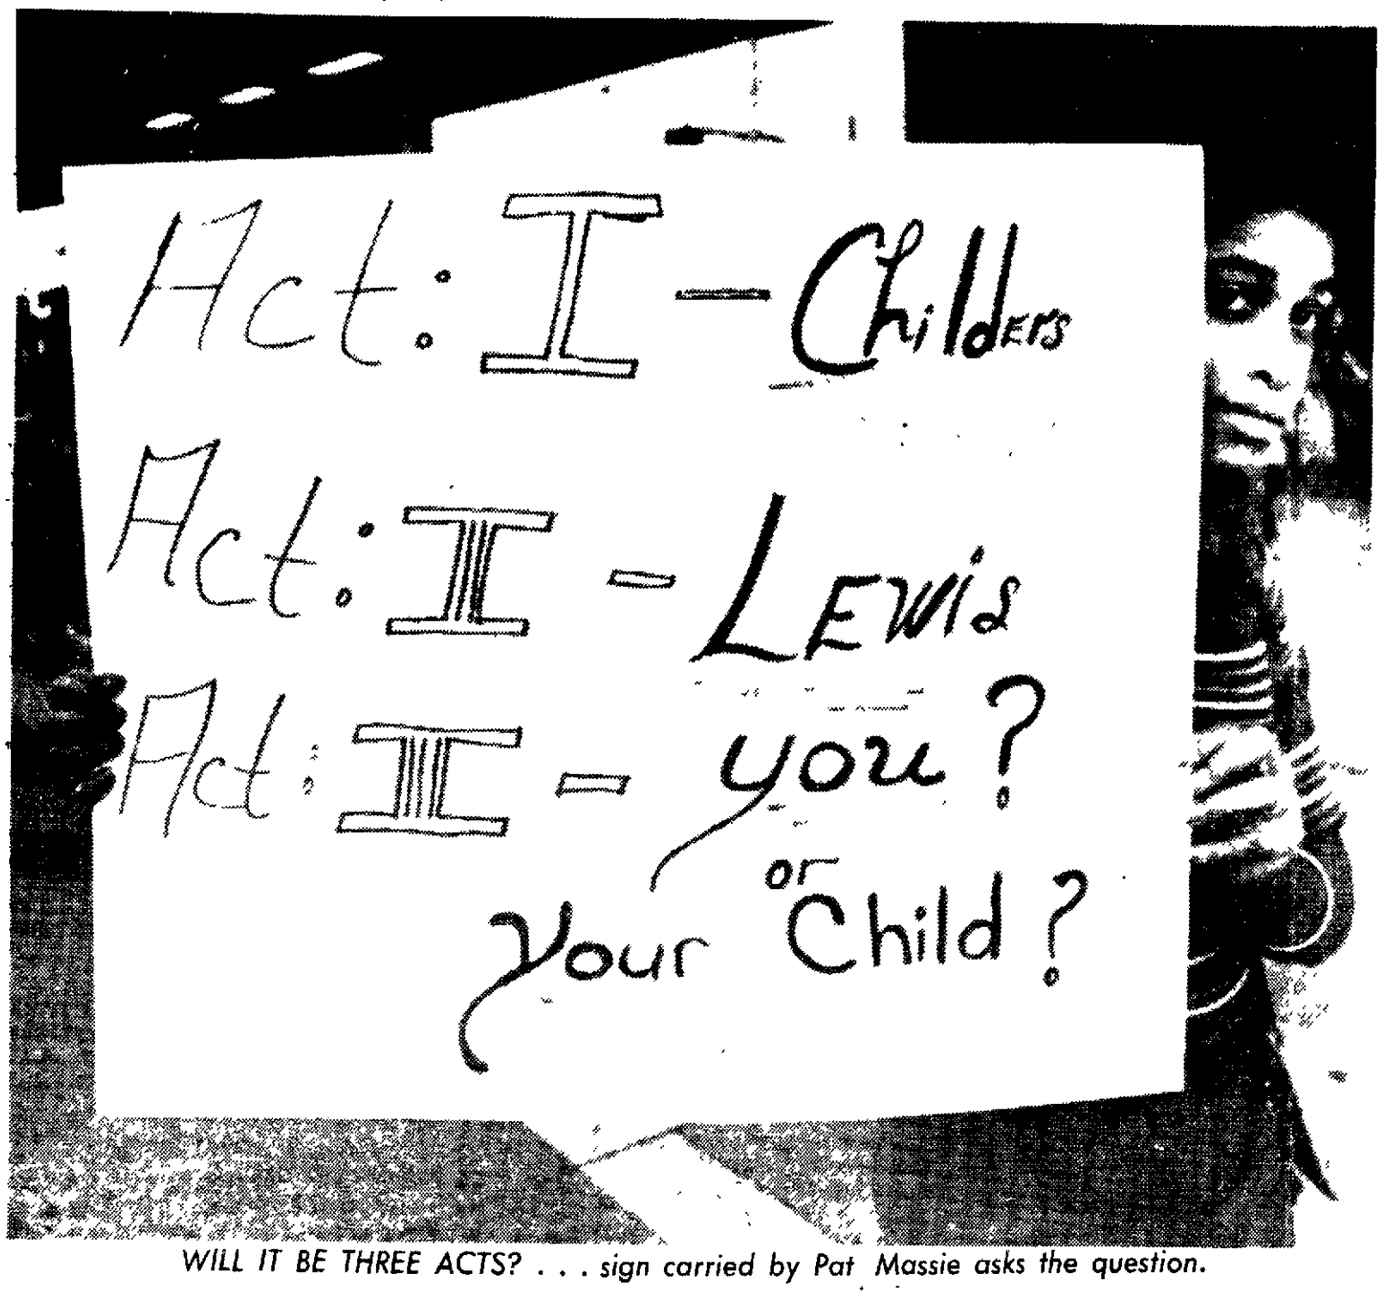

Not Against Odds

But the Sherdell Lewis described by friends and acquaintences was polite and mannerly, a likeable guy who went out of his way to help a friend. He didn't bow or scrape, but he certainly didn't fight back when the odds were improbable.

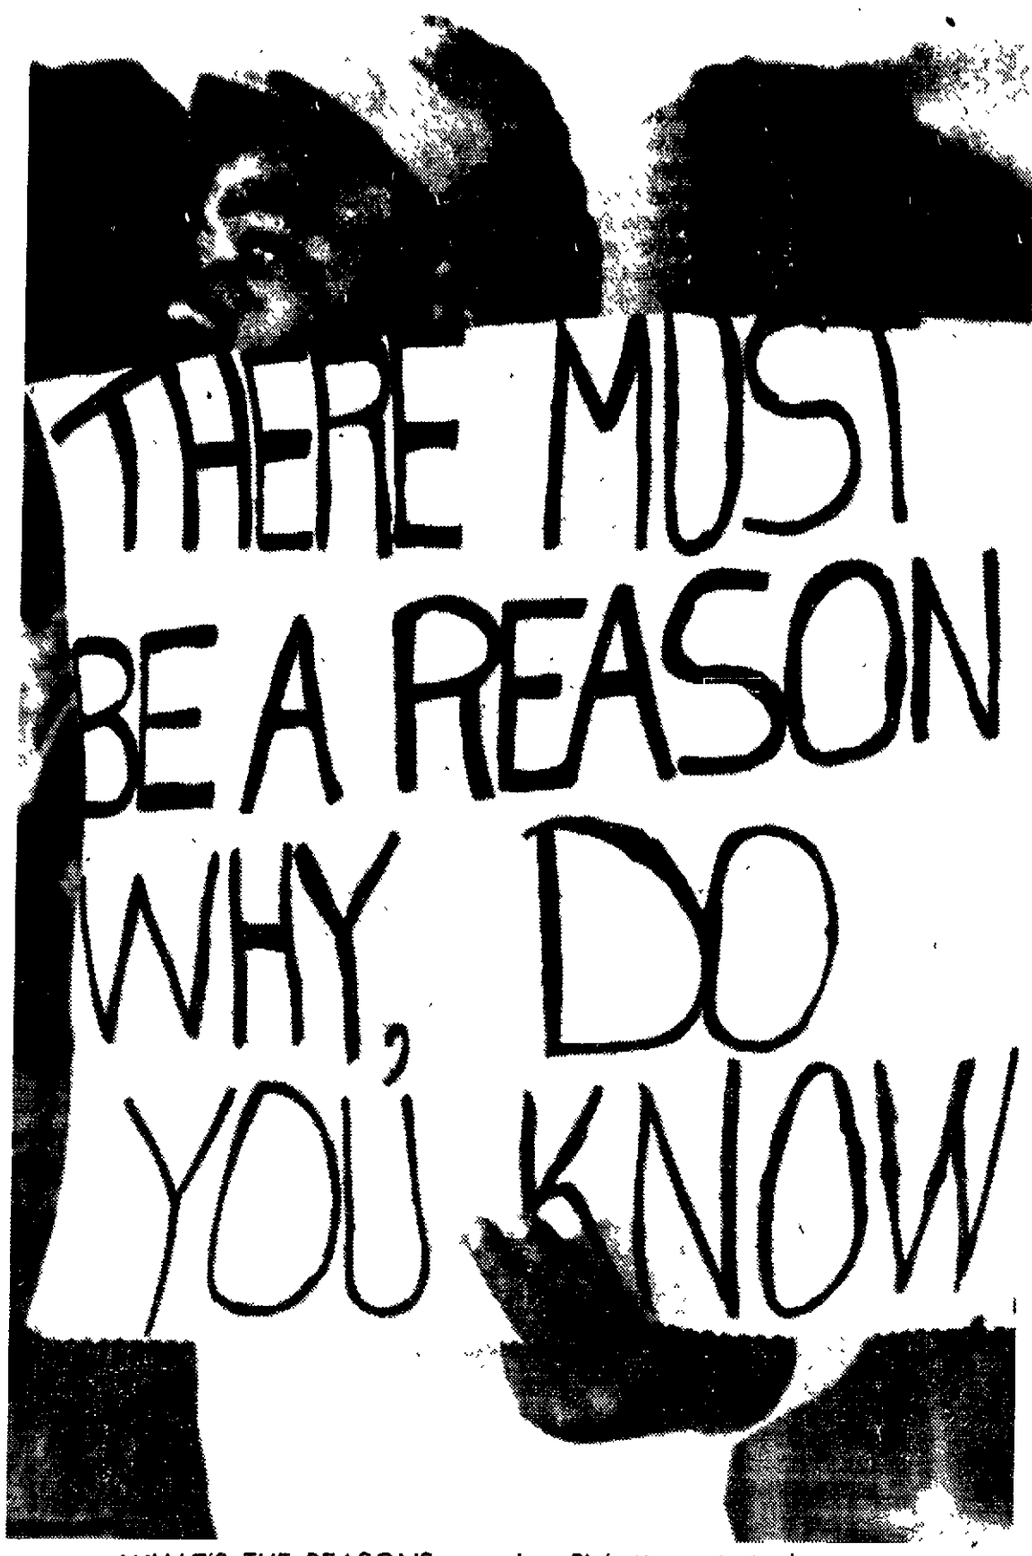

He was much too level-headed for that. In his numerous encounters with police, friends and family cannot remember that he ever used violence. "When he was busted, he was busted. He wouldn't try to fight his way out."

Meeting police officers at the door of his home with a gun in his hand was not Sherdell Lewis' style, every friend said.

"He was just too smart for that kind of typically dumb situation."

Most Witnesses Against Corps' Waterway Takeover Proposal

Omaha (AP) — (AP) — About 30 witnesses representing environmental groups, states, cities, federal agencies and private interests testified at a public hearing on new Army Corps of Engineers water regulations here Thursday afternoon.

Most didn't like what the corps proposed.

The hearings concerned the corps' "interim final" regulations covering Section 404 of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act Amendments of 1972.

That section provides authority for the corps to establish regulations controlling discharge of dredged or fill material in the waters of the U. S., including requirements that a permit be obtained for discharge. The corps originally limited its jurisdiction to the historical definition of navigable waters used since 1899. That definition described such waters as those which are or could be used for navigation, or those which had been so used in the past.

However, a decision by a U. S. District Court in Washington, D.C., overturned the corps' original limited interpretation of the legislation and required the corps to expand its authority to all waters of the nation.

Under the interpretation, a three stage program has been established under which permits have been required since July 25, 1975, for navigable waters as previously interpreted. After July 1, 1976, permits would be required for primary tributaries of those streams and lakes. After July 1, 1977, the regulations provide that permits would be required for all waters of the U. S. up to the headwaters area.

Brig. Gen. Kenneth E. McIntyre, who chaired the hearing, described that as roughly the point at which a man could leap the stream.

A number of groups and states have become concerned that the revised regulations would substantially infringe upon private property rights and result in a newly-created influx of paper work to the federal government.

McIntyre said before the hearings began that the corps would, over the next three years, expand its jurisdiction from the current 50,000 to 100,000 miles of streams to 3.5 million miles.

He estimated that the corps would be required to issue 40,000 to 50,000 permits a year.

Some witnesses questioned whether those permits might have to be issued for such things as normal farming operations, such as plowing, erosion control techniques and other minor normal activity.

McIntyre said the regulations specifically exempted normal farming operations from the permit requirement, however some witnesses questioned whether that could later be changed by court or administrative action.

The hearings Thursday afternoon resulted in an unusual alliance between the corps and environmental groups. Representatives of the Sierra Club and the Audubon Society supported the substantially strengthened corps regulations.

Madison, Wis., attorney Patricia Record, representing the Sierra Club, said the new regulations come much closer to implementing congressional intent than those overturned by the court.

However, she said the definition of wetlands as advanced by the corps was overly restrictive and should be expanded. She also asked for inclusion of intermittent streams and tributaries, which she said would not be included under current regulation.

Michael McCoy, representing the Omaha Audubon Society, also expressed support for strengthened corps regulations.

Kansas Lt. Gov. Shelby Smith led off the testimony Thursday afternoon, saying the regulations would prohibit any emergency action on the part of the states without going through a cumbersome application procedure.

Smith said Kansas would consider all legal and legislative methods available to it to counter the effect of the regulations.

William Marks, representing Michigan Gov. William Milliken, said the state viewed the regulations as "unwarranted, unnecessary and unwanted in Michigan."

The regulations, he said are "clearly beyond public comprehension and interpretation."

That complaint was a common one, with a number of witnesses complaining that the regulations would require legal assistance and no landowner would be able to take action without it.

Eugene Horton, who represented Missouri Gov. Christopher Bond, said Bond felt the regulations conflict with President Ford's stated position of ending the "proliferation of red tape" in government.

William Hoppner, representing Neb. Gov. J. James Exon, said his comments were intended as an attempt to "minimize potential bureaucratic harassment for the landowners of Nebraska."

Exon's concern, said Hoppner, is not large landowners, but "individual farmers, ranchers and landowners."

Dr. Ken Holtje, a U.S. Forest Service employe from Milwaukee, Wis., said the Eastern Region of the service estimated that it would be required to file 3,200 permit applications per year at a cost of $3.5 million for the preparation of the applications alone.

Also testifying Thursday afternoon were representatives of various units of state government from Colorado, Minnesota and South Dakota.

Another session was scheduled for Thursday night.

Job Placement Record Kept Job Corps Going

By PATTY BEUTLER
Star Staff Writer

An impressive job placement record is what saved the Job Corps during the years it was a political target, the director of Excelsior Springs Women's Job Corps Center said Thursday.

In Lincoln for an all-day seminar with Job Service of Nebraska, Jim Purgason said his center last year had a 90% total placement effort. For those who graduated from one of the center's training programs, the figure stands at 97%.

"When we were really under fire, placement was the one thing we could point to with pride," he said. "It really kept us in business."

Since Job Corps became detached from the Office of Economic Opportunity, the program got out of the political scene it used to be in, Purgason said. Now under the Department of Labor, the corps, says Purgason, stands on good, solid ground.

With close to 10 years' experience directing Job Corps centers, Purgason took over the Excelsior Springs center just six months ago. The center operates with a $2.5 million budget.

The 28-acre former Veterans Administration hospital facility is equipped to handle 405 girls in the 16-22 age range for job training in a number of fields, from health services and clerical work to welding and electromechanics.

Purgason says about 50% of the girls attending the center eventually graduate.

"We're taking people who have not been successful or had good experiences in other programs or public schools," he said. "We serve a population that has no other place to go."

However, Purgason emphasized that the center is not a social rehabilitation center, but simply a training center. "We're not their home. We don't intend to be or want to be."

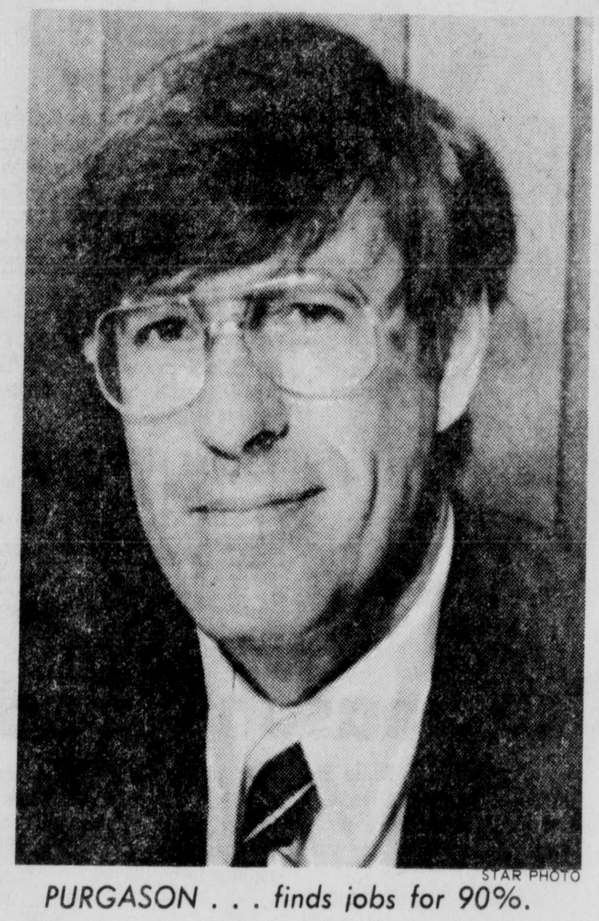

Purgason would like to see his center place more emphasis on skill training programs for women. He's very proud of the 8-month-old welding program, which requires 600 hours of training for graduation. All the graduates, however, have found jobs with an average hourly pay of $6.

As for the center's operation, the director said "everything goes up but the funding." His goal is to maintain quality training with the limited financial resources.

Unemployment rates, Purgason said, are hurting the center as much as everyone else. "The whole fruit of our program is placement."

The recession, however, has forced the staff to work much harder to find quality jobs.

"It makes us hustle a little bit more. We're aware that our training has to be good because we have to compete for jobs," he added.

Scrapping Of $6.3 Million Douglas County Jail Eyed

Omaha (UPI) — Douglas County Commissioner Michael Albert has submitted a proposal to scrap an estimated $6.3 million county jail project in Omaha.

Albert plans to present the proposal during a special meeting of the five commissioners next Tuesday prior to the regular board meeting. He submitted his plan in a letter to Marvin Ruud of the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration's Kansas City regional office.

In the letter, Albert suggested transferring the $2 million in federal money set aside for construction of the jail to the state to be used to build a state reformatory in Omaha.

"Our state government has allocated $4 million to build a men's reformatory in Douglas County," Albert said. "The best use of taxpayer dollars is to house the county's misdemeanant population and the state's felon population, together, but separate, in the same facility."

Albert said the present sentenced misdemeanant population is approximately 140 in Douglas County. He said community-based work release programs such as the one now operating in Omaha would be expanded so as to reduce this population "by an achievable goal of 40%."

Figures indicate, Albert said, 55% of the sentenced misdemeanants are employed at the time of their incarceration which "provides an immediate work release population."

In addition, Albert would reconvert the sixth floor of the old Douglas County Courthouse, now the Hall of Justice, into single units for the pre-trial population.

"This is close to the courts system, and a location acceptable to all," Albert said. "Remodeling costs are fiscally realistic for the county."

With "close cooperation" from Omaha organizations working with offenders, Albert said he was "confident that the daily pre-trial population can be significantly reduced."

"I personally have taken steps to coordinate all of these pretrial efforts," Albert said, "and I am convinced that there is a total commitment on the part of the groups involved."

The present average daily pretrial population is 100, Albert said, and the "achievable short term goal is 60. The sixth floor of the Hall of Justice is adequate for this number."

Albert said he was pursuing "immediate interim alternatives" for the county's female offender population "because the facility in which they are housed is beyond belief."

"No matter what action is taken," Albert said, "better quarters for the female population must be found immediately."

Albert said he doesn't want to lose the $2 million the LEAA has set aside for Douglas County.

"I do, however, want to see it spent more wisely for a model correctional system," Albert said, "and not just a facility."

When the county received a grant adjustment last April 28 for its model correctional system, the LEAA issued three special conditions to be met by the county before Sept. 30.

The county has hired a corrections director and the corrections department has submitted a document which Albert said "may or may not be a comprehensive corrections plan."

The third requirement was the action scheduled for next Tuesday — the board's providing a resolution indicating that the county will commit funds necessary to complete the project.

Albert called his proposal a "viable alterntive to the current corrections direction in Douglas County."

Women At Creighton Harassment Victims

Omaha (AP) — A spokesman says recent sexual harassment incidents have left the 72 female staff members, students and faculty of the Creighton University School of Dentistry "very scared and upset."

Paula Sortino, administrative assistant to the dean, said Wednesday at least four incidents have taken place in the past two weeks. She said women have been either sexually assaulted, chased or abused verbally as they walked between the school and a parking lot two blocks to the west.

Mrs. Sortino said three of the victims, who are Creighton employes, reported the incidents to police. She said a fourth victim, a student, had not reported the incident to police.

The victims said the problems stem from inadequate parking around the new dental school.

Construction of the new Creighton-St. Joseph Hospital has eliminated some parking areas near the dental school and the women have been assigned spaces in two parking lots west of the school.

The victims' descriptions of their assailants varied, but all said they ranged in age from the mid-teens to early 20s.

A spokesman said Creighton has started running a shuttle bus between the school and the two parking lots, security patrols have been beefed up and male students have been asked to escort women.

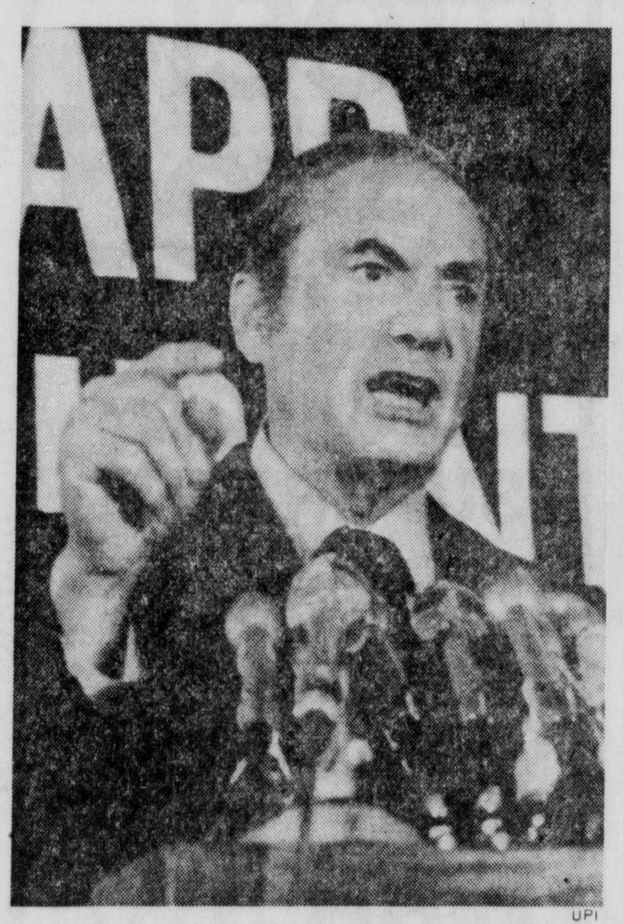

Mrs. Sortino said the women requested they be alloted spaces in two patient parking lots less than a half block from the school but the request was denied.

Dean Robert Vining said that was "out of the question because we simply don't have the room. He said "every possible measure" has been taken to protect the women.

Police told Mrs. Sortino and the victims that special attention will be given to the area.

SHAPP . . . called dark horse, underdog.

Shapp Launches Bid For Demo Nomination

Washington (AP) — Gov. Milton J. Shapp formally launched his bid for the Democratic presidential nomination with a warning that unstable government will result unless government fiscal policies are drastically changed.

The 63-year-old, two-term governor of Pennsylvania told newsmen here that "unless we stimulate the economy, you'll have a crisis in this country of such proportions that you'll have an unstable government."

Shapp's formal entry into the race followed an informal announcement earlier this year.

"The prime cause of inflation today is not federal spending to take care of human needs," he said. "The prime cause is that insufficient investment in this nation has driven our productivity rate down 66%.

"And it is the cozy relationship that presently exists between the White House and the special interests which is driving up the price of food, housing and fuel, in a relentless search for excessive profits.

"We can have economic growth while controlling inflation if we are willing to stand up to those megabusinesses which profit excessively from our present misfortune," Shapp said.

If Shapp wins the nomination, he would be the first major party ominee of the Jewish faith.

But he's considered a long shot due to lack of national recognition.

"People say he's a dark horse, an underdog," said Norval Reece, his campaign manager. "So what? Everybody's an underdog. His chances for the nomination are much better than many of the people running."

Including Shapp, there are are eight announced candidates for the nomination but Shapp sees only Alabama Gov. George Wallace, not yet officially announced, as going to next summer's convention with a sizeable bloc of delegates.

"I don't see any of the other candidates who are in any stronger position than myself," he says.

That position could be weakened by Shapp's troubles in the state administration. He has fired three top state officials since 1973 amid rumors of scandals.

Shapp himself is to testify before a federal grand jury in Pittsburgh Oct. 9 on what happened to a $20,000 cash contribution from a contractor in his 1970 campaign. The money, reportedly passed to an aide, was not listed on existing campaign records.

Marijuana Put On Low Priority

Washington (UPI) — President Ford's domestic council drug review task force has recommended that a low priority be given to enforcement of marijuana laws, it was learned Thursday.

The council, in a 150-page report delivered to the President but not yet made public, said the widespread use of marijuana and the "relatively low social cost" associated with use of the drug justified "de-emphasizing simple possession and use of marijuana in law enforcement efforts . . ."

Portions of the report were obtained by UPI.

The position outlined by the domestic council is essentially similar to that of marijuana reform advocates who have been lobbying for "decriminalization" of marijuana laws by removing criminal sanctions and making possession of small amounts for personal use a civil violation like a parking ticket.

Headed by Richard D. Parsons, the associate director and counsel of the domestic council, the 18-member task force included such drug abuse experts as Dr. Robert L. DuPont, director of the National Institute on Drug Abuse; John R. Bartel, until last May 30 the administrator of the Drug Enforcement Administration; and, as an ex officio member, former Pennsylvania Gov. Raymond P. Shafer, who also headed the National Commission on Marijuana and Drug Abuse.

The report, which dealt with the whole range of drug abuse problems, contained no legislative recommendations.

But in a ranking of "drug priorities," the task force said that marijuana was a low priority across the board, including the size of the problem and the severity of both personal and social consequences. It gave heroin a high priority.

"On the basis of this analysis," the report said, "the task force recommends that priority in federal efforts in both supply and demand reduction be directed toward those drugs which inherently pose a greater risk to the individuals and to society . . ."

At the same time, however, the task force said the ranking "does not mean that all efforts should be devoted to the high priority drugs, and none to the others.

"However, when resource constraints force a choice, the choice should be made in favor of the higher priority drugs."

It cited as an example that in choosing whom to treat, "We should encourage judges and other community officials not to overburden existing health facilities with casual users of marijuana who do not exhibit serious health consequences."

In addition, it suggested law enforcement officers concentrate their efforts on Mexico rather than Miami because the former is "an important source" of heroin and "dangerous drugs" whereas in Miami "an agent is more likely to make a cocaine or marijuana case."

DEA Refuses To Relax U.S. Marijuana Controls

Washington (UPI) — The Drug Enforcement Administration Thursday officially declined to relax federal controls on Marijuana.

Two groups — the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws and the American Public Health Association — had petitioned the now-defunct Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs for the relaxation.

The petition asked that the DEA remove all controls on marijuana or, if this was refused, change its status so it can be sold legally across drugstore counters as so-called "schedule 1" substance, meaning one that has no currently accepted medical use.

Burlington Gets OK To Combine Mobile Agencies

The Nebraska Public Service Commission said Thursday it has approved a request from the Burlington Northern Railroad to combine mobile agencies at Central City and Loup City.

The commission said it also approved a request to remove station facilities at Loup City.

The combined mobile agency will serve the towns of Palmer, St. Paul, Farwell, Ashton, Loup City, Arcadia, Comstock, Sargent, Cushing, Wolbach, Greeley, Ord, Elyria and Burwell.

Brandt To Stay At Lincoln Post

Ronald Brandt, Lincoln Public Schools associate superintendent for instruction, said Thursday he is no longer a candidate for the superintendency of the Cedar Rapids, Iowa, Community Schools.

"I'm very, very pleased to be staying in Lincoln," Brandt said, noting he's enjoying his post here "immensely." He had explored the superintendent position as a career advancement opportunity.

High School, College Drug Use Studied

New York (AP) — A survey of high school and college students across the country shows that 48% of the high school and 64% of the college students have experimented with drugs, including marijuana, at least once or twice, the magazine Pyschology Today said Thursday.

In addition, the magazine said, 26% of the high school students and 41% of the college students consider themselves regular drug users.

An article by pollster Daniel Yankelovich detailed a survey of 1,987 high school and college students and compared the pattern of behavior between what he called users and abusers.

The survey showed that 6% of the high school students and 8% of the college students smoke marijuana daily. Yankelovich said, however, that while college students smoke more marijuana, they use other drugs less. "High school drug users are more likely to have regular highs from psychedelics (LSD), barbiturates, cocaine and even heroin, as well as marijuana, several times a month," he wrote.

Among other findings:

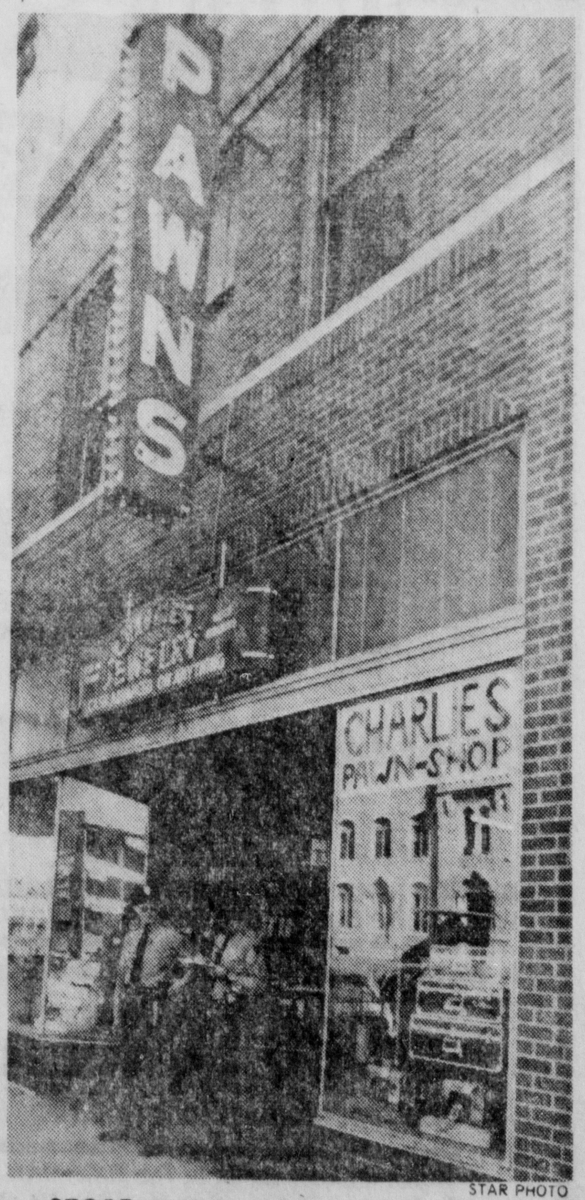

—Students do not turn to drugs instead of alcohol, but in addition to drinking. Fifty-eight per cent of the high school and 79% of the college students said they drank alcoholic beverages.

—Eighty-nine per cent of the abusers and 41% of the casual users buy drugs to keep on hand; 51% of the abusers and 14% of the casual users sell drugs for profit.

—Sixty-six per cent of the abusers and 37% of the users have run away from home; 36% of the abusers and 16% of the users have failed courses at school.

Yankelovich said those students who do not use drugs can be broken down into two groups: the "moral nonusers," representing 35% of all students, who identify with traditional values and life-styles and believe drugs represent a violation of that standard, and "conscious nonusers," representing 23% of all students, who do not identify with the traditional, but have decided against drugs for other reasons.

Guns Stolen From Pawn Shop

STORE . . . two robbers fled on foot.

Two men tied up a salesman at Charlie's Jewelry and Pawn Shop, 909 O St., Thursday afternoon, then put 17 handguns in a suitcase and fled on foot through downtown Lincoln, police reported.

Police said the men also took the salesman's diamond ring and a billfold containing "more than $200."

Omaha police arrested two suspects with guns in their possession at an Omaha business about 8:45 p.m., police said.

Salesman Max Sherman said he was alone in the store about 5 p.m. when the men entered and said they wanted to buy a tape recorder. He had shown them several models, Sherman said, when one man pointed a .22 caliber handgun at him and the other grabbed him from behind.

According to Sherman, the man said, "Don't struggle or I'll shoot you."

Sherman said the men then tied him up in a back room, took his billfold and keys and went to the front of the store where they took the guns from a showcase. Fifteen rifles were left on a gun rack near the showcase.

A customer entered the store about five minutes after the robbery, heard Sherman's calls and untied him, Sherman said.

Police said the suspects walked about a half block west on O St., then turned south on 9th. They were carrying a blue suitcase, which they took from the store to conceal the guns, police said.

Most Witnesses Against Corps' Waterway Takeover Proposal

Omaha (AP) — (AP) — About 30 witnesses representing environmental groups, states, cities, federal agencies and private interests testified at a public hearing on new Army Corps of Engineers water regulations here Thursday afternoon.

Most didn't like what the corps proposed.

The hearings concerned the corps' "interim final" regulations covering Section 404 of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act Amendments of 1972.

That section provides authority for the corps to establish regulations controlling discharge of dredged or fill material in the waters of the U. S., including requirements that a permit be obtained for discharge. The corps originally limited its jurisdiction to the historical definition of navigable waters used since 1899. That definition described such waters as those which are or could be used for navigation, or those which had been so used in the past.

However, a decision by a U. S. District Court in Washington, D.C., overturned the corps' original limited interpretation of the legislation and required the corps to expand its authority to all waters of the nation.

Under the interpretation, a three stage program has been established under which permits have been required since July 25, 1975, for navigable waters as previously interpreted. After July 1, 1976, permits would be required for primary tributaries of those streams and lakes. After July 1, 1977, the regulations provide that permits would be required for all waters of the U. S. up to the headwaters area.

Brig. Gen. Kenneth E. McIntyre, who chaired the hearing, described that as roughly the point at which a man could leap the stream.

A number of groups and states have become concerned that the revised regulations would substantially infringe upon private property rights and result in a newly-created influx of paper work to the federal government.

McIntyre said before the hearings began that the corps would, over the next three years, expand its jurisdiction from the current 50,000 to 100,000 miles of streams to 3.5 million miles.

He estimated that the corps would be required to issue 40,000 to 50,000 permits a year.

Some witnesses questioned whether those permits might have to be issued for such things as normal farming operations, such as plowing, erosion control techniques and other minor normal activity.

McIntyre said the regulations specifically exempted normal farming operations from the permit requirement, however some witnesses questioned whether that could later be changed by court or administrative action.

The hearings Thursday afternoon resulted in an unusual alliance between the corps and environmental groups. Representatives of the Sierra Club and the Audubon Society supported the substantially strengthened corps regulations.

Madison, Wis., attorney Patricia Record, representing the Sierra Club, said the new regulations come much closer to implementing congressional intent than those overturned by the court.

However, she said the definition of wetlands as advanced by the corps was overly restrictive and should be expanded She also asked for inclusion of intermittent streams and tributaries, which she said would not be included under current regulation.

Michael McCoy, representing the Omaha Audubon Society, also expressed support for strengthened corps regulations.

Kansas Lt. Gov. Shelby Smith led off the testimony Thursday afternoon, saying the regulations would prohibit any emergency action on the part of the states without going through a cumbersome application procedure.

Smith said Kansas would consider all legal and legislative methods available to it to counter the effect of the regulations.

William Marks, representing Michigan Gov. William Milliken, said the state viewed the regulations as "unwarranted, unnecessary and unwanted in Michigan."

The regulations, he said are "clearly beyond public comprehension and interpretation."

That complaint was a common one, with a number of witnesses complaining that the regulations would require legal assistance and no landowner would be able to take action without it.

Eugene Horton, who represented Missouri Gov. Christopher Bond, said Bond felt the regulations conflict with President Ford's stated position of ending the "proliferation of red tape" in government.

William Hoppner, representing Neb. Gov. J. James Exon, said his comments were intended as an attempt to "minimize potential bureaucratic harassment for the landowners of Nebraska."

Exon's concern, said Hoppner, is not large landowners, but "individual farmers, ranchers and landowners."

Dr. Ken Holtje, a U.S. Forest Service employe from Milwaukee, Wis., said the Eastern Region of the service estimated that it would be required to file 3,200 permit applications per year at a cost of $3.5 million for the preparation of the applications alone.

Also testifying Thursday afternoon were representatives of various units of state government from Colorado, Minnesota and South Dakota

Another session was scheduled for Thursday night.

Job Placement Record Kept Job Corps Going

By PATTY BEUTLER
Star Staff Writer

An impressive job placement record is what saved the Job Corps during the years it was a political target, the director of Excelsior Springs Women's Job Corps Center said Thursday.

In Lincoln for an all-day seminar with Job Service of Nebraska, Jim Purgason said his center last year had a 90% total placement effort. For those who graduated from one of the center's training programs, the figure stands at 97%.

"When we were really under fire, placement was the one thing we could point to with pride," he said "It really kept us in business."

Since Job Corps became detached from the Office of Economic Opportunity, the program got out of the political scene it used to be in, Purgason said. Now under the Department of Labor, the corps, says Purgason, stands on good, solid ground.

With close to 10 years' experience directing Job Corps centers, Purgason took over the Excelsior Springs center just six months ago. The center operates with a $2.5 million budget.

The 28-acre former Veterans Administration hospital facility is equipped to handle 405 girls in the 16-22 age range for job training in a number of fields, from health services and clerical work to welding and electromechanics.

Purgason says about 50% of the girls attending the center eventually graduate.

"We're taking people who have not been successful or had good experiences in other programs or public schools," he said. "We serve a population that has no other place to go."

However, Purgason emphasized that the center is not a social rehabilitation center, but simply a training center "We're not their home. We don't intend to be or want to be."

Purgason would like to see his center place more emphasis on skill training programs for women. He's very proud of the 8-month-old welding program, which requires 600 hours of training for graduation. All the graduates, however, have found jobs with an average hourly pay of $6.

As for the center's operation, the director said "everything goes up but the funding." His goal is to maintain quality training with the limited financial resources.

Unemployment rates, Purgason said, are hurting the center as much as everyone else. "The whole fruit of our program is placement."

The recession, however, has forced the staff to work much harder to find quality jobs.

"It makes us hustle a little bit more We're aware that our training has to be good because we have to compete for jobs," he added.

Scrapping Of $6.3 Million Douglas County Jail Eyed

Omaha (UPI) — Douglas County Commissioner Michael Albert has submitted a proposal to scrap an estimated $6 3 million county jail project in Omaha.

Albert plans to present the proposal during a special meeting of the five commissioners next Tuesday prior to the regular board meeting. He submitted his plan in a letter to Marvin Ruud of the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration's Kansas City regional office.

In the letter, Albert suggested transferring the $2 million in federal money set aside for construction of the jail to the state to be used to build a state reformatory in Omaha

"Our state government has allocated $4 million to build a men's reformatory in Douglas County," Albert said "The best use of taxpayer dollars is to house the county's misdemeanant population and the state's felon population, together, but separate in the same facility"

Albert said the present sentenced misdemeanant population is approximately 140 in Douglas County He said community-based work release programs such as the one now operating in Omaha would be expanded so as to reduce this population by an achievable goal of 40"

Figures indicate, Albert said, 55% of the sentenced misdemeanants are employed at the time of their incarceration which "provides an immediate work release population"

In addition, Albert would reconvert the sixth floor of the old Douglas County Courthouse, now the Hall of Justice, into single units for the pre-trial population

"This is close to the courts system, and a location acceptable to all Albert said "Remodeling costs are fiscally realistic for the county"

With close cooperation" from Omaha organizations working with offenders, Albert said he was "confident that the daily pre-trial population can be significantly reduced."

"I personally have taken steps to coordinate all of these pre-trial efforts," Albert said, "and I am convinced that there is a total commitment on the part of the groups involved"

The present average daily pre-trial population is 100. Albert said, and the achievable short term goal is 60. The sixth floor of the Hall of Justice is adequate for this number.

Albert said he was pursuing "immediate interim alternatives" for the county's female offender population "because the facility in which they are housed is beyond belief"

"No matter what action is taken," Albert said, "better quarters for the female population must be found immediately"

Albert said he doesn't want to lose the $2 million the LEAA has set aside for Douglas County

"I do, however, want to see it spent more wisely for a model correctional system," Albert said, "and not just a facility."

When the county received a grant adjustment last April 28 for its model correctional system, the LEAA issued three special conditions to be met by the county before Sept 30

The county has hired a corrections director and the corrections department has submitted a document which Albert said "may or may not be a comprehensive corrections plan"

The third requirement was the action scheduled for next Tuesday — the board's providing a resolution indicating that the county will commit funds necessary to complete the project

Albert called his proposal a "viable alterntive to the current corrections direction in Douglas County."

Women At Creighton Harassment Victims

Omaha (AP) — A spokesman says recent sexual harassment incidents have left the 72 female staff members, students and faculty of the Creighton University School of Dentistry "very scared and upset"

Paula Sortino, administrative assistant to the dean, said Wednesday at least four incidents have taken place in the past two weeks She said women have been either sexually assaulted, chased or abused verbally as they walked between the school and a parking lot two blocks to the west

Mrs Sortino said three of the victims, who are Creighton employes, reported the incidents to police She said a fourth victim, a student, had not reported the incident to police

The victims said the problems stem from inadequate parking around the new dental school

Construction of the new Creighton-St Joseph Hospital has eliminated some parking areas near the dental school and the women have been assigned spaces in two parking lots west of the school.

The victims' descriptions of their assailants varied, but all said they ranged in age from the mid-teens to early 20s

A spokesman said Creighton has started running a shuttle bus between the school and the two parking lots, security patrols have been beefed up and male students have been asked to escort women

Mrs Sortino said the women requested they be alloted spaces in two patient parking lots less than a half block from the school but the request was denied

Dean Robert Vining said that was "out of the question because we simply don't have the room He said "every possible measure" has been taken to protect the women

Police told Mrs Sortino and the victims that special attention will be given to the area

Tingelhoff Still Having Fun

Bloomington, Minn. (AP) — Mick Tingelhoff of the Minnesota Vikings has been snapping footballs for over 20 years and he's not a bit bored with what is perhaps the game's most unglamorous job.

"It's still fun and hopefully it will continue to be fun for a few more years," said Tingelhoff, who has played in 173 consecutive regular season National Football League games.

"And, I've been awfully lucky that I haven't had any serious injuries."

Tingelhoff has received an inordinate amount of criticism in recent years as being too small for today's pro game, but he annually wards off his challengers for the Viking's center job.

"But, I'm bullheaded," he insists.

"You can't believe everything they say about being too small or too old."

A free agent in 1962, Tingelhoff swiftly ascenced to All-Pro status.

He was first honored as All-Pro in his third full season, 1964, and wasn't displaced for seven years.

"Things have changed a lot since those early days though," said Tingelhoff.

"I even used to get a chance to run with the ball then and I sure don't anymore.

"Frank Tarkenton ran like a wild man in those days and you never knew who would end up with the ball."

The 6-2, 240-pound Tingelhoff came to Minnesota following a comparatively undistinguished career at Nebraska before the Cornhuskers attained their present level of notoriety.

"I don't think we ever won over three games while I was at Nebraska," said Tingelhoff. "We weren't very conspicuous."

Tingelhoff came off his father's farm to Lexington, Neb., for high school and immediately became a center on the high school team.

He's played the position ever since with some defensive work at linebacker in high school and briefly at Nebraska.

"I suppose my biggest thrill in football has been making the Viking team," said Tingelhoff, who is beginning his 14th season in the NFL.

"Beating the Packers the first time ranks right up there too. They're still my favorite team to beat."

Tingelhoff received the game ball following Minnesota's first victory over Green Bay and it's become his most prized possession.

"It's a classic," he said. "It's the only game ball I've ever won and there's not enough money in the world to buy it."

Tingelhoff has never had problems with poor snaps.

"Oh, I've bounced a couple," he said. "You can't blow too many though and stay around.

"A center is like a baseball pitcher. Everybody does it a little differently. You snap it any way you can."

Durability has been his chief ally however.

"You can't achieve greatness without it," said Vikings' Coach Bud Grant. "And Mick is certainly been one of the great ones."

Rainouts Jeopardize Season's End

By The Associated Press

The Boston Red Sox and Baltimore Orioles, who have been beating just about everyone all season, both lost to the rain Thursday night.

Because of it, it's possible that the regular baseball season could extend past the last day on Sunday.

A game between the Red Sox and Cleveland Indians and a scheduled twi-night doubleheader between the Orioles and Detroit Tigers were postponed Thursday, adding to the growing list of possible makeup games next week.

The double rainout left Boston with a 3½-game lead over runnerup Baltimore in the American League's Eastern Division. Boston's "magic number" for clinching the East title remained at four.

Boston now is scheduled to play a twi-nighter at home Friday against Cleveland, followed by single games Saturday and Sunday. The Orioles will play four games in New York over the weekend, also starting with a Friday twi-nighter.

If the division title is not decided after Sunday's games, the Orioles would return home to play a single makeup contest against the Chicago White Sox Monday night and the Red Sox would visit New York for a doubleheader against the Yankees.

If the race still isn't decided, the Tigers and Orioles would play a twi-nighter in Baltimore Tuesday.

Should the Orioles and the Red Sox finish in a first-place tie after all the regular season games are played, a one-game playoff in Baltimore would decide the title. The site was decided by a coin toss in the American League office.

Boston has been rained out three days in a row, twice in New York and once at home. Rain kept the Orioles idle Tuesday and Thursday, and permitted only one game of Wednesday's scheduled twi-nighter to be played.

East Volleyball Team Defeats Beatrice

Beatrice — Lincoln East's girls volleyball team ran its unbeaten string to five here Thursday by defeating Beatrice, 15-10, 15-9.

Mary Herrington led the Spartans with nine points. East also prevailed in the reserve game, 15-8, 15-4, to hike its record to 4-1.

Link Spikers Beat Ralston

Ralston — Jan Rathe and Debbie VanDusen paced the Lincoln High girl's volleyball team to a 15-12, 15-5 win over Ralston here Thursday afternoon.

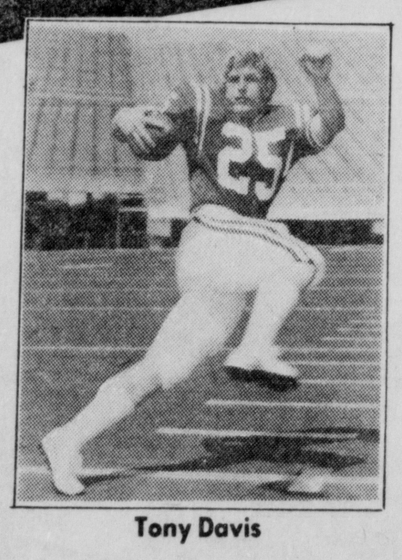

The Links, now 4-1 will host Grand Island next Tuesday.

The reserve team also posted a win of 15-7, 15-6 over the Ralston reserve team.

Tingelhoff Still Having Fun

Bloomington, Minn. (AP) — Mick Tingelhoff of the Minnesota Vikings has been snapping footballs for over 20 years and he's not a bit bored with what is perhaps the game's most unglamorous job.

"It's still fun and hopefully it will continue to be fun for a few more years," said Tingelhoff, who has played in 173 consecutive regular season National Football League games.

"And, I've been awfully lucky that I haven't had any serious injuries."

Tingelhoff has received an inordinate amount of criticism in recent years as being too small for today's pro game, but he annually wards off his challengers for the Viking's center job.

"But, I'm bullheaded," he insists.

"You can't believe everything they say about being too small or too old."

A free agent in 1962, Tingelhoff swiftly ascenced to All-Pro status.

He was first honored as All-Pro in his third full season, 1964, and wasn't displaced for seven years.

"Things have changed a lot since those early days though," said Tingelhoff.

"I even used to get a chance to run with the ball then and I sure don't anymore.

"Frank Tarkenton ran like a wild man in those days and you never knew who would end up with the ball."

The 6-2, 240-pound Tingelhoff came to Minnesota following a comparatively undistinguished career at Nebraska before the Cornhuskers attained their present level of notoriety.

"I don't think we ever won over three games while I was at Nebraska," said Tingelhoff. "We weren't very conspicuous."

Tingelhoff came off his father's farm to Lexington, Neb., for high school and immediately became a center on the high school team

He's played the position ever since with some defensive work at linebacker in high school and briefly at Nebraska.

"I suppose my biggest thrill in football has been making the Viking team," said Tingelhoff, who is beginning his 14th season in the NFL

"Beating the Packers the first time ranks right up there too. They're still my favorite team to beat."

Tingelhoff received the game ball following Minnesota's first victory over Green Bay and it's become his most prized possession.

"It's a classic," he said. "It's the only game ball I've ever won and there's not enough money in the world to buy it."

Tingelhoff has never had problems with poor snaps

"Oh, I've bounced a couple," he said. "You can't blow too many though and stay around.

"A center is like a baseball pitcher Everybody does it a little differently. You snap it any way you can."

Durability has been his chief ally however.

"You can't achieve greatness without it," said Vikings' Coach Bud Grant. "And Mick is certainly been one of the great ones."

AP

Minnesota Vikings center Mick Tingelhoff, a Lexington native and former Husker, still enjoys football.

Rainouts Jeopardize Season's End

By The Associated Press

The Boston Red Sox and Baltimore Orioles, who have been beating just about everyone all season, both lost to the rain Thursday night

Because of it, it's possible that the regular baseball season could extend past the last day on Sunday

A game between the Red Sox and Cleveland Indians and a scheduled twi-night doubleheader between the Orioles and Detroit Tigers were postponed Thursday, adding to the growing list of possible makeup games next week

The double rainout left Boston with a 3½-game lead over runnerup Baltimore in the American League's Eastern Division. Boston's "magic number" for clinching the East title remained at four

Boston now is scheduled to play a twi-nighter at home Friday against Cleveland followed by single games Saturday and Sunday The Orioles will play four games in New York over the weekend, also starting with a Friday twi-nighter

If the division title is not decided after Sunday's games, the Orioles would return home to play a single makeup contest against the Chicago White Sox Monday night and the Red Sox would visit New York for a doubleheader against the Yankees

If the race still isn't decided, the Tigers and Orioles would play a twi-nighter in Baltimore Tuesday

Should the Orioles and the Red Sox finish in a first-place tie after all the regular season games are played, a one-game playoff in Baltimore would decide the title The site was decided by a coin toss in the American League office.

Boston has been rained out three days in a row, twice in New York and once at home

Rain kept the Orioles idle Tuesday and Thursday, and permitted only one game of Wednesday's scheduled twi-nighter to be played.

East Volleyball Team Defeats Beatrice

Beatrice — Lincoln East's girls volleyball team ran its unbeaten string to five here Thursday by defeating Beatrice, 15-10, 15-9.

Mary Herrington led the Spartans with nine points. East also prevailed in the reserve game, 15-8, 15-4, to hike its record to 4-1

Link Spikers Beat Ralston

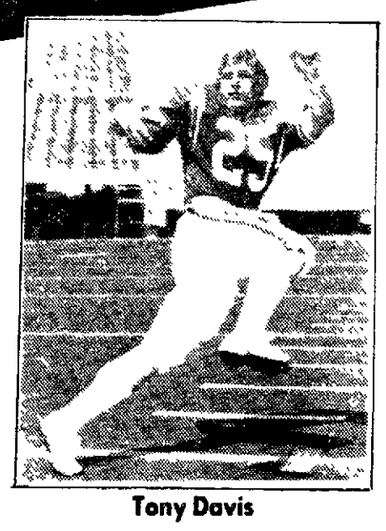

Ralston — Jan Rathe and Debbie VanDusen paced the Lincoln High girl's volleyball team to a 15-12, 15-5 win over Ralston here Thursday afternoon.

The Links, now 4-1 will host Grand Island next Tuesday.

The reserve team also posted a win of 15-7, 15-6 over the Ralston reserve team.

Nuggets, Nets Seeking To Start Merger Discussions

The Denver Nuggets and the New York Nets of the ABA, claiming that they can't go on losing money, confirmed that they want to join the National Basketball Association. But after attorneys presented the case for the joining a U.S. District Court judge said that the two teams could not do it unless they had his approval and the approval of the NBA player's union.

Two stories came out of the discussions following the Nuggets and Nets announcement. One said that the two teams are working with the consent of NBA commissioner Larry O'Brien to break the anti-trust suit preventing the leagues' merger. The other said that the manuever is a ploy to open merger discussions between the two leagues.

Dave DeBusschere, ABA commissioner said that if the two teams jumped the league they would be stripped of their holdings, including players and contracts.

The Kansas City Kings had all their basketball players under contract with the signing of Jimmy Walker, but now they face the uncertainty of Rick Adelman, who doctors say has an irregular heart beat.

Forward Rudy Hackett, who led Syracuse to the NCAA semifinals last season has signed with the Spirits of St. Louis in the ABA.

Harold Ballard, president of Maple Leaf Gardens in Toronto said he sent an associate to Houston in order to attempt a purchase of the Houston Rockets.

More than $100,000 a year is separating veteran guard Gail Goodrich and the Los Angeles Lakers in contract talks.

FOOTBALL

The pro football players swung into line to cast a top-heavy vote against accepting the latest owner's contract offer, but made it plain that they intended to keep faith with this weekend's NFL schedule, under an agreement not to strike until next Wednesday.

Former Oakland Raider quarterback and Southern California Sun Daryl Lamonica announced his retirement after 14 years in pro football.

Another Oakland Raider quarterback, Ken Stabler, won his release from the long-term contract he had with the WFL for $875,000. And with the release he also got to keep his $50,000 WFL bonus.

Calgary Stampeders' defensive coach Bob Baker was appointed head coach of the Canadian team following the dismissal of former head coach Jim Wood.

Owners of the Jacksonville Express of the WFL have lost about $500,000 already this season and have renegotiated contracts with most of their players according to a Florida newspaper report.

The NCAA formally instructed Michigan State to answer charges of football recruiting violations at an Oct. 13 hearing in Denver. The NCAA can take no disciplinary action against the Big Ten school until it is given a chance to respond to allegations of violations in recruiting a Youngstown, Ohio high school player.

U.S. District Judge William Stafford gave Florida State linebacker Waldo Williams permission to play in the remainder of FSU's games this season, delaying a decision on the athlete's law suit against the NCAA until late November.

Iowa State starting quarterback Buddy Hardeman pleaded innocent to a charge of resisting execution of process in connection with a speeding ticket.

BASEBALL

A postponement was granted in the hearing on a criminal complaint being sought against Baltimore Orioles' pitcher Ross Grimsley for assault and battery with a dangerous weapon — a baseball.

Lindy McDaniel of Hollis, Oklahoma, who became a reknowned relief pitcher with the St. Louis Cardinals, Chicago Cubs, New York Yankees and the San Francisco Giants as well as the Omaha Royals retired. McDaniel, who played for 21 years, the last two with the Kansas City Royals, set a National League record for pitching in 225 consecutive games without an error. He had a 5-1 record with the Royals this season.

Morning Briefing

A Sports Roundup

Lenth To Kick For ISU

From News Wires

Iowa State coach Earle Bruce named senior Doug Lenth to replace sophomore Scott Kollman as placekicker as the Cyclones prepared Thursday for Saturday night's contest at Florida State.

Bruce said Rick Blabolil would continue to handle the punting chores.

Oklahoma State

Gary Irions continued to handle kickoffs in the absence of the injured Abby Daigle, but Oklahoma State coach Jim Stanley said, "Robert Turner could kick off if we need him."

Brent Robinson and Mike Mitchell are set to handle extra point kicks and field goals against North Texas KState.

More Sports, Page 26

Kansas State

Kansas State coach Ellis Rainsberger disclosed Thursday that quarterback Joe Hatcher had sufficiently recovered from bruised ribs to start against Wake Forest, although reserve quarterback Tom Merrifield "looked very good this week."

Missouri

Missouri coach Al Onofrio said second team defensive back Mike Newman and reserve nose guard Bill Anderson would suit up against Wisconsin.

Newman has been nursing a hamstring, and Anderson a sore neck muscle.

Kansas

Kansas is at virtually full strength for Saturday's home game against Oregon State.

The only player expected to miss the contest because of injury is backup wide receiver Waddell Smith.

Kansas' and Missouri's junior varsity squads are scheduled to play here Friday afternoon.

Miami Eyeing Upset

MIAMI (AP) — The University of Miami, which lost a tough 24-20 decision to Oklahoma two years ago, is hoping to catch the top-ranked Sooners napping again in their rematch Friday night.

The Hurricanes, 38-23 losers to Georgia Tech in their football opener last week, have been rated as much as a 33-point underdog against Oklahoma.

But Miami cornerback Eldridge Mitchell said, "We came close to beating them two years ago because they underestimated us and they're gonna do it again looking ahead to their Big Eight opener against Colorado."

The Oklahoma-Miami game will be broadcast by KFAB starting at 7 p.m., CDT.

The Sooners were a week away from their annual battle with Texas when Miami met them in 1973. The Hurricanes jumped ahead 20-7 at halftime and the unfurling at halftime of a "Beat Texas" banner by Sooner fans caused one Oklahoma official to say, "Well, at least we'll both get beat by the same team."

Miami had opened its 1973 campaign by shocking Texas 20-15.

"That last game will help us psychologically," said Mitchell. But despite the closeness of the final 1973 score, Oklahoma dominated Miami with 471 yards total offense to 159.

A couple of players for the University of Pittsburgh, annihilated 46-10 last week by Oklahoma, gave Miami no chance.

"My advice to Miami is that they should let the Dolphins come in and play this game for them," said Pitt linebacker Arnie Weatherington.

Pitt running back Elliott Walker, who hails from Miami, said, "Miami needs a miracle."

Weatherington was in on 17 tackles trying to stop Oklahoma's backs, including Joe Washington, Elvis Peacock, Horace Ivory and Jim Littrell.

"If Miami's defense can hold all those dudes, they'll probably get beat by only 25 points," said Weatherington. "But if they have a breakdown, the game could get out of hand and Okalahoma could score 60 or 70 points."

The thought of the Sooners dominating the game has Miami Coach Carl Selmer thinking twice about the NCAA's 48-man traveling squad limit.

"If a team gets way ahead and they're beating you easily, you'd rather they would have brought more players," said Selmer, figuring a bigger squad would enable Oklahoma to use more substitutes.

Selmer, a former aide at Nebraska, recalled a 77-7 Cornhusker victory at Army in 1972 when Big Eight teams had 50-man traveling squads.

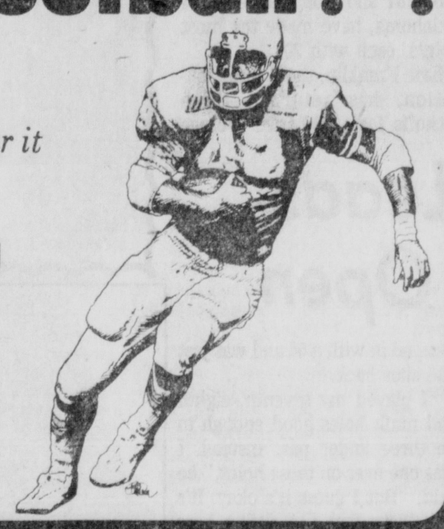

"In running up such a big score, our excuse was we could only bring 50 people," said Selmer.

CU's Kunz Leading Big Eight

Kansas City (AP) — Terry Kunz, Colorado's pulverizing fullback, continues to lead Big Eight Conference rushers with a game average of 141.5 yards. He has carried 48 times for 283 yards.

Two Oklahoma State players trail Kunz. Terry Miller has a game average of 121 yards and Robert Turner 115 yards.

David Williams, the Colorado quarterback, leads in both passing and total offense.

He has connected on 22 of 33 passes for 253 yards and is followed by Missouri's Steve Pisarkiewicz, with 16 of 35 for 236 yards, and Terry Luck of Nebraska, 20 of 37 for 219.

Williams has also rushed for 178 yards, giving him a 215.5-yard game average in the total offense department.

Stan Ross of Kansas State has taken over the top spot in pass receiving, having caught nine tosses for 125 yards.

Don Hasselbeck of Colorado is second with seven receptions for 64 yards.

Forry Smith of Iowa State and Bobby Thomas of Nebraska are tied for third, each with six catches.

Cliff Parsley of Oklahoma State is setting the pace in punting, kicking seven times for 330 yards or an average of 47.1 yards.

Thomas has the best average on punt returns, 12.2 yards on nine tries.

Two kickers, Tim Gibbons of Missouri and Tony Dirienzo of Oklahoma, have made the most points, each with 20.

Eric Franklin, the Kansas sensation, has returned three kickoffs for a 35.7-yard average to lead that department.

Missouri's Kenny Downing has intercepted two passes, the most in that category.

Barber Leads Sahara Open

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Old pro Miller Barber, 44, balding and paunchy, exploited near-perfect playing conditions for a career-best, eight-under-par 63 and established a one-stroke lead Thursday in the first round of the $135,000 Sahara Invitational Golf Tournament.

"When you reach my age, you've got to have the heat to take the aches out of the old bones," Barber said of the sunny, 90-degree, almost windless weather that blessed this desert playground.

"I haven't played like that since I was 16," said Barber, who had seven birdies, an eagle and a single bogey—he missed a three-foot par-saving putt—in his superlative effort over the 6,800-yard Sahara-Nevada Country Club course.

With only two more individual events this season, Barber needs a quick victory to keep alive a string of one tournament title a year for the last eight years. Only the absent Jack Nicklaus has a longer current string.

"I've come close here before," Barber said. "Maybe this is my year."

Even with the best score of his 16-year career, Barber could stake out only a single shot lead, however, as the ideal conditions contributed to some of the lowest scoring on the tour this season.

Bob Wynn, a happy-go-lucky 35-year-old who has yet to win, romped in with a 64 and was just one shot back.

"I played my seventh, eighth and ninth holes good enough to be three under par. Instead, I was one over on those holes," he said. "But I guess it's okay. It's not every day I'm sitting here talking about a 64."

Bob Shaw and Tom Evans shot 65s, six under par. Allen Miller, Marty Fleckman and Bruce Fleisher were at 66, five under. The group at 67 included Bob Dickson, Joe Inman, Gary McCord and John Schroeder.

Defending champion Al Geiberger had a 69 that left him six shots back, while British Open champion Tom Watson matched par 71.

In addition to keeping alive his victory string, the quiet, unspectacular Barber needs only $12,100 to become the game's ninth $1 million career winner. First place here is $27,000.

Districts Seek To Contest Suit Against Norden Dam

By United Press International

The Niobrara Basin Irrigation District and the North Central Nebraska Reclamation District Thursday sought to join the legal fight against a lawsuit aimed at blocking construction of the Norden Dam on the Niobrara River near Springview.

The request to intervene as defendants in the lawsuit was field in U.S. District Court at Lincoln. If granted, the two districts would join with the U.S. Interior Department and the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation in fighting a lawsuit filed by the Save the Niobrara River Association, Inc., and eight landowners.

The dam would create a reservoir to provide irrigation water through a 100-mile canal to 77,000 acres in the Niobrara River basin near O'Neill, Atkinson and Springview.

In its lawsuit, the association asked the federal court to block the appropriation of federal funds for the project, the condemnation or purchasing of land, the distribution of information on the project as well as construction.

The suit contended the dam would increase agricultural production costs and destroy domestic and agricultural water supplies, wildlife habitat and the recreational attributes of the area.

In the request to join the federal government, the two districts said "Dangerous reductions in groundwater levels have been experienced in the area of the (irrigation district) in recent years."

They said, "Normal precipitation in the O'Neill area is 22.3 inches, far from sufficient to raise crops without some form of irrigation." They said last year was the fourth driest year on record in the O'Neill area with only 14.3 inches of precipitation.

The request for intervention also said the irrigation project would produce $2.40 of benefit for every $1 of cost, contending "this is the highest benefit-cost ratio of any authorized Nebraska resource development project."

It said the project would provide annual wildlife benefits of $10,900 and increase fisherman-days an estimated 20,200 each year.

Norden Lake, the reservoir to be formed behind the dam, would be 19 miles long surrounded by pine and other trees, the two districts said, "constituting the state's most scenic recreation area."

Two Farm Machinery Accident Suits Dropped

Two lawsuits filed in connection with injuries suffered in separate farm machinery accidents have been dismissed in U.S. District Court in Lincoln.

Rodney Warner of Holbrook filed a $750,000 suit against the Gehl Corp., a Wisconsin company that manufactures and sells a type of forage harvester Warner had purchased.

Warner said in his suit he was cleaning the machine when the accident occurred. He said he suffered injuries that resulted in the amputation of both legs below the knees.

The suit was dismissed after an out-of-court settlement.

In the second suit, Robert Frank of Verdigre sought $484,665 as a result of an accident involving a corn grinder. The suit said four fingers of Frank's right hand and half of four fingers of his left hand were severed.

J. Bruce Teichman, a Verdigre attorney, said the suit involved a variety of individuals and or firms, but when it was dismissed, the defendant in the case was the John Deere Co.

He said the action was dismissed without a settlement, but on the basis that it could be refiled later.

Mid-State Plan Called 'Sound' By Sen. Curtis

Washington (UPI) — With energy and fuel costs constantly rising, the Mid-State reclamation project could be one of the "most economical and environmentally sound irrigation projects ever undertaken," Sen. Carl T. Curtis, R-Neb., said.

The reason, he said, is the "sheer size" of the project under which 140,000 acres of cropland would be irrigated. That makes it "one of the best potential projects for increased agricultural production with decreased energy use and environmental demands," the senator said.

He added recent opposition to the project on economic grounds "fails to consider the very essence of environmental arguments — the depletion of natural resources.

"Hundreds of irrigation wells now in the Mid-State area are using tremendous amounts of energy in the form of oil, gas and electricity to pump water to irrigate crops and feed grains that are crucial to livestock and meat production."

Curtis said fuel and fuel products, including fertilizers, and the energy needed to operate irrigation pumps are very significant cost factors in farming today.

Senators Visit Kearney To Study Dorm Situation

Kearney (UPI) — Two members of the Nebraska Legislature's Appropriations Committee visited the Kearney State College campus Thursday to make a report on the possible default of student dormitory revenue bond payments.

State Sens. Leslie A. Stull of Alliance and E. Thome Johnson of Fremont will make recommendations to the full committee later this year on ways the four state colleges could avoid defaulting on dorm bond payments.

Stull said the problem developed in the 1960s when college student populations increased rapidly and dormitories were built to handle the sudden influx of students.

When enrollments began to decline, he said, the number of students available to fill the dormitories dropped and income from the student residences was insufficient to meet the bond payments.

Stull said one possible solution to the problem is that the state could pay the dormitory utility costs at the four state schools, which the state did prior to 1970.

However, Stull said he would rather see the colleges solve the payment problem by increasing the number of students living in the dormitories through promotional efforts.

Kearney State appeared to face no immediate problem in paying the revenue bonds, with an expected student dormitory occupancy rate of 92-93% of capacity.

Busy Firemen Given Hot Time By Grass Fire

A mile-long grass fire Thursday night along the railroad tracks behind the Ramada Inn, Municipal Airport Interchange and Interstate 80, apparently was caused by sparks from a passing train, fire officials said.

The fire was reported at 6:47 p.m., about the time fire units were fighting a fire in a grain elevator at 26th and Potter.

Fire officials said units from the Southeast Rural Fire Protection District and the Malcolm Fire Department joined three Lincoln Fire Department units in the almost three-hour fight against the fire.

Efforts were hampered because fire units ran out of water and had to leave the area to refill their tanks at the nearest hydrant, fire officials said.

Rolls Announces Cuts

London (AP) — Rolls-Royce Ltd. said that its engine divisions 1,000-man workforce is to be cut by 400 because of falling orders.

Tourists Bring Record Amount Into Nebraska

Tourists brought a record $143.8 million into Nebraska during the Memorial to Labor Day vacation period this summer, according to Department of Economic Development estimates.

That figure is an 18% increase over the former record of $121.6 million in tourism revenues for the same period in 1974. The department also estimates that an all-time high of 6.8 million non-residents visited Nebraska during the vacation season, breaking the previous record or 6.6 million visitors reported after the 1972 season.

Iowa Man Dies In I-80 Crash East Of Sunol

Sunol (AP) — One person was killed Thursday morning and another hospitalized in a two-vehicle accident on Interstate 80 about three miles east of here.

James L. West, 53, of Des Moines, Iowa, was killed when a semi tractor-trailer loaded with candy bars slammed into his car parked in the westbound lane of the highway, Cheyenne County authorities said.

Investigators said the truck driver, Karl D. Francesconi, Costa Mesa, Calif., was taken to a hospital in Sidney for treatment of cuts.

The death raised Nebraska's 1975 traffic toll to 265, compared with 288 on the same date last year.

Mishap Kills Tarnov Farmer

Tarnov (AP) — A farmer near Tarnov was killed in a tractor mishap Wednesday night.

Platte County Sheriff Don Franzen, the acting coroner, said Theodore Barnas, 65, died in the mishap one-fourth mile north of Tarnov.

Franzen said Barnas got off the tractor to open a gate in a field and apparently forgot to set the brakes. The tractor rolled forward and pinned Barnas to a fence post.

His brother found Barnas in the field.

Special Vests Eyed

Two Youths Die In Crash At Falls City

Falls City (AP) — Two youths were killed Thursday afternoon in a one-car accident on Highway 73, about one mile south of here.

The victims, both of Falls City, were identified as Carl Dean Lock Jr., 18, and Harold Ingles, 17.

Listed in serious condition was Kevin Bentley, 17. Authorities said the car struck a bridge abutment at a high rate of speed and hurled some 200 feet across a creek, landing upside down.

One of the dead was thrown from the car and the other one pinned in the wreckage.

A other youth who was thrown from the car was hospitalized.

Districts Seek To Contest Suit Against Norden Dam

By United Press International

The Niobrara Basin Irrigation District and the North Central Nebraska Reclamation District Thursday sought to join the legal fight against a lawsuit aimed at blocking construction of the Norden Dam on the Niobrara River near Springview.

The request to intervene as defendants in the lawsuit was field in U.S. District Court at Lincoln. If granted, the two districts would join with the U.S. Interior Department and the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation in fighting a lawsuit filed by the Save the Niobrara River Association, Inc., and eight landowners.

The dam would create a reservoir to provide irrigation water through a 100-mile canal to 77,000 acres in the Niobrara River basin near O'Neill, Atkinson and Springview.

In its lawsuit, the association asked the federal court to block the appropriation of federal funds for the project, the condemnation or purchasing of land, the distribution of information on the project as well as construction.

The suit contended the dam would increase agricultural production costs and destroy domestic and agricultural water supplies, wildlife habitat and the recreational attributes of the area.

In the request to join the federal government, the two districts said "Dangerous reductions in groundwater levels have been experienced in the area of the (irrigation district) in recent years."

They said, "Normal precipitation in the O'Neill area is 22.3 inches, far from sufficient to raise crops without some form of irrigation." They said last year was the fourth driest year on record in the O'Neill area with only 14.3 inches of precipitation.

The request for intervention also said the irrigation project would produce $2.40 of benefit for every $1 of cost, contending "this is the highest benefit-cost ratio of any authorized Nebraska resource development project."

It said the project would provide annual wildlife benefits of $10,900 and increase fisherman-days an estimated 20,200 each year.

Norden Lake, the reservoir to be formed behind the dam, would be 19 miles long surrounded by pine and other trees, the two districts said, "constituting the state's most scenic recreation area."

Two Farm Machinery Accident Suits Dropped

Two lawsuits filed in connection with injuries suffered in separate farm machinery accidents have been dismissed in U.S. District Court in Lincoln.

Rodney Warner of Holbrook filed a $750,000 suit against the Gehl Corp., a Wisconsin company that manufactures and sells a type of forage harvester Warner had purchased.

Warner said in his suit he was cleaning the machine when the accident occurred. He said he suffered injuries that resulted in the amputation of both legs below the knees.

The suit was dismissed after an out-of-court settlement.

In the second suit, Robert Frank of Verdigre sought $484,665 as a result of an accident involving a corn grinder. The suit said four fingers of Frank's right hand and half of four fingers of his left hand were severed.

J. Bruce Teichman, a Verdigre attorney, said the suit involved a variety of individuals and or firms, but when it was dismissed, the defendant in the case was the John Deere Co.

He said the action was dismissed without a settlement, but on the basis that it could be refiled later.

Mid-State Plan Called 'Sound' By Sen. Curtis

Washington (UPI) — With energy and fuel costs constantly rising, the Mid-State reclamation project could be one of the "most economical and environmentally sound irrigation projects ever undertaken," Sen. Carl T. Curtis, R-Neb., said.

The reason, he said, is the "sheer size" of the project under which 140,000 acres of cropland would be irrigated. That makes it "one of the best potential projects for increased agricultural production with decreased energy use and environmental demands," the senator said.

He added recent opposition to the project on economic grounds "fails to consider the very essence of environmental arguments — the depletion of natural resources.

"Hundreds of irrigation wells now in the Mid-State area are using tremendous amounts of energy in the form of oil, gas and electricity to pump water to irrigate crops and feed grains that are crucial to livestock and meat production."

Curtis said fuel and fuel products, including fertilizers, and the energy needed to operate irrigation pumps are very significant cost factors in farming today.

Senators Visit Kearney To Study Dorm Situation

Kearney (UPI) — Two members of the Nebraska Legislature's Appropriations Committee visited the Kearney State College campus Thursday to make a report on the possible default of student dormitory revenue bond payments.

State Sens. Leslie A. Stull of Alliance and E. Thome Johnson of Fremont will make recommendations to the full committee later this year on ways the four state colleges could avoid defaulting on dorm bond payments.

Stull said the problem developed in the 1960s when college student populations increased rapidly and dormitories were built to handle the sudden influx of students.

When enrollments began to decline, he said, the number of students available to fill the dormitories dropped and income from the student residences was insufficient to meet the bond payments.

Stull said one possible solution to the problem is that the state could pay the dormitory utility costs at the four state schools, which the state did prior to 1970.

However, Stull said he would rather see the colleges solve the payment problem by increasing the number of students living in the dormitories through promotional efforts.

Kearney State appeared to face no immediate problem in paying the revenue bonds, with an expected student dormitory occupancy rate of 92-93% of capacity.

Busy Firemen Given Hot Time By Grass Fire

A mile-long grass fire Thursday night along the railroad tracks behind the Ramada Inn, Municipal Airport Interchange and Interstate 80, apparently was caused by sparks from a passing train, fire officials said.

The fire was reported at 6:47 p.m., about the time fire units were fighting a fire in a grain elevator at 26th and Potter.

Fire officials said units from the Southeast Rural Fire Protection District and the Malcolm Fire Department joined three Lincoln Fire Department units in the almost three-hour fight against the fire.

Efforts were hampered because fire units ran out of water and had to leave the area to refill their tanks at the nearest hydrant, fire officials said.

London (AP) — Rolls-Royce Ltd. said that its engine divisions 1,000-man workforce is to be cut by 400 because of falling orders.

Tourists Bring Record Amount Into Nebraska

Tourists brought a record $143.8 million into Nebraska during the Memorial to Labor Day vacation period this summer, according to Department of Economic Development estimates.

That figure is an 18% increase over the former record of $121.6 million in tourism revenues for the same period in 1974. The department also estimates that an all-time high of 6.8 million non-residents visited Nebraska during the vacation season, breaking the previous record or 6.6 million visitors reported after the 1972 season.

Iowa Man Dies In I-80 Crash East Of Sunol

Sunol (AP) — One person was killed Thursday morning and another hospitalized in a two-vehicle accident on Interstate 80 about three miles east of here.

James L. West, 53, of Des Moines, Iowa, was killed when a semi tractor-trailer loaded with candy bars slammed into his car parked in the westbound lane of the highway, Cheyenne County authorities said.

Investigators said the truck driver, Karl D. Francesconi, Costa Mesa, Calif., was taken to a hospital in Sidney for treatment of cuts.

Mishap Kills Tarnov Farmer

Tarnov (AP) — A farmer near Tarnov was killed in a tractor mishap Wednesday night

Platte County Sheriff Don Franzen, the acting coroner, said Theodore Barnas, 65, died in the mishap one-fourth mile north of Tarnov

Franzen said Barnas got off the tractor to open a gate in a field and apparently forgot to set the brakes. The tractor rolled forward and pinned Barnas to a fence post

His brother found Barnas in the field

Special Vests Eyed

Two Youths Die In Crash At Falls City

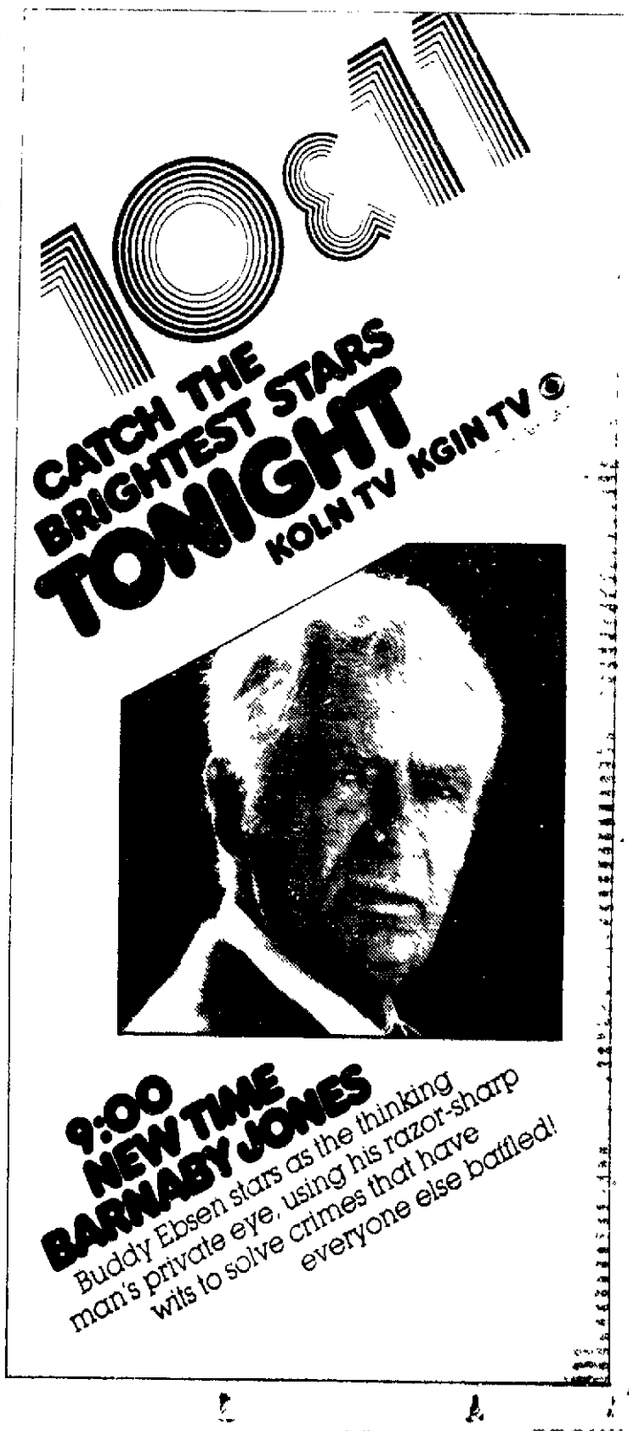

Falls City (AP) — Two youths were killed Thursday afternoon in a one-car accident on Highway 73, about one mile south of here.

The victims, both of Falls City, were identified as Carl Dean Lock Jr., 18, and Harold Ingles, 17.

Listed in serious condition was Kevin Bentley, 17. Authorities said the car struck a bridge abutment at a high rate of speed and hurled some 200 feet across a creek, landing upside down.

One of the dead was thrown from the car and the other one pinned in the wreckage.

A other youth who was thrown from the car was hospitalized.

Equal Credit Rules Weak

By JANE BRYANT QUINN

Jane Bryant Quinn

New York — The battle to give women equal access to credit is far from won. True, there's a new law saying that no lender can discriminate on account of sex or marital status. But laws are administered through regulations, and those that the Federal Reserve Board just wrote to implement the Equal Credit Act are pretty weak.

The regulations are not yet final, however. Interest groups and private citizens have until Sept. 26 to protest (write or telegraph: Equal Credit Opportunity Act, Board of Governors, Federal Reserve, Washington D.C. 20551). If enough women's groups complain vigorously, there's a good chance some of these regulations will be changed.

Here are some of the more objectionable provisions, according to Jane Chapman of the Center for Women Policy Studies and Marcia Greenberger, attorney for the Center for Law and Social Policy:

1. Childbearing. Lenders may no longer ask you intimate questions, like whether you're fetile and what kind of birth control methods you use. Nor can they make you sign a letter promising no babies in the early years of the loan.

But they may "request and consider information concerning the probable continuity of an applicant's ability to repay." In practice, that means they can still ask whether you intend to have children soon. And if you say yes, they can assume the wife will quit her job (and default on her debts). They can even presume you're likely to leave the workforce just because you're of childbearing age and work in a certain type of job.

A lender of good will would not abuse this provision. But if all lenders were of good will, no law would be necessary. As an example of how deeply feelings run, here's a quote from a letter I received recently from a credit union official: "Women are a real risk. They are in the job market today and pregnant and out tomorrow."

Assumptions like this can and do deprive a young career woman of credit. Furthermore, millions of working women have children without defaulting n their debts. The regulations should prohibit any questions about child-bearing intentions, or any assumptions that because of her age the woman will soon leave the labor force.

2. Reasons for Denial. Lenders need not give you a reason for turning you down. This has two effects: first, they needn't think your case through carefully. Second, it makes it much harder for you to prove discrimination. If you had written reasons for the turndown that you could refute, you'd stand a better chance of winning your credit rights. Written explanations for denials are essential is the law is to be enforced.

3. Timing. The law goes into effect Oct. 28, but the Federal Reserve has delayed the effective date of some of the key provisions.

For example, the requirement that stores put the names of both husband and wife on joint charge accounts won't be in force until Nov. 1, 1976. If you become divorced or widowed before that date, you may have absolutely no credit history in your own name — even though you've paid the family bills for years. And without a credit history, you might be refused a loan.

This problem has plagued women for a long time. With relief in sight, what right does the Federal Reserve Board have to perpetuate such an unfair situation for another full year?

4. Part-time Income. Lenders may still ignore part-time income, for purposes of granting credit, as long as they do so for both sexes. But since many more women than men have part-time income, this apparently even-handed policy is discriminatory in its effect.

5. Credit Scoring. Many lenders score credit applications in a way that sounds objective but is in fact discriminatory. It has been a plus, for example, to have a telephone listed in your own name — and since most married women don't, their family telephones have counted against them. The telephone gambit is outlawed by the regulations, but other elements of the discriminatory scoring systems are left intact. For example, it's still a plus to have the car registered in your name — something women generally don't have except perhaps in two-car families.

6. The Weasel Clause. The regulations provide that a lender can flatly discriminate against you and yet not be legally liable for it. As long as he has made reasonable attempts to comply with the law, he will not be deemed a violator.

In practice, this means that discrimination can (and will) continue in many places while procedures are being set up — and, with the full protection of the law.

Despite these strong objections, the Equal Credit Law has some good points. I'll cover the pluses as soon as the regulations become final, so you'll know exactly what all your new rights are.

Market Declines Unevenly

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined unevenly Thursday, finding some good news and some bad news in the prospect of possible price wars in aluminum and other basic industrial material. The market's attention focused on discounts posted this week by some aluminum companies—which analysts said could intensify and spread to other industries where prices have been raised lately in spite of sluggish demand.

Should price-cutting develop, noted Eldon A. Grimm at Birr, Wilson & Co., "it would work two ways. The companies involved would be hurt, but it would be a benefit at the same time on inflation."

The Dow Jones industrial average—which includes six issues from the aluminum, steel and chemical industries among its 30 components—fell 5.95 to 820.24.

The subject that has preoccupied the market for the past several days—the oil price outlook—was put aside temporarily when a meeting of oil-exporting nations in Vienna broke up for the day without any reported agreement on pricing plans.

And the market spotlight shifted to the discounting in aluminum, seen by many observers as a crack in the industry's price front.

There has been a lively debate on Wall Street since last month whether basic-materials companies posting price hikes could make them stick under less-than-boom conditions in the economy.

Most analysts weren't ready to declare any full price wars under way as yet. But just the idea prompted selling in the basic industry issues, and evidently some switching by traders into stocks of finished-goods producers which would benefit.

The Dow, in fact, would have shown virtually no change for the day had it not been for Alcoa, the Big Board volume leader, which fell 3¼ to 41¾; U.S. Steel, down 1⅛ at 68⅛; Bethlehem Steel, off ⅞ at 37; Du Pont, down 1⅞ at 113⅝; Union Carbide, 1⅛ lower at 58⅜, and Allied Chemical, off ⅞ at 32¾.

By contrast, a stock like General Motors—a big user of a number of basic materials—gained ¾ to 51¼ in active trading.

Hog Price Retreat Continues

OMAHA, Neb. (AP)—Hog prices on the Omaha livestock market continued their retreat from the record butcher top set earlier this week, as offerings continued just a bit larger than have been normal in the past few months.

However, in general, the activity here was on the dull side.

The day's hog run was estimated at about 5,000 head.

Barrows and gilts saw moderately active trade, but the butcher trend was steady to 50-cents lower. Most sales noted were about 25-cents off.

Top-grading handyweights bulked from $62.75-$63.25.

Sows turned steady to weak, instances 25-to-50-cents lower on tickets showing markings ranging from $55.00-$57.50.

There were only about 400 cattle and calves on offer, but the bulk of the fresh supply was made up of cows, which trended weak. There were not enough slaughter steers and heifers on offer to test the trade.

Utility and commercial cows cashed from $21.50-$24.00, with a few high-utility dairy-breds clearing at $24.50. Canners and cutters brought $16.00-$21.00.

Sheep were nominal.

Equal Credit Rules Weak

By JANE BRYANT QUINN

Jane Bryant Quinn

New York — The battle to give women equal access to credit is far from won True, there's a new law saying that no lender can discriminate on account of sex or marital status But laws are administered through regulations, and those that the Federal Reserve Board just wrote to implement the Equal Credit Act are pretty weak

The regulations are not yet final, however Interest groups and private citizens have until Sept 26 to protest (write or telegraph Equal Credit Opportunity Act, Board of Governors, Federal Reserve, Washington D C 20551) If enough women s groups complain vigorously, there s a good chance some of these regulations will be changed

Here are some of the more objectionable provisions, according to Jane Chapman of the Center for Women Policy Studies and Marcia Greenberger, attorney for the Center for Law and Social Policy

1. Childbearing. Lenders may no longer ask you intimate questions like whether you re fetile and what kind of birth control methods you use Nor can they make you sign a letter promising no babies in the early years of the loan

But they may "request and consider information concerning the probable continuity of an applicant s ability to repay In practice, that means they can still ask whether you intend to have children soon And if you say yes, they can assume the wife will quit her job (and default on her debts) They can even presume you're likely to leave the workforce just because you re of childbearing age and work in a certain type of job

A lender of good will would not abuse this provision But if all lenders were of good will, no law would be necessary As an example of how deeply feelings run, here s a quote from a letter I received recently from a credit union official Women are a real risk They are in the job market today and pregnant and out tomorrow '

Assumptions like this can and do deprive a young career woman of credit Furthermore, millions of working women have children without defaulting n their debts The regulations should prohibit any questions about child-bearing intentions, or any assumptions that because of her age the woman will soon leave the labor force

2. Reasons for Denial. Lenders need not give you a reason for turning you down This has two effects first, they needn t think your case through carefully Second, it makes it much harder for you to prove discrimination If you had written reasons for the turndown that you could refute, you d stand a better chance of winning your credit rights Written explanations for denials are essential is the law is to be enforced

3. Timing. The law goes into effect Oct 28, but the Federal Reserve has delayed the effective date of some of the key provisions

For example, the requirement that stores put the names of both husband and wife on joint charge accounts won't be in force until Nov 1, 1976 If you become divorced or widowed before that date, you may have absolutely no credit history in your own name — even though you've paid the family bills for years And without a credit history you might be refused a loan

This problem has plagued women for a long time With relief in sight what right does the Federal Reserve Board have to perpetuate such an unfair situation for another full year?

4 Part-time Income Lenders may still ignore part-time income for purposes of granting credit as long as they do so for both sexes But since many more women than men have part-time income, this apparently even-handed policy is discriminatory in its effect

5 Credit Scoring. Many lenders score credit applications in a way that sounds objective but is in fact discriminatory It has been a plus, for example, to have a telephone listed in your own name — and since most married women don t, their family telephones have counted against them The telephone gambit is outlawed by the regulations, but other elements of the discriminatory scoring systems are left intact For example it s still a plus to have the car registered in your name — something women generally don t have except perhaps in two-car families

6 The Weasel Clause The regulations provide that a lender can flatly discriminate against you and vet not be legally liable for it As long as he has made reasonable attempts to comply with the law he will not be deemed a violator

In practice, this means that discrimination can (and will) continue in many places while procedures are being set up — and with the full protection of the law

Despite these strong objections, the Equal Credit Law has some good points I ll cover the pluses as soon as the regulations become final, so you ll know exactly what all your new rights are

Market Declines Unevenly

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined unevenly Thursday, finding some good news and some bad news in the prospect of possible price wars in aluminum and other basic industrial material. The market's attention focused on discounts posted this week by some aluminum companies—which analysts said could intensify and spread to other industries where prices have been raised lately in spite of sluggish demand

Should price-cutting develop, noted Eldon A Grimm at Burr, Wilson & Co , "it would work two ways The companies involved would be hurt, but it would be a benefit at the same time on inflation "

The Dow Jones industrial average—which includes six issues from the aluminum, steel and chemical industries among its 30 components—fell 5 95 to 820 24

The subject that has preoccupied the market for the past several days—the oil price outlook—was put aside temporarily when a meeting of oil-exporting nations in Vienna broke up for the day without any reported agreement on pricing plans

And the market spotlight shifted to the discounting in aluminum, seen by many observers as a crack in the industry s price front

There has been a lively debate on Wall Street since last month whether basic-materials companies posting price hikes could make them stick under less-than-boom conditions in the economy

Most analysts weren t ready to declare any full price wars under way as yet But just the idea prompted selling in the basic industry issues, and evidently some switching by traders into stocks of finished-goods producers which would benefit

The Dow in fact, would have shown virtually no change for the day had it not been for Alcoa the Big Board volume leader, which fell 3¼ to 41¾, U S Steel down 1⅛ at 68⅛, Bethlehem Steel, off ⅞ at 37, Du Pont, down 1⅞ at 113⅜, Union Carbide, 1⅛ lower at 58⅜, and Allied Chemical, off ⅞ at 32¾

By contrast, a stock like General Motors—a big user of a number of basic materials—gained ¾ to 51¼ in active trading

Holdrege Man Named President Of Underwriters

Anaheim, Calif (AP) — Bruce C Hendrickson of Holdrege, Neb , Thursday was elected president of the National Association of Life Underwriters at the group's annual convention

He is the first Nebraskan ever to hold the presidency of the 135,000-member association

He has been vice president of the international group for the past year and served as chairman of the Anaheim convention committee

Hendrickson, 45, is associated with his father, Carl R. Hendrickson, as Holdrege representative for the Bankers Life Co of Des Moines, Iowa

Hog Price Retreat Continues

OMAHA, Neb (AP)—Hog prices on the Omaha livestock market continued their retreat from the record butcher top set earlier this week, as offerings continued just a bit larger than have been normal in the past few months

However, in general, the activity here was on the dull side

The day's hog run was estimated at about 5,000 head

Barrows and gilts saw moderately active trade, but the butcher trend was steady to 50-cents lower Most sales noted were about 25-cents off

Top-grading handyweights bulked from $62 75-$63 25

Sows turned steady to weak, instances 25-to-50-cents lower on tickets showing markings ranging from $55 00-$57 50

There were only about 400 cattle and calves on offer, but the bulk of the fresh supply was made up of cows, which trended weak There were not enough slaughter steers and heifers on offer to test the trade

Utility and commercial cows cashed from $21 50-$24 00, with a few high-utility dairy-breds clearing at $24 50 Canners and cutters brought $16 00-$21 00

Center Won't Be Named For Earl Warren

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Earl Warren won't have the new community center here named after him

Sacramento voters say they don't want the building named after the late chief justice of the U. S. Supreme Court

Residents voted Tuesday to change the name of the Earl Warren Community Center to the Sacramento Community Center. The center had been named by the City Council.

Proponents of the measure contended voters should be consulted before the name of a politician is placed on any municipal building

Opponents said Warren, a former California governor, was responsible for preserving Sacramento as the state capital and was "Sacramento's most illustrious citizen."

Commitment Law Said Below Par

Omaha (AP) — Nebraska's mental health commitment law comes close to scoring zero in a test evaluating how the laws of 47 states and the District of Columbia stack up against a model law, a Wisconsin psychiatrist said in Omaha.

A perfect score would have been 40.

Nebraska got only two points, said Dr. Darold A. Treffert, who is best known as the author of an article, "Dying With Their Rights On," which deals with situations where concern for patients legal rights overshadowed reasonable concern for patients' lives.

"The average was 11 and the highest was 31 points," said Dr. Treffert, who did the comparative study and reported the results at the spring meeting of the American Psychiatric Association.

He said Alabama and Montana rated zero in the study, while Louisiana, Mississippi and South Dakota each had one point. Washington State scored highest.

He said most states, including Nebraska, are short on the side of too little protection of patient's civil rights.

Dr. Treffert, director of the Winnebago Mental Health Institute in Wisconsin, said some state laws have put too much emphasis on rights to the detriment of protecting and treating some patients.

The model law which he devised as a way to evaluate existing statutes represents the middle ground between legal concerns and the clinical realities of treating people, he said.

Committment, involuntarily admitting a patient for treatment, should be based on one of three conditions, Dr. Treffert said.

They are that a patient poses a substantial risk of serious harm to himself, a substantial risk of serious harm to someone else, or is gravely disabled.

Dr. Treffert said commitment laws also should state that once it has been determined that a person is a likely candidate for involuntary commitment, the doctor has the right to treat the patient with acceptable methods.

He said assurance of this right is needed because of the trend to restrict use of drugs and certain treatment methods, such as shock treatments.

Dr. Treffert was in Omaha Tuesday for a meeting of the Sioux Psychiatric Association.

Commitment Law Said Below Par

Omaha (AP) — Nebraska's mental health commitment law comes close to scoring zero in a test evaluating how the laws of 47 states and the District of Columbia stack up against a model law, a Wisconsin psychiatrist said in Omaha.

A perfect score would have been 40.

Nebraska got only two points, said Dr. Darold A. Treffert, who is best known as the author of an article, "Dying With Their Rights On," which deals with situations where concern for patients legal rights overshadowed reasonable concern for patients' lives.

"The average was 11 and the highest was 31 points," said Dr. Treffert, who did the comparative study and reported the results at the spring meeting of the American Psychiatric Association.

He said Alabama and Montana rated zero in the study, while Louisiana, Mississippi and South Dakota each had one point. Washington State scored highest.

He said most states, including Nebraska, are short on the side of too little protection of patient's civil rights.

Dr. Treffert, director of the Winnebago Mental Health Institute in Wisconsin, said some state laws have put too much emphasis on rights to the detriment of protecting and treating some patients.

The model law which he devised as a way to evaluate existing statutes represents the middle ground between legal concerns and the clinical realities of treating people, he said.

Committment, involuntarily admitting a patient for treatment, should be based on one of three conditions, Dr. Treffert said.

They are that a patient poses a substantial risk of serious harm to himself, a substantial risk of serious harm to someone else, or is gravely disabled.

Dr. Treffert said commitment laws also should state that once it has been determined that a person is a likely candidate for involuntary commitment, the doctor has the right to treat the patient with acceptable methods.

He said assurance of this right is needed because of the trend to restrict use of drugs and certain treatment methods, such as shock treatments.

Dr. Treffert was in Omaha Tuesday for a meeting of the Sioux Psychiatric Association.

The Answer To A Salesman's Dream
We presently have a dozen men who require a commission check for $400-$800 per week & a monthly bonus check for between $400 & $600. They earn this amount of money by working 3 or 4 days a week selling a variety of leads we furnish to them at no cost. They sell a product that you would be proud to write home about. This is not just another sales job. If you're in doubt, I'll arrange for you to meet some of the men I've talked about. Call me, I'll answer any questions you may have over the phone. Jim Fowler, 464-2247. 28

NOTICE

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE – Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

☆ By SIDNEY OMARR ☆

Forecast for Friday

Taurus I wish I had known: William Shakespeare. Gemini who would have asked a lot of questions: Judy Garland. Cancer who would have given me a shiny new dime: John D. Rockefeller. Aquarian who would have interpreted my horoscope: Evangeline Adams. Aquarian who would have interpreted her writings: Gertrude Stein. Aries who would have mystified me: Harry Houdini. Virgo who would have taught me to punch: Rocky Marciano.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Communications could leave something to be desired. Relative, somewhat of a "nag," demands attention. Have facts, figures at hand. If you defend position in calm manner, you gain needed co-operation. Avoid anything bordering on hysterics.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Count your change. Get promises in writing. Be ready for revisions, messages, rights and permissions. Check copyright or patent status on projects. Take nothing for granted. Someone seems to want something for nothing — from you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Lunar cycle is such that you win over opposition. You discern what is truth and otherwise. Accent is on new starts, family adjustments and legal proposition that might go up in puff of smoke. Means it could be someone's pipe dream.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Refine and define — get rid of superfluous material. Deal with Pisces, Virgo persons. Avoid self-deception. Means see people and places as they are, not merely as you wish they could be. You will be "working backstage." Means you glimpse "forbidden sights."

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Friendship is "sealed." Relationship develops into "something serious." Know it and avoid playing games where emotions are involved. Cancer, Capricorn persons could figure prominently. Member of opposite sex is puzzled about motives.

VIRGO (Aug. 22-Sept. 22): Look beyond the immediate — perceive potential. You may be asked to travel, write, gather and evaluate opinions. Your prestige rises — general standing is improved. People place more value on your services.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You could write with original flair. What you do now contains personal touch, the imprinting of your style. Know it and exploit it. Means let others become aware of you as an individual, not as one who merely performs a task or finishes an assignment.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Concern with the occult figures prominently. You delve into mysteries, strive for answers to apparent "coincidences." One you admonished says there are no hard feelings. But this could be just talk. Know it and protect yourself in clinches.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Someone may be trying to pull wool over your eyes. Accent is on legal paper, agreement to co-operate on project, partnership, marriage. Gemini and another Sagittarian could figure prominently. Lie low. Play waiting game. Detect subtle signals, clues.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 21-Jan. 19): Practical matters dominate. Basic issues command attention. Do your "homework." Means research is more important than usual. You may be called upon to revise, replace and rebuild. Aquarius, Leo and Scorpio figure prominently.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Study Capricorn message. Be ready for significant changes based on special call or message. Romance and creativity are featured. Friendships develop — some of your hopes, wishes could be fulfilled. Self-esteem is on the rise.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Accent on conditions at home, family affairs. You gain through diplomacy. You cannot force issues. One with pleasant voice captivates. Your own powers of persuasion are magnified. You will be more secure.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are a natural executive, capable of working under pressure. You change residence or lifestyle this year — February and November are outstanding months of 1975. Cancer, Capricorn persons play important roles in your life. You are creative, able to time your moves. Vast new horizons are to open for you.

(Learn "The Truth About Astrology." Send 75 cents to Omarr Booklet, The Lincoln Star, P.O. Box 1111, Los Angeles, Calif. 90053. You'll open doors to fascinating study and self-revelation!)

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Economic Crunch Not Keeping Public From Dining Out

By Holly Spence

Salary increases are not keeping up with the spiraling costs of grocery items, gasoline is zooming to premium prices, some people are worried about keeping their jobs.

Total the factors and the sum indicates that people are alloting less for everything, including, and especially, the luxury of entertainment.

Wrong! In fact the food service industry as well as other activities which share in the leisure time budget — sports and recreational activities, and the motion picture business — are brighter spots in an otherwise faltering economy.

Sports Equipment Sales

Sports, the sale of sporting equipment and recreational vehicles are enjoying good sales. Skiing, boating and camping equipment are expensive items, but they are selling like wildfire.

And the motion picture industry is sitting pretty, indeed. The 1974 box office receipts approached a record $2 billion, according to Jack Valenti, president of the Motion Picture Association of America (MPAA) and all 1975 figures are encouraging. The 1974 figure was far above the previous peak of $1.7 billion spent on movies in 1946. Economic problems seems to spell good times for the motion picture people who are offering the public a less expensive form of entertainment.

While the dispensing of liquor and serving of food is a precarious business for those who like cut and dried income and outgo figures, most food service people are happy about the trend toward more leisure time, a psychological need for escape and the spending of money despite inflation.

Better for Lincoln

Although Ted Parent, president of the Lancaster Beverage Association and proprietor of the Racquet Lounge, said his now defunct Tropics Beer Tavern in downtown Lincoln (part of the Centrum development area) was severely hurt by the passage of liquor-by-the-drink in November 1966, he feels "it was better for the city."

Deteriorating clubs and taverns were remodeled and refurbished to compete with new clubs which began popping up on the skyline. And drinking habits have changed, he said. Those who once drank five beers in the taverns and clubs are drinking two and taking more alcoholic beverages home. It is cheaper to drink at home and many people are frightened by the crackdown on intoxicated drivers.

Not only are people becoming "more sophisticated drinkers," (he singled out the increased popularity of wines and the willingness to try new drinks), but the peak bar sales times and seasons have changed. Parent said Saturday afternoons used to be big drinking times for taverns. Not so anymore.

"The younger ones don't do that," he said. "Each generation has different ideas."

And summers used to be the best season for the bars. Now people flock to recreation areas in the summer and do more going out in the winter.

Despite the economic pinch, most restaurant and bar managers see people going out just as much. They cite everything from escaping the pressure of creditors, forgetting about the job and bills, to getting mom and the kids out of the house and into a relaxed atmosphere. Most agree, however, that priorities are changing. Families are frequenting less expensive restaurants and saving the more expensive nights out for mom and dad on special occasions.

Jim Golden, food and beverage manager of the Lincoln Hilton, is in the unique situation of overseeing four distinctly different types of food and beverage operations all under one roof. The Hilton has the Den, a quiet conversation bar; Fanny's, a night spot with show groups and no food; The Arbor Inn coffee shop and, the Haymarket, a more elegant restaurant.

More Eating Out

Golden remarked that national restaurant surveys indicate that all working Americans eat at least one meal a day away from home. He anticipates the trend to soon go to twice a day.

"Eating out is not as expensive as many thought; it is easy and comfortable," he said, and added that although inflation has gone up perhaps 20% for the consumer, the restaurant industry has probably increased their costs only between 5% and 10%.

Even though Golden, along with other Lincoln restaurateurs, believes that many people are going to cheaper restaurants and making the more expensive eateries special occasion places, he said people are often mislead about the less expensive prices of the fast food operations.

He noted that McDonalds hamburgers have increased from 15 to over 30 cents, a 100% increase in the past few years.

Services Provided

"If I did that, people would be horrified," he said, adding that when comparing the prices of hamburger meals, some forget that sit-down restaurants are providing a wealth of other services.

"My hamburger is a legitimate half-pound hamburger," said Golden, who said his meals are not serve-yourself and sit in your car, there are condiments and accompanying relishes and salads, and no paper plates.

Although the frequency of more expensive dining has appeared to be diminishing, most restaurant managers don't feel that money is the prime objective in determining where to eat.

"The hospitality industry as a whole has shown one of the smallest increases in their prices," concluded Golden.

This couple enjoys leisurely dining at the Haymarket in the Lincoln Hilton. Restaurant managers say people are reserving more expensive nights out for mom and dad alone and the occasion is likely to be a special one.

$150,000 Buys an Adequate Restaurant Kitchen

Big Money Involved in Food Service Industry

By Gene Kelly

The idea of working in the luxury of a $150,000 kitchen would make many women light headed.

But a restaurateur might consider the same kitchen just adequate. Call that relativity.

If the investment stakes are so high — with the average new eating place costing a quarter million to build and equip — why do you see a half dozen new ones in Lincoln each year? Because many people feel that if they can create a banquet for a house full of relatives, they can make a small fortune running an eating place.

Those Imponderables

Add to those ifs, imponderables like just the right seasoning, the right atmosphere or the right mood music.

Make the wrong choices and you could be in big trouble before the first meal leaves the kitchen.

That's why months of planning went into the drastic changes just completed in the lower level of the Clayton House Motel, a downtown Lincoln highrise.

The splashing fountain is there, but virtually everything else in the lounge and restaurant is new.

"I walked down the stairs as a customer. Everything that I didn't like had to go . . .

It takes a lot of money to start a restaurant. One of the newest in Lincoln is the completely remodeled restaurant on the lower level of the Clayton House. The management simply threw everything out and started over again.

"Then I walked back in with my management hat on to look at what was feasible," says Mike Hatfield, manager since May.

The eight-week renovation resulted in a setting that he calls "open but intimate."

The interior walls are gone. But the mammoth pillars which hold up the motel, the super-wide and plushly-cushioned booths and four-level seating for 135 people break up the floor area. The area had previously seated about 100.

Although general manager Gary Bartels won't reveal how much motel owner Marv Copple put into the lounge-restaurant project, he feels that "every dollar invested appreciates in value for the hotel three to four times."

Banquet Hall Planned

The next step in the refurbishing of the entire motel, says Bartels, is rescuing part of the lobby and street-level parking east of the NBC patio bank for conversion into a 200-seat banquet hall.

The equipment, furniture and decor of a "better than average" new hotel that Steve Flanders is working on will cost about $1,000 a seat for its kitchen, restaurant and coffee shop area.

Flanders, a partner in Greathouse-Flanders Associates of Lincoln, says this is the rule of thumb he's using for a 160-seat restaurant and a 68-seat coffee shop. Of this, "the furniture and decoration come in at $350 to $380 a seat," he explained. The firm specializes in commercial interior design.

The specifications for such furniture flow to firms like Pegler & Company, which boasts an inventory of 30,000 "full-line, one-stop food service items."

Alesio, Wilcoxen Believe in Owner Participation

Tony's, Lee's Open for Business 30 Years

By Betty Stevens

Lee's and Tony and Luigi's — the oldies, but the goodies.

Despite the fact they are in different parts of town, have totally different menu concepts and meet different customer needs, Lee's and Tony's have some strategic things in common.

Both have been in existence 30 years, both believe a big part of the success of a restaurant is active participation by the owner, and both hammer away at quantity, quality and price.

"If you slip on quality, the people of Lincoln will tell you by not coming through your door," said Tony Alesio, owner of Tony and Luigi's.

Alesio said he came back from World War II and bought half of the then Blue Willow "spike joint" at 5140 O St. for $2,000, in partnership with Louis Demma.

The first day of business they grossed $6.50. "We only took in $18,000 that first whole year."

Alesio said he's still in business because he had a challenge from a competitor who said he could never make it.

Tony and Luigi's building was added onto twice and almost completely rebuilt in 1966. Alesio bought out Demma in 1952. He now talks about meat by the tonnage, and the Italian-American eatery uses about 200 pounds of pasta each week.

Alesio's Done It All

Alesio, who said he couldn't boil water in 1945, has done it all from scrubbing floors to washing dishes. He still goes into the kitchen daily to keep an eye on things and be an active taste-tester

"When everything goes from raw to cooked, including the salad dressing, you have to take special pains with recipe increases and possible product changes," Alesio said.

"I always tell the help, don't serve anything you wouldn't love to eat yourself."

Tony and Luigi's is open from 5 p.m. to 1 a.m. Monday through Saturday.

About four years ago there was a 112% increase in restaurants in Lincoln, Alesio said. "It's amazing. We've met the competition and the customers are coming back."

Competent Help

Alesio credits his success to work, devotion and his customers but most of all his competent help. "They made

Alesio, Wilcoxen Believe in Owner Participation

Tony's, Lee's Open for Business 30 Years

By Betty Stevens

Lee's and Tony and Luigi's — the oldies, but the goodies.

Despite the fact they are in different parts of town, have totally different menu concepts and meet different customer needs, Lee's and Tony's have some strategic things in common.

Both have been in existence 30 years, both believe a big part of the success of a restaurant is active participation by the owner, and both hammer away at quantity, quality and price.

"If you slip on quality, the people of Lincoln will tell you by not coming through your door," said Tony Alesio, owner of Tony and Luigi's.

Alesio said he came back from World War II and bought half of the then Blue Willow "spike joint" at 5140 O St. for $2,000, in partnership with Louis Demma.

The first day of business they grossed $6.50. "We only took in $18,000 that first whole year."

Alesio said he's still in business because he had a challenge from a competitor who said he could never make it.

Tony and Luigi's building was added onto twice and almost completely rebuilt in 1966. Alesio bought out Demma in 1952. He now talks about meat by the tonnage, and the Italian-American eatery uses about 200 pounds of pasta each week.

Alesio's Done It All

Alesio, who said he couldn't boil water in 1945, has done it all from scrubbing floors to washing dishes. He still goes into the kitchen daily to keep an eye on things and be an active taste-tester

"When everything goes from raw to cooked, including the salad dressing, you have to take special pains with recipe increases and possible product changes," Alesio said.

"I always tell the help, don't serve anything you wouldn't love to eat yourself."

Tony and Luigi's is open from 5 p.m. to 1 a.m. Monday through Saturday.

About four years ago there was a 112% increase in restaurants in Lincoln, Alesio said. "It's amazing. We've met the competition and the customers are coming back."

Competent Help

Alesio credits his success to work, devotion and his customers but most of all his competent help. "They made

California Vineyards More Than Doubled in Four Years

U.S. Market Has More Wine Than It Can Absorb

By Richard Worsnop
Editorial Research Reports

There can indeed be too much of a good thing — just ask any vintner. In both this country and Europe, the consumer market is awash in far more wine than it can absorb. The great wine boom of the late 1960s and early 1970s, during which supply generally fell short of surging demand, clearly is over.

The main problem in the United States is overexpansion of grape production. Between 1970 and 1974, about 180,000 acres of new vineyards were planted in California, more than doubling existing acreage. Over the same period wine distribution increased by 65%, reaching 360 million gallons, or more than $1.5 billion, at retail in 1974.

Production Increase

"Now the California wine industry is finding it tough to turn off the tap," Busines Week observed last spring Production of Cabernet Sauvignon, the top red wine varietal, rose from 760,000 cases in 1970 to 2 million cases last year and is expected to reach 6.6 million cases in 1977, the magazine reported.

Overproduction of grapes in California has had repercussions in New York, the nation's second-largest winemaking state. (New York accounts for about 10% of total U.S. wine production.) Grape growers in the Empire State fear that processors will abandon them at least temporarily for the lower-priced California product.

Perhaps it is just as well that California and New York are at opposite ends of the continent, else the two states might now be engaged in a "wine war" similar to the one raging between France and Italy. There, too, overproduction is to blame. A bumper grape harvest in 1974, coupled with declining per-capita wine consumption, helped to create a 2.6 billion-gallon wine surplus in the nine Common Market Countries.

Wine War Erupted

Much of the surplus consisted of the inexpensive red table wine that is a staple of the southern European diet. The wine war erupted when the flow of cheap Italian wine into France suddenly assumed flood proportions. More than 50 million gallons of Italian wine crossed the French border in the first two months of 1975, as against 76.5 million gallons during the entire 1973-74 crop year.

French grape growers staged noisy demonstrations and set up roadblocks to halt the influx of Italian wine. The French government responded by imposing a border tax on the Italian product, only to be overruled by the Common Market's executive commission. But the commission softened the blow by the announcement Sept. 15 of special subsidies to help France and Italy export surplus wine at low prices to Iran, Austria, the Soviet Union, and other countries. Future surpluses are inevitable, for this summer's unusually warm and sunny weather in Europe has assured yet another bumper harvest of wine grapes.

Americans Optimistic

American grape growers, meanwhile, profess optimism about the future despite their current difficulties. Overcapacity is expected to remain a problem for some years, but there are things that can be done to alleviate it. Expansion of storage capacity would reduce the need for disposing of inventories at distress prices, while extended aging would result in a superior wine that could command premium prices. And growers can comfort themselves with the thought that further expansion of vineyards is one cost they will not have to worry about for years to comtroller, also says demand for this inventory keeps 125 employes busy serving customers in 18 states and Canada. The sales volume for Pegler in the year which ended June 30 was $13.4 million.

Whether you call it appearance or atmosphere, it's a big factor in where you eat out.

Denny's Inc., one of the largest coffee shop chains, will invest a half-million dollars to make an outlet look inviting, says a recent Barron's article.

The 106-seat Denny's at 9th and R Sts. in Lincoln, built in late 1972, represented a land and structure investment of about $248,000, based on building permit and register of deeds filings.

Big Investment

But such investment covers a wide spectrum. "You don't get much of a kitchen for $100,000 today," notes Sivert (Steve) Haddal, manager of the Lincoln University Club. "Our cocktail lounge cost a quarter of a million . . . a halfway decent chair is $50.

"We spend $1,000 a year on replacing silverware. And inflation! Damask napkins that cost us $9 three years ago are now $28."

The dollars spent in Lincoln eating and drinking places have got to impress.

For 1972, the latest year for which Census of Business figures are available for Lincoln, total sales were $33.5 million, in contrast to $19.3 million in 1967.

The number of persons working in such businesses increased by nearly 50% during the five-year period — from 2,246 in 1967, to 3,183 in 1972.

Payrolls Top $8 Million

The payrolls involved some $5.1 million in 1967 had grown to $8.3 million in 1972.

The outlet total had increased much less dramatically: there were 230 in 1967 and 269 five years later.

And since then?

"There's been a fantastic growth in the number of outlets the last two years," says Haddal, also president of the Lincoln Restaurant Assn.

Bill Courtney, statistician for the Lincoln Job Service office, says the employe figure reached 4,750 in June 1975, then leveled off to 4,550 in July, the same as a year ago. In August, the number employed was 4,650. That represts another 50% growth since 1972.

"The people who do a good job, who know a bit about profit margins, will stay in business; the rest survive by luck or go broke," says John Rogers, manager of Lincoln Poultry and Egg.

Competitive Market

The institutional market is very competitive, Rogers says: "Your customers jump around alot, just like the housewife buying her week's specials."

Lincoln Poultry has 20 to 25 employes, depending on the season, handling an inventory of 1,500 items for schools, rest homes, restaurants and grocery stores.

It's obvious that more people are eating out, and eating out more.

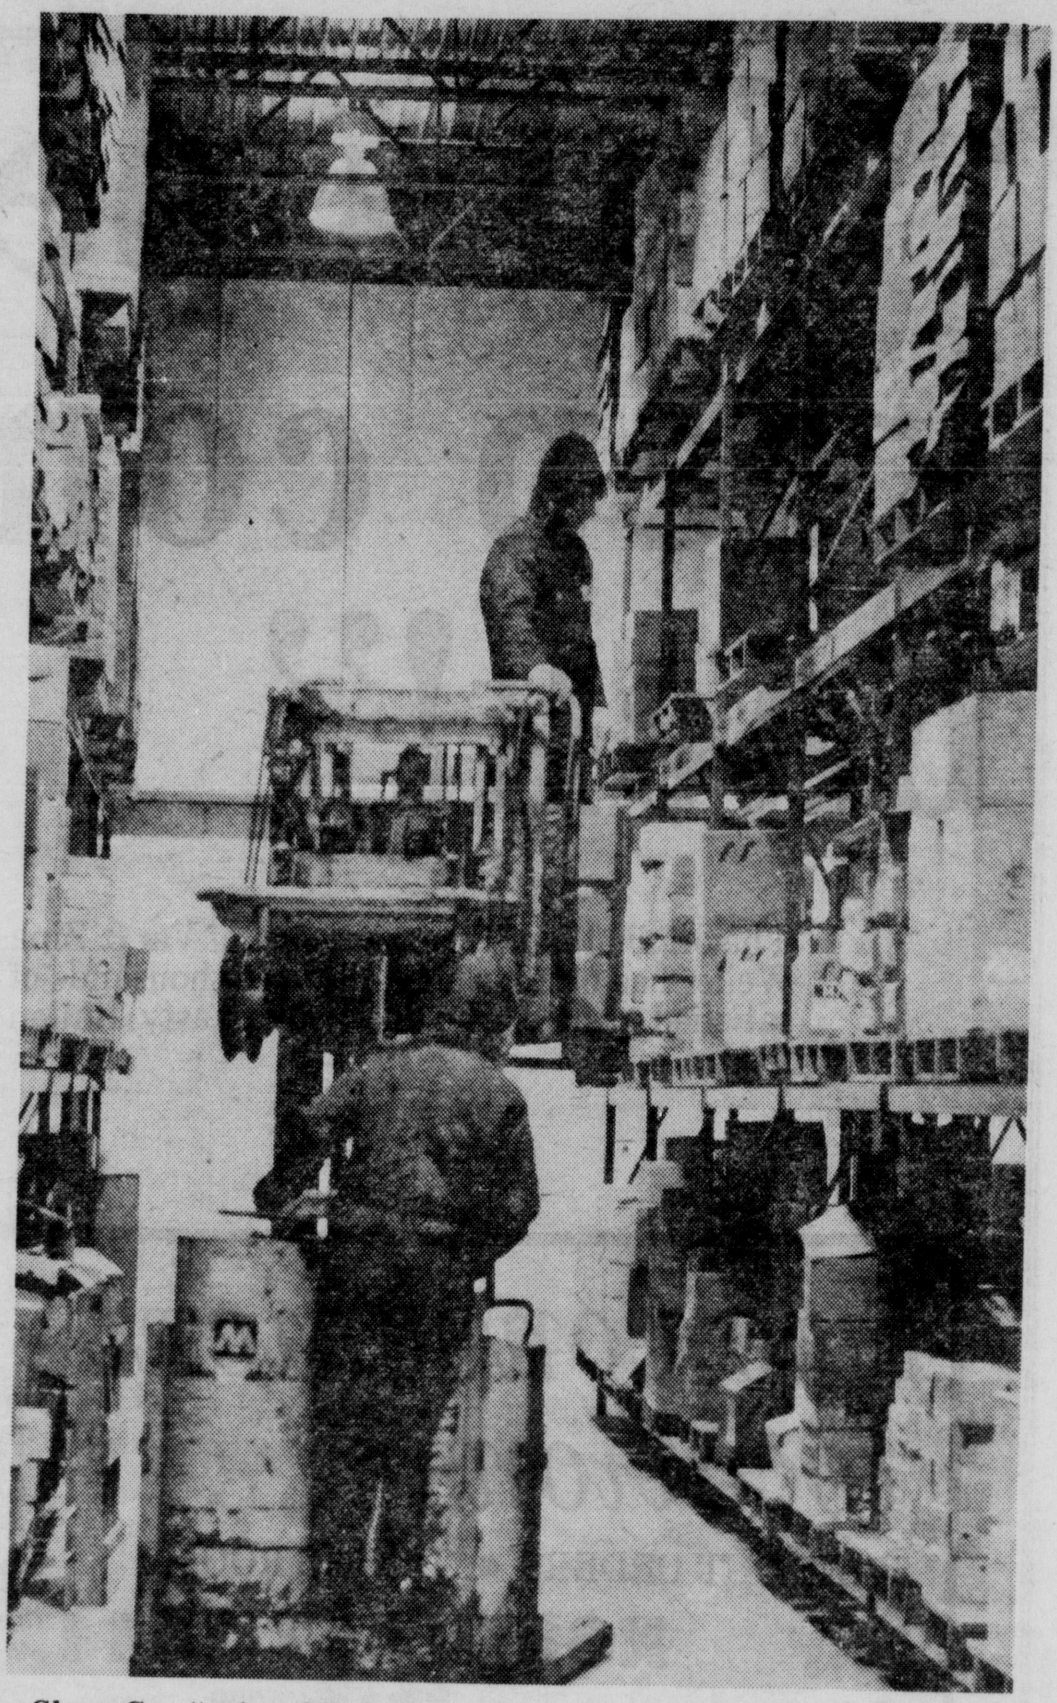

Haddal agrees with estimates by the National Restaurant Assn. that Americans consume one meal in three at an eating establishment. And with many firms setting up their own dining rooms, he expects that ratio to hit one in two any year now.

Want Something More

And Haddal says that "the young people, those who matured in the 1950s, want more out of life than meat and potatoes . . . our wine sales are dramatically up — it's not that the customer is necessarily spending more.

Haddal said he signs a payroll of about $4,000 a week for the 80 to 85 full and part-time University Club employes.

About $100,000 was paid to suppliers last year for food, he noted. The result was about 66,400 meals, Haddal says.

Glenn Cox (top) and Robert Garzer, employes of Lincoln Poultry and Egg, look for food items in the large refrigerated room.

Entertainment Trend Toward Show Groups

By Holly Spence

Nowadays, entertainment in clubs, lounges and restaurants is more than just a song and a dance. Local entertainment bookers agree that clubs are looking more and more toward "show" groups.

The old days of listening to a dance band are gone. Groups need a combination of classy wardrobes, sophisticated instruments and sound equipment, showy choreography, music and comedy.

Comedy Requested

"A lot of clubs are asking for comedy — a show," said Richard Lutz of Lutz Entertainment Agency. "Show groups have to do comedy. I think people have seen so much music on TV variety shows that they are tired of it."

Bart Skibbe of Sounds of Music Talent Agency sees the trend toward "show" material as a national trend.

"A certain amount of show material definitely must be in these groups," noted Skibbe.

Even though restaurant-bar businesses have strained under the load of all-around increased costs and often tried to tighten their budgets, Skibbe said many clubs are increasing the amount of money spent on entertainment.

He said the recession severely

this place," Alesio said.

That's exactly what Paul Wilcoxen, owner of Lee's, said. Wilcoxen and his wife Jan are both actively involved in the business and have been since they bought Lee's six years ago from Lee Franks. Wilcoxen managed the place for 12 years before that.

"Think Chicken," a sign over Wilcoxen's desk reads and there's really no way to avoid it when you cook and serve between 1,500 and 2,000 chickens each week.

"We're a restaurant that serves beer, not a beer joint," Wilcoxen emphasized. "We want the family trade. When families can come out here and feel comfortable, that's what does it for us," Wilcoxen said.

Menu Kept Simple

Lee's has a simple menu with the philosophy that simplicity helps to keep each item at top quality. It started out as a chicken place. It still is, even though New York steaks, ham steaks, club steaks and Southern fried lobster have been added to the menu over the years.

About 20% of Lee's business is in catering and they can serve 2,000 inside customers a day. The restaurant is open 4-11:30 p.m. Monday through Friday, and until midnight on Saturday.

Both the Wilcoxens have been in the restaurant business since they were kids. They met while working at Tilmans. Both work long hours now but for years put in 18-hour days. Mrs. Wilcoxen eats a piece of Lee's chicken every day.

When they have to pay more for products, the Wilcoxens increase the menu prices. "We will not cut quality or quantity," they said.

Business Doubled

That policy and the long work hours have permitted Lee's to double the volume of business in the past six years.

And Wilcoxen thinks a lot about expansion. He believes if they were open Sunday, it would be their biggest day, but that's the only time they get to spend with their two daughters, six and four years old.

He had plans to expand the present facility by 120 seats but couldn't manage it on the land allotment. He dreams about a second location in northeast Lincoln.

"That's a half-million dollar investment now," he says, "and that's a lot of fried chicken."

The time to expand, Wilcoxen says, will be when he has built up enough of a backlog of competent help so he can feel comfortable about not being able to be two places at once.

No Expansion Plans

It's for the same reason that Alesio has no plans for expansion. "We just want to stay here and run one good place."

Tony and Luigi's customers are most often couples making a night of it. Lee's are mostly families who leave comparatively quickly to get the kids to bed.

It works well either way, as long as the food is right.

Food Service Industry Sales Top $62.5 Billion

The food service industry in the United States is this nation's fourth largest retail business with 1974 sales exceeding $62.5 billion.

Eating establishments also employed more than 4 million workers last year in more than 550,000 business units which made it the economy's largest business sector.

Restaurants purchase more than 20% of the nation's food and serve more than 160 million meals each day. One of every three meals is consumed daily outside the home.

Entertainment Trend Toward Show Groups

By Holly Spence

Nowadays, entertainment in clubs, lounges and restaurants is more than just a song and a dance. Local entertainment bookers agree that clubs are looking more and more toward "show" groups.

The old days of listening to a dance band are gone. Groups need a combination of classy wardrobes, sophisticated instruments and sound equipment, showy choreography, music and comedy.

Comedy Requested

"A lot of clubs are asking for comedy — a show," said Richard Lutz of Lutz Entertainment Agency. "Show groups have to do comedy. I think people have seen so much music on TV variety shows that they are tired of it."

Bart Skibbe of Sounds of Music Talent Agency sees the trend toward "show" material as a national trend.

"A certain amount of show material definitely must be in these groups," noted Skibbe.

Even though restaurant-bar businesses have strained under the load of all-around increased costs and often tried to tighten their budgets, Skibbe said many clubs are increasing the amount of money spent on entertainment.

He said the recession severely

City's 336 Eating, Drinking Sites Get Sanitation Checks

By C. David Kotok

Eating out is thought of as a pleasant experience whether the reason is a "break today" or the succulent taste of food.

Few diners really think of what is going on behind the swinging door the waitress brings the meal through.

The question usually following that first taste is, "I wonder how they make it?" It is virtually never, "I wonder how they handle it?"

Yet, that is the question asked by the City-County Health Dept., which inspections the 336 eating and drinking establishments in Lincoln.

Three Inspectors

The health department has three full-time field inspectors and each must have a bachelor's degree from a college or university and have completed 30 hours of science courses.

The spot checks occur every six months, and the results are published in a booklet rating the restaurants in catagories: superior, superior-good, good, good-fair.

The inspector uses a 118- item check list worth 288 points during surprise visits to the city's food establishments.

If a restaurant has more than 40 demerit points it is asked to close until it meets the minimum standards, said Kermit (Mike) Hammar, acting supervisor of food sanitation in the division of environmental health.

How Ratings Work

Those with 10 or fewer demerits gain a superior rating. From 11 to 20, the restaurants fall into the superior-good catagory A "good" establishment lost 21 to 30 points

Nearly 62% or 210 of the restaurants and bars in Lincoln are rated in the top two categories as of June 30 Of the remainder, 70 are in the good rating area and 35 in the good-fair zone.

An additional 21 establishments are either new or

You Can Judge Sanitation

When eating out, these guidelines may be helpful in judging the level of sanitation practiced by the establishment.

1 Toilet and handwashing facilitites are clean and in good working order

2 Floors are kept clean and maintained in good repair.

3 Walls, ceilings and windows are clean and in good condition

4 The establishment's personnel are dressed in clean clothes

5 Smoking, eating or drinking is not performed by personnel while preparing or serving food

6 The rims of glasses, cups and bowls are not touched by food servers at any time Tableware is always placed before the customer and removed from tables by the handles or undersurfaces and not by touching the food contact surfaces

7 Dishes, glassware and table service are clean and spotless

8 Tables, counters and service areas are clean to the sight and touch Dirty dishes are not left to accumulate in dining areas

9 Insects, rodents or animals are not evident in the establishment

10 The exterior of the establishment, including garbage and trash storage areas, are maintained in a sanitary condition at all times Driving and walking surfaces are clean and free of litter.

By bringing sanitary violations to the attention of the management, customers can help improve sanitation.

Higher Coffee Prices Won't Calm Nerves

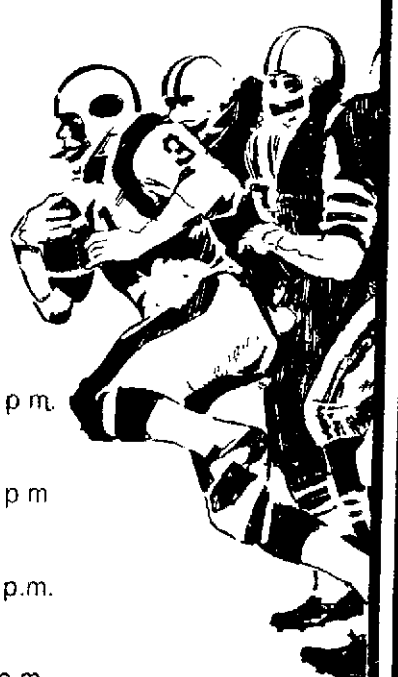

Washington (UPI) — Consumers worried about rising food and fuel costs won't be able to calm their jangled nerves with a soothing cup of coffee.

The price of coffee is expected to go up 40% or more in the coming months.

Brazil, which produces a third of the world's coffee, has been hit by the worst cold wave in half a century. About three-fourths of the country's 2.1 billion coffee trees have been destroyed by frost

Paul and Jan Wilcoxen, owners of Lee's, sample some of the chicken for which their restaurant is famous.

Competent Help Cited by Owners

this place," Alesio said.

That's exactly what Paul Wilcoxen, owner of Lee's, said. Wilcoxen and his wife Jan are both actively involved in the business and have been since they bought Lee's six years ago from Lee Franks. Wilcoxen managed the place for 12 years before that.

"Think Chicken," a sign over Wilcoxen's desk reads and there's really no way to avoid it when you cook and serve between 1,500 and 2,000 chickens each week.

"We're a restaurant that serves beer, not a beer joint," Wilcoxen emphasized. "We want the family trade. When families can come out here and feel comfortable, that's what does it for us," Wilcoxen said.

Menu Kept Simple

Lee's has a simple menu with the philosophy that simplicity helps to keep each item at top quality. It started out as a chicken place. It still is, even though New York steaks, ham steaks, club steaks and Southern fried lobster have been added to the menu over the years.

About 20% of Lee's business is in catering and they can serve 2,000 inside customers a day. The restaurant is open 4-11:30 p.m. Monday through Friday, and until midnight on Saturday.

Both the Wilcoxens have been in the restaurant business since they were kids. They met while working at Tilmans. Both work long hours now but for years put in 18-hour days. Mrs. Wilcoxen eats a piece of Lee's chicken every day.

When they have to pay more for products, the Wilcoxens increase the menu prices. "We will not cut quality or quantity," they said.

Business Doubled

That policy and the long work hours have permitted Lee's to double the volume of business in the past six years.

And Wilcoxen thinks a lot about expansion. He believes if they were open Sunday, it would be their biggest day, but that's the only time they get to spend with their two daughters, six and four years old.

He had plans to expand the present facility by 120 seats but couldn't manage it on the land allotment. He dreams about a second location in northeast Lincoln.

"That's a half-million dollar investment now," he says, "and that's a lot of fried chicken."

The time to expand, Wilcoxen says, will be when he has built up enough of a backlog of competent help so he can feel comfortable about not being able to be two places at once.

No Expansion Plans

It's for the same reason that Alesio has no plans for expansion. "We just want to stay here and run one good place."

Tony and Luigi's customers are most often couples making a night of it. Lee's are mostly families who leave comparatively quickly to get the kids to bed.

It works well either way, as long as the food is right.

Food Service Industry Sales Top $62.5 Billion

The food service industry in the United States is this nation's fourth largest retail business with 1974 sales exceeding $62.5 billion.

Eating establishments also employed more than 4 million workers last year in more than 550,000 business units which made it the economy's largest business sector.

Restaurants purchase more than 20% of the nation's food and serve more than 160 million meals each day. One of every three meals is consumed daily outside the home.

Lunch Trade Increases

By Gracia McAndrew

The economic recession has taken its toll — car sales dipped to new lows and housing construction has declined — but, of course, people are still eating. Not only that, they're eating out.

In fact, according to local restaurant managers, more and more people are patronizing eating establishments during the lunch hour.

"I have no hard facts to give, but the economic situation has had no impact on the luncheon trade," said Steve Haddal, general manager of the Lincoln University Club. "We've had a larger traffic and dollar flow this year than last."

Luncheon Trade Up

"The luncheon trade has definitely increased," Cliff Thoene, owner of Cliff's Lounge, agreed as he explained, "there are more people, more mouths to feed.

"We're getting stronger all of the time."

Although a few of the restaurant proprietors said business during the lunch hour is "up and down," most reported good volume.

Even the manager of a new restaurant reflected the same trend.

"We feel that when we first opened people came in to look at us and consequently our volume was very high," said John McMurry, manager of Chesterfield, Bottomsley and Potts. "At that time we were lacking in basic customer service."

Service Improves

However, McMurry said now most of the wrinkles have been ironed out "Our service to the customer is better and our business has increased," he said.

For the most part, the owners and managers agreed that business persons and professionals make up the major part of their lunchtime clientele

"Our luncheon trade consists mainly of businessmen and working girls," said Erling Schroeder, owner of Alice's Restaurants. "Many come in to conduct business on an informal basis "

The "congenial" atmosphere of restaurants is what draws the business crowd, the managers emphasized.

A Meeting Place

"The restaurant has become a meeting place for business people," Schroeder said. "If a salesman meets someone during the lunch hour, they are utilizing their free time and the situation cut back on budgets until this spring when the tide seemed to change. Skibbe surmises the clubs discovered that cutting back or doing away with entertainment meant the loss of clientele.

When food and booze are of equal quality, entertainment offerings become the prime means of competition.

Lutz feels many clubs have increased their entertainment budgets when the money situation became tight in the hopes that business would increase.

He pointed out that as he travels the country booking chains of hotels and motels with entertainment groups, managements tells him that next to a swimming pool, entertainment is the most enticing feature of their facilities.

Entertainment Factor

Many people consider the inclusion of the pool and live entertainment before they book rooms, said Lutz.

"People are becoming more entertainment conscious," he said, adding that people often compare smaller lounge groups to big television stars.

"They have become so sophisticated, but people just can't expect the same thing as they see on television," he said. "If those groups (smaller lounger groups) were that good, they'd be on television and not in the clubs."

Another important factor that prompts live entertainment is the fact that food costs have risen to such proportions that profit is seen more in the dispensing of liquor than the service of food.

Club owners generally agree that the booking of entertainment gives them the hope that the clientele won't eat and run across the street for drinks because of the live entertainment.

Clientele Held

Although there are certain groups that have strong followings, draw large crowds and increase the sale of liquor, few club owners and managers will flatly state that entertainment increases their profit. But it does draw in and often hold the clientele.

Live entertainment is like an edge in the highly competitive market for the food and beverage dollar. And most consider Dec 14, 1966 — the day the first drink was consumed after passage of liquor-by-the-drink — as the day the competitive gun was fired

Both Skibbe and Lutz agree that approval of liquor-by-the-drink on the November 1966 ballot was the best thing that has happened to the food and beverage scene in Lincoln's history. Lutz estimates the number of clubs has probably tripled since late 1966, and the number employing entertainment (some six days and some on weekends) has sharply increased.

Active Lincoln Scene

Skibbe said he couldn't generalize about the trend toward any group size or type of entertainment in Lincoln area clubs, but did add that entertainment budgets often depend on whether the club is run by a manager or an owner. He feels Lincoln is fortunate to have a wealth of live entertainment activity that can suit almost any taste.

Lutz noted, however, that Lincoln clubs are rather consistent in the type of activity desired by each club. Clubs employing single acts have stuck to singles for years, those using quartets or quintets most generally stick to that size group all of the time.

Most of the experimenting on types and sizes of groups is done when new rooms or clubs are opened.

Idea of Serving People Attractive

Select Few See Waiter's Job as Profession

The hours are long and the tips are unpredictable, but there is a certain pride in being a server of food.

There are a great number of waiters and waitresses in a community the size of Lincoln, but it is a select group that looks upon that job as a profession — something more than just "slinging hash."

"Someday it will be a respected profession," said Tim Johns, a waiter in the Haymarket Restaurant in the Lincoln Hilton.

Sam Collura

Started in New York

The 24-year-old Nebraska native first entered food service — "it was a matter of economics" — while living in New York City. For three years, he worked as a waiter, assistant manager and bartender.

He returned to Lincoln to resume his college theater study, found a part-time job as a waiter "and I got so involved here, I never went back to school."

During his year at the Haymarket, the satisfactions have been immediate and working with people has been enjoyable.

2 Weeks of Training

He said the Hilton tries to make the waiting of tables an art and begins the procedure with two weeks of extensive training for waiters and waitresses.

In addition to the basic waiting skills, Tim said "all sorts of side duties are involved." It is not unusual for him to set tables, vacuum, stock, dust fixtures and clear tables.

Tim feels he must analyze each table as to the kind of treatment the customers might perfer. But he also has his own gut reaction to waiting tables. "It comes with experience," he noted.

"I like a lot of service, but I don't like to see the waiter very much," he said, boasting that the Haymarket has a "reputation for good service."

"And most of the friends I know who are only waiters are quite serious about it," he commented.

UNL Student

Sam Collura, a waiter at the Boar's Head Restaurant while he finishes his last year in business administration at UNL, said the job that "I stumbled into" has become a distinct career possibility.

"I have enjoyed this job longer with more enthusiasm and am getting interested in the business," said Sam, who added that his interest in good food "runs in the family."

A cooking job in Winter Park, Colo., really ignited the spark for food service.

"I really enjoy meeting and talking with people," he said. "But its unfortunate you don't always have more time to spend with all the people."

Service Overlooked

Sam feels the service facet is often overlooked and puts some of the blame on the popular fast food operations.

He tells his new waiter charges when he is assigned to do training they are "not going to be a millionaire in a week." Sam feels that a waiter has to "treat everybody like a king" regardless of the waiter's mood and absence of a tip.

Paul Chudomelka, head waiter at the new Clayton House Restaurant, has been connected with food service for six years.

He enjoys the night shift because it allows more time to be with and better serve the people. He admits "I could never sit in an office all day."

"I Like People"

The hours often run more than eight in a day "but I like my work and I like people," he said.

Paul has the responsibility for a team of waiters, busboys and hostesses and strives to "do everything I can to make people comfortable."

His dreams also are in the food service business, an interest he shares with his wife who is a cocktail waitress.

is more relaxed compared to walking into someone's office."

"But we also get quite a few ladies who have been out shopping."

Still, whether the lunch is for business purposes or just a social get-together with a friend, the restaurant operators said time is of the essence.

"Speed of service is of major importance," Haddal said.

"We have a number (of customers) who will occupy a table for a long time," Schroeder said, "however most are quite concerned about time."

Limited Time Schedule

"Most people generally are on a limited time schedule," added Dan Clapper, relief manager for Reuben's. "It seems that most (people) operate on an hour or hour and one-half lunch break."

In addition, the restaurateurs claim that alcoholic consumption has declined during the lunch period.

"We serve a fair amount of drinks," McMurry said. "Occasionally we'll get a businessman who will have a steak and a drink and then he will linger here to discuss business."

But the most popular alcoholic beverage during lunch seems to be the house specialties, which "look attractive, contain a lot of mix and will last through the meal," he added.

"I really think that people don't drink just to be drinking during the lunch hour," he said. "They don't go to a bar at lunch to drink, they go to eat."

Alcohol Consumption Off

Besides, people aren't clinging to the old idea that "vodka or a martini doesn't smell," said Haddal. "Over the last couple of years, alcoholic consumption at lunch has declined. People have become more cautious."

But it is not the sale of beverages during lunch which keeps an establishment open, the managers contend. The determining factor in the success of a restaurant is the regular customer trade, they said.

And this trade, on which the restaurants thrive, depends, for the most part, on good food and good service.

However, McMurry feels that today you need something extra to maintain a good business.

"Any area can always use places that are different and unique," he said, "places that are good and solid but unique.

More Quiet, Mellow

"Lunch time is a different business for us," he added. "It is more quiet, mellow and sophisticated. Later at night we kind of let our hair down when the students come in."

But no matter what the atmosphere, "how hard you work or how good a job you do, you can't get your regular customers every day of the week," Schroeder said. "People still like variety and you can't blame them for that."

under new management and have not been put into one of the four catagories.

Cleanliness is stressed as one of the prime means of reducing any bug or rodent problems, Hammar said. Most pesticides and chemicals are banned at food establishments.

Keeping a restaurant clean means that garbage cans on the outside and litter at drive-ins must be attended, as well as problems within the building, he said.

Problems Identifiable

Rodent problems are easily identified by the trail of droppings that are left along baseboards. One bug seen during the day by inspectors mean more at night, said Hammar.

The way foods are handled also is examined closely, with particular attention to refrigeration. Cooked foods must obtain 140 degrees prior to serving.

Hammar said inspectors will review the demerits with the owner or manager after conducting the survey. The inspectors try to assist operators to upgrade their sanitation procedures, he said.

Complaints seldom come from restaurant owners following an inspection, he said. There are occasional complaints from consumers.

The most common complaint is that the meat smelled funny and then the consumer became ill a few hours later, Hammar said. However, many of the germs that cause what is commonly called food poisoning take 12 or more hours to have an effect

"I have been here for four years," Hammar said, "and we have never been able to confirm a food born illness."

Hammar believes the ratings serve a purpose. Although the good-fair restaurants meet the minimum standards of the U.S. Public Health Service and the city code, Hammar prefers to eat in restuarnts with the higher ratings.

Booklets containing the ratings for the restaurants can be obtained from the City-County Health Dept. or at the information desk at the City-County Building.

City's 336 Eating, Drinking Sites Get Sanitation Checks

By C. David Kotok

Eating out is thought of as a pleasant experience whether the reason is a "break today" or the succulent taste of food.

Few diners really think of what is going on behind the swinging door the waitress brings the meal through.

The question usually following that first taste is, "I wonder how they make it?" It is virtually never, "I wonder how they handle it?"

Yet, that is the question asked by the City-County Health Dept., which inspections the 336 eating and drinking establishments in Lincoln.

Three Inspectors

The health department has three full-time field inspectors and each must have a bachelor's degree from a college or university and have completed 30 hours of science courses.

The spot checks occur every six months, and the results are published in a booklet rating the restaurants in catagories: superior, superior-good, good, good-fair.

The inspector uses a 118- item check list worth 288 points during surprise visits to the city's food establishments.

If a restaurant has more than 40 demerit points it is asked to close until it meets the minimum standards, said Kermit (Mike) Hammar, acting supervisor of food sanitation in the division of environmental health.

How Ratings Work

Those with 10 or fewer demerits gain a superior rating. From 11 to 20, the restaurants fall into the superior-good catagory. A "good" establishment lost 21 to 30 points.

Nearly 62% or 210 of the restaurants and bars in Lincoln are rated in the top two categories as of June 30. Of the remainder, 70 are in the good rating area and 35 in the good-fair zone.

An additional 21 establishments are either new or

You Can Judge Sanitation

When eating out, these guidelines may be helpful in judging the level of sanitation practiced by the establishment.

1. Toilet and handwashing facilitites are clean and in good working order.

2. Floors are kept clean and maintained in good repair.

3. Walls, ceilings and windows are clean and in good condition.

4. The establishment's personnel are dressed in clean clothes.

5. Smoking, eating or drinking is not performed by personnel while preparing or serving food.

6. The rims of glasses, cups and bowls are not touched by food servers at any time. Tableware is always placed before the customer and removed from tables by the handles or undersurfaces and not by touching the food contact surfaces.

7. Dishes, glassware and table service are clean and spotless.

8. Tables, counters and service areas are clean to the sight and touch. Dirty dishes are not left to accumulate in dining areas.

9. Insects, rodents or animals are not evident in the establishment.

10. The exterior of the establishment, including garbage and trash storage areas, are maintained in a sanitary condition at all times. Driving and walking surfaces are clean and free of litter.

By bringing sanitary violations to the attention of the management, customers can help improve sanitation.

Higher Coffee Prices Won't Calm Nerves

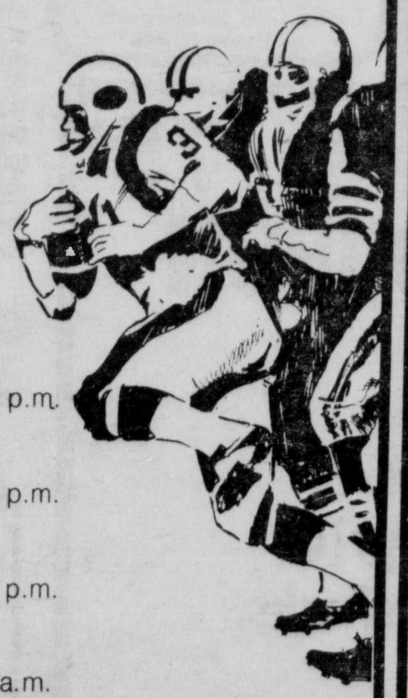

Washington (UPI) — Consumers worried about rising food and fuel costs won't be able to calm their jangled nerves with a soothing cup of coffee.

The price of coffee is expected to go up 40% or more in the coming months.

Brazil, which produces a third of the world's coffee, has been hit by the worst cold wave in half a century. About three-fourths of the country's 2.1 billion coffee trees have been destroyed by frost.

Men Getting Used to Idea That Women Pick Up Lunch Checks

By Angela Taylor
(c) New York Times

New York — You're a woman in a good job; you've asked a man to lunch; it's all gone very well. Now comes the moment of truth:

The check arrives. An unthinking waiter plunks it down in front of him. Do you panic, wrestle him for it, slip him money under the table?

As women climb up the corporate ladder, more of them are on the paying end of the expense account lunch. Is picking up the check traumatic?

Woman Often Pays

A number of successful women who wine and feed their male colleagues say times have changed. Men are getting used to the idea that the woman often pays, and headwaiters realize that the banker at the table is not necessarily the bankroller.

Still, chivalry is not entirely dead and most check-paying women are careful not to offend the sensitive male by flashing cold cash while he squirms.

The experiences of women executives vary, but there is one point most of them agree on — the matter of wine. The chauvinist streak in wine stewards is slow in dying. Even if they order the wine, the women say, almost always it is poured for the man to taste.

Terry Reynolds is a fashion adviser for J.C. Penney, who takes manufacturers, textile people and designers to lunch. Sometimes she lunches her guests at a midtown Manhattan restaurant such as the Ground Floor.

Europeans More Difficult

"I try to get there a bit early and give the headwaiter my credit card," she said. "Or I excuse myself to go to the ladies room and talk to the waiter. So that at the end of lunch, I say 'shall we go?' "

"European men are more put out than Americans about you paying the check," she continued. "Sometimes they use my tactics — say they have to make a phone call and pay without my knowing it."

Jane Evans, president, Butterick Fashion Marketing Co., whose guests are store executives, heads of fashion houses, or sometimes men in her own company, said:

"I think it's fun to take men to lunch. Since our offices are in Greenwich Village, they enjoy trying some of the neighborhood places.

Arrange in Advance

"Most men feel no embarrassment these days when the waiter mistakenly brings them the check," she went on, "But if it's somebody I really want to treat and he is likely to make trouble about the check, I arrange to pay in advance, when I make the reservation.

"Or I tell the waiter in French or Italian that I'm paying," she said. "It helps to be a linguist." Who tastes the wine? "If I take a connoisseur or a Frenchman, I insist he do it."

Madelon Talley, director of international investments for the Dreyfus Corp., on taking financiers to lunch,: "My father-in-law (Victor Weybright, the retired publisher) says that if a woman can get to any level in business, she should be able to take a man to lunch without embarrassing him.

"Men usually take me to lunch," she said. "I'm the buyer, they're the sellers." But when she's hostess, she tries to lead her guests to restaurants where her company has charge accounts. "Then the bill never comes," she explained.

'Random House Richer'

Charlotte Mayerson is a senior editor at Random House and takes agents and authors to lunch. When she first started in publishing, she said, credit eards were not so prevalent and she had not thought of charge accounts — "then I used to go through some complex machinations with headwaiters."

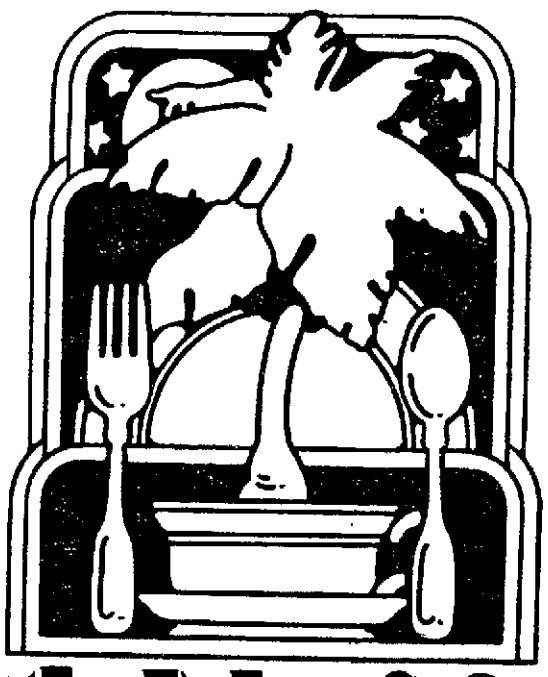

"Now they understand that if I've made the reservation, the check is presented to me," she continued. "There is sometimes a bit of trouble with an older man who was brought up in a different generation. But agents and authors are usually no trouble, even when they're rich, they know Random House is richer."

Christine Beshar, a lawyer with Cravath, Swaine & Moore, takes clients or other lawyers to lunch, usually to clubs such as the Wall Street Club, where she is one of the few women members, or to the Chambers of Commerce.

"The clubs know me, so there's no problem," she explained. "I pay ahead or a day later. At restaurants I try to arrange things beforehand, so there's never a question of who pays."

Idea of Serving People Attractive

Select Few See Waiter's Job as Profession

The hours are long and the tips are unpredictable, but there is a certain pride in being a server of food.

There are a great number of waiters and waitresses in a community the size of Lincoln, but it is a select group that looks upon that job as a profession — something more than just "slinging hash."

"Someday it will be a respected profession," said Tim Johns, a waiter in the Haymarket Restaurant in the Lincoln Hilton.

Started in New York

The 24-year-old Nebraska native first entered food service — "it was a matter of economics" — while living in New York City. For three years, he worked as a waiter, assistant manager and bartender.

He returned to Lincoln to resume his college theater study, found a part-time job as a waiter "and I got so involved here, I never went back to school."

Tim really can't see how all the college courses relate to his interests, which lean toward food service and restaurant management.

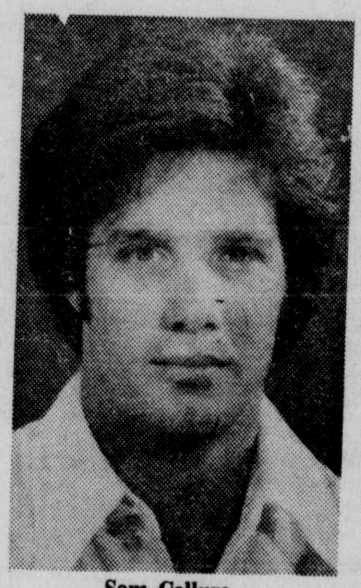

During his year at the Haymarket, the satisfactions have been immediate and working with people has been enjoyable.

2 Weeks of Training

He said the Hilton tries to make the waiting of tables an art and begins the procedure with two weeks of extensive training for waiters and waitresses.

In addition to the basic waiting skills, Tim said "all sorts of side duties are involved." It is not unusual for him to set tables, vacuum, stock, dust fixtures and clear tables.

Tim feels he must analyze each table as to the kind of treatment the customers might perfer. But he also has his own gut reaction to waiting tables. "It comes with experience," he noted.

Sam Collura

"I like a lot of service, but I don't like to see the waiter very much," he said, boasting that the Haymarket has a "reputation for good service."

"And most of the friends I know who are only waiters are quite serious about it," he commented.

UNL Student

Sam Collura, a waiter at the Boar's Head Restaurant while he finishes his last year in business administration at UNL, said the job that "I stumbled into" has become a distinct career possibility.

"I have enjoyed this job longer with more enthusiasm and am getting interested in the business," said Sam, who added that his interest in good food "runs in the family."

Although he lists his own cooking expertise as "a short order cook at best," his ambitions are more closely aligned with restaurant management.

A cooking job in Winter Park, Colo., really ignited the spark for food service.

"I really enjoy meeting and talking with people," he said. "But its unfortunate you don't always have more time to spend with all the people."

Service Overlooked

Sam feels the service facet is often overlooked and puts some of the blame on the popular fast food operations.

He tells his new waiter charges when he is assigned to do training they are "not going to be a millionaire in a week." Sam feels that a waiter has to "treat everybody like a king" regardless of the waiter's mood and absence of a tip.

Paul Chudomelka, head waiter at the new Clayton House Restaurant, has been connected with food service for six years.

He enjoys the night shift because it allows more time to be with and better serve the people. He admits "I could never sit in an office all day."

"I Like People"

The hours often run more than eight in a day "but I like my work and I like people," he said.

Paul has the responsibility for a team of waiters, busboys and hostesses and strives to "do everything I can to make people comfortable."

His dreams also are in the food service business, an interest he shares with his wife who is a cocktail waitress.

Luncheon Trade Increases

is more relaxed compared to walking into someone's office."

"But we also get quite a few ladies who have been out shopping."

Still, whether the lunch is for business purposes or just a social get-together with a friend, the restaurant operators said time is of the essence.

"Speed of service is of major importance," Haddal said.

"We have a number (of customers) who will occupy a table for a long time," Schroeder said, "however most are quite concerned about time."

Limited Time Schedule

"Most people generally are on a limited time schedule," added Dan Clapper, relief manager for Reuben's. "It seems that most (people) operate on an hour or hour and one-half lunch break."

In addition, the restaurateurs claim that alcoholic consumption has declined during the lunch period.

"We serve a fair amount of drinks," McMurry said. "Occasionally we'll get a businessman who will have a steak and a drink and then he will linger here to discuss business."

But the most popular alcoholic beverage during lunch seems to be the house specialties, which "look attractive, contain a lot of mix and will last through the meal," he added.

"I really think that people don't drink just to be drinking during the lunch hour," he said. "They don't go to a bar at lunch to drink, they go to eat."

Alcohol Consumption Off

Besides, people aren't clinging to the old idea that "vodka or a martini doesn't smell," said Haddal. "Over the last couple of years, alcoholic consumption at lunch has declined. People have become more cautious."

But it is not the sale of beverages during lunch which keeps an establishment open, the managers contend. The determining factor in the success of a restaurant is the regular customer trade, they said.

And this trade, on which the restaurants thrive, depends, for the most part, on good food and good service.

However, McMurry feels that today you need something extra to maintain a good business.

"Any area can always use places that are different and unique," he said, "places that are good and solid but unique.

More Quiet, Mellow

"Lunch time is a different business for us," he added. "It is more quiet, mellow and sophisticated. Later at night we kind of let our hair down when the students come in."

But no matter what the atmosphere, "how hard you work or how good a job you do, you can't get your regular customers every day of the week," Schroeder said. "People still like variety and you can't blame them for that."

It Takes People, Lots of Them, to Run a Restaurant

By Wes Albers

The waitress places a juicy steak and crisp salad before you. Or the girl behind the counter hands you a sack of hamburgers and french fries.

Chances are that as you eat, this riddle never crosses your mind: What has upwards of 46 legs, aims to please and does it quite inconspicuously?

Answer: The staff of a restaurant.

Behind those swinging doors or that high counter is where the action is. And a restaurant manager's personnel list reads like a pro football team's player roster before the fall cuts.

Normal Evening's Staff

For instance, during a normal evening of business at the Knolls Restaurant and Lounge, 2201 Old Cheney Road, manager John Boosalis has on hand a cook, a cook's helper, a salad girl, a bartender, a cocktail waitress, a cashier, a hostess, two or three waitresses (two or three more if a party is scheduled), a busboy (three on Saturday nights) and two dishwashers.

"And, of course, I'm here all the time," Boosalis said.

The entire staff, largely composed of part-time employes, numbers 46: 20 busboys and waitresses, 15 dishwashers, cooks and salad people, five bartenders and cocktail waitresses and six hostesses, cashiers and managers

Even the fast foods restaurants require large staffs. Don Nelson, one of four full-time managers at McDonald's, 5305 O St., said he has 80 to 85 employes, mostly part-time workers.

Different Jobs

And the jobs are different there, too, because the needs are different.

On a normal day, Nelson said, 17 to 18 people are at work: two managers (if possible), five people to cook the hamburgers, one person to fry the fries, one person to make the shakes, one person to wrap the hamburgers, six to eight people to man the service counter and one person to do the cleaning.

For eating establishments open beyond the usual evening hours, like Alice's Restaurant, 211 No. 70th, staff size can be almost staggering.

Manager Erling Schroeder said he has 110 to 120 employes, only 10 to 15 of whom are full time.

That breaks down to 30 to 35 waitresses, 30 to 40 kitchen workers, 10 hostesses, 15 busgirls, 5 to 10 salad people, 10 to 15 dishwashers and 10 to 14 workers in the bakery and carry-out section.

On Job Training

The managers said most of the people they hire have received no training — other than previous experience, perhaps — and have to be trained on the job.

"There's really very little people can be trained for, especially for the bulk of the jobs," Schroeder said. "Most of the training is done here."

But managers often find the part-time people they train leave after only a short time, he said.

"Parents don't discipline their kids anymore. The kids have just too many activities. When all other activities become more important than their jobs, where are we?" Schroeder asked. "Now, there are some good people — but they're like a cold drink in a hot dessert."

Management Needs

According to Schroeder, one area where outside training would be helpful is management. "If there is a big need, that's it," he said.

Nelson said McDonald's employes initially are taught with company training films. In addition, the managers meet with the staff every two months to show additional films and discuss problems, he said.

Boosalis said training is also done at the Knolls because learning to work in a restaurant "is not really different from any other job"

However, an employe's background is important, he said, citing the case of one employe who was hired to be a bartender but is working as a cook because it was learned he had a background in food preparation.

Formal training for those interested in careers in food service or food management is available from Southeast Community College, 2240 Vine.

Instructor Carol Cotner said the college offers a two-year associate degree program for those interested in dietetics or food service management and an in-service training program for people already employed, particularly school food service employes and employes in nursing homes and hospitals.

Someone interested in operating a restaurant, for instance, would take courses in quantity food preparation, food production, sanitation and safety, menu planning and nutrition, purchasing and business management, she said.

In addition, someone wanting training for a specific food service job, such as waitress or cook, can join a short term, one-to-four-quarter program that will lead to a certificate or diploma, Mrs. Cotner said

The Adult Restaurant

Hammar believes the ratings serve a purpose. Although the good-fair restaurants meet the minimum standards of the U.S. Public Health Service and the city code, Hammar prefers to eat in restuarnts with the higher ratings.

The all new Clayton House Restaurant & Lounge

When we say "all new" we mean just that. . .

THE ATMOSPHERE :

This has to be the most comfortable room in town . . . from our plush "love seats" to the distinctive Italian chairs that grace our tables. It's a "one of a kind" interior designed for relaxed dining.

THE MENU :

We've got all your favorites and several new surprises. The pride of the house is prime corn-fed Nebraska beef. The prime rib is a beautifully lean rib eye cut. Our "Steak Kabob" is served flaming on a bed of wild rice. Seafood lovers will enjoy Rocky Mountain trout, french fried jumbo shrimp and our flaming "Shrimp Kabob".

THE SERVICE :

The enthusiasm of our staff is easy to see. It prompts a new kind of attentive personal service. We're proud of our new room... and we want to make sure you enjoy it!

You'll love the new setting..,You'll love the new menu...

You'll Love it all!

PREVIEW OF THINGS TO COME . . .
Today our new restaurant and lounge are a reality. Now we're hard at work on new banquet and meeting rooms. We're remodeling our quest rooms too. It's going to be a new Clayton House from top to bottom!

It Takes People, Lots of Them, to Run a Restaurant

By Wes Albers

The waitress places a juicy steak and crisp salad before you. Or the girl behind the counter hands you a sack of hamburgers and french fries.

Chances are that as you eat, this riddle never crosses your mind: What has upwards of 46 legs, aims to please and does it quite inconspiciously?

Answer: The staff of a restaurant.

Behind those swinging doors or that high counter is where the action is. And a restaurant manager's personnel list reads like a pro football team's player roster before the fall cuts.

Normal Evening's Staff

For instance, during a normal evening of business at the Knolls Restaurant and Lounge, 2201 Old Cheney Road, manager John Boosalis has on hand a cook, a cook's helper, a salad girl, a bartender, a cocktail waitress, a cashier, a hostess, two or three waitresses (two or three more if a party is scheduled), a busboy (three on Saturday nights) and two dishwashers.

"And, of course, I'm here all the time," Boosalis said.

The entire staff, largely composed of part-time employes, numbers 46: 20 busboys and waitresses, 15 dishwashers, cooks and salad people, five bartenders and cocktail waitresses and six hostesses, cashiers and managers.

Even the fast foods restaurants require large staffs. Don Nelson, one of four full-time managers at McDonald's, 5305 O St., said he has 80 to 85 employes, mostly part-time workers.

Different Jobs

And the jobs are different there, too, because the needs are different.

On a normal day, Nelson said, 17 to 18 people are at work: two managers (if possible), five people to cook the hamburgers, one person to fry the fries, one person to make the shakes, one person to wrap the hamburgers, six to eight people to man the service counter and one person to do the cleaning.

For eating establishments open beyond the usual evening hours, like Alice's Restaurant, 211 No. 70th, staff size can be almost staggering.

Manager Erling Schroeder said he has 110 to 120 employes, only 10 to 15 of whom are full time.

That breaks down to 30 to 35 waitresses, 30 to 40 kitchen workers, 10 hostesses, 15 busgirls, 5 to 10 salad people, 10 to 15 dishwashers and 10 to 14 workers in the bakery and carry-out section.

On Job Training

The managers said most of the people they hire have received no training — other than previous experience, perhaps — and have to be trained on the job.

"There's really very little people can be trained for, especially for the bulk of the jobs," Schroeder said. "Most of the training is done here."

But managers often find the part-time people they train leave after only a short time, he said.

"Parents don't discipline their kids anymore. The kids have just too many activities. When all other activities become more important than their jobs, where are we?" Schroeder asked. "Now, there are some good people — but they're like a cold drink in a hot dessert."

Management Needs

According to Schroeder, one area where outside training would be helpful is management. "If there is a big need, that's it," he said.

Nelson said McDonald's employes initially are taught with company training films. In addition, the managers meet with the staff every two months to show additional films and discuss problems, he said.

Boosalis said training is also done at the Knolls because learning to work in a restaurant "is not really different from any other job."

However, an employe's background is important, he said, citing the case of one employe who was hired to be a bartender but is working as a cook because it was learned he had a background in food preparation.

Formal training for those interested in careers in food service or food management is available from Southeast Community College, 2240 Vine.

Instructor Carol Cotner said the college offers a two-year associate degree program for those interested in dietetics or food service management and an in-service training program for people already employed, particularly school food service employes and employes in nursing homes and hospitals.

Someone interested in operating a restaurant, for instance, would take courses in quantity food preparation, food production, sanitation and safety, menu planning and nutrition, purchasing and business management, she said.

In addition, someone wanting training for a specific food service job, such as waitress or cook, can join a short term, one-to-four-quarter program that will lead to a certificate or diploma, Mrs. Cotner said.

The Adult Restaurant

If you are a little tired of restaurants that are simply living on a reputation from . . . yesterday . . . if you find the quality slipping and the portions getting smaller . . . you may be ready to enjoy the luxury of a meal at the Cork 'n Cleaver.

Great Steaks, Alaskan King Crab and Prime Rib . . . fine wines . . . service with style . . . and a relaxing, casual atmosphere make Cork 'n Cleaver the most enjoyable restaurant in Lincoln.

You will enjoy the warm fireplaces and properly concocted cocktails. Guaranteed.

Cork 'n Cleaver is an adult restaurant that will make a night away from the house an experience to remember.

Men Getting Used to Idea That Women Pick Up Lunch Checks

By Angela Taylor
(c) New York Times

New York — You're a woman in a good job; you've asked a man to lunch; it's all gone very well. Now comes the moment of truth:

The check arrives. An unthinking waiter plunks it down in front of him. Do you panic, wrestle him for it, slip him money under the table?

As women climb up the corporate ladder, more of them are on the paying end of the expense account lunch. Is picking up the check traumatic?

Woman Often Pays

A number of successful women who wine and feed their male colleagues say times have changed. Men are getting used to the idea that the woman often pays, and headwaiters realize that the banker at the table is not necessarily the bankroller.

Still, chivalry is not entirely dead and most check-paying women are careful not to offend the sensitive male by flashing cold cash while he squirms.

The experiences of women executives vary, but there is one point most of them agree on — the matter of wine. The chauvinist streak in wine stewards is slow in dying. Even if they order the wine, the women say, almost always it is poured for the man to taste.

Terry Reynolds is a fashion adviser for J.C. Penney, who takes manufacturers, textile people and designers to lunch. Sometimes she lunches her guests at a midtown Manhattan restaurant such as the Ground Floor.

Europeans More Difficult

"I try to get there a bit early and give the headwaiter my credit card," she said. "Or I excuse myself to go to the ladies room and talk to the waiter. So that at the end of lunch, I say 'shall we go?' "

"European men are more put out than Americans about you paying the check," she continued. "Sometimes they use my tactics — say they have to make a phone call and pay without my knowing it."

Jane Evans, president, Butterick Fashion Marketing Co., whose guests are store executives, heads of fashion houses, or sometimes men in her own company, said:

"I think it's fun to take men to lunch. Since our offices are in Greenwich Village, they enjoy trying some of the neighborhood places.

Arrange in Advance

"Most men feel no embarrassment these days when the waiter mistakenly brings them the check," she went on, "But if it's somebody I really want to treat and he is likely to make trouble about the check, I arrange to pay in advance, when I make the reservation.

"Or I tell the waiter in French or Italian that I'm paying," she said. "It helps to be a linguist." Who tastes the wine? "If I take a connoisseur or a Frenchman, I insist he do it."

Madelon Talley, director of international investments for the Dreyfus Corp., on taking financiers to lunch,: "My father-in-law (Victor Weybright, the retired publisher) says that if a woman can get to any level in business, she should be able to take a man to lunch without embarrassing him.

"Men usually take me to lunch," she said. "I'm the buyer, they're the sellers." But when she's hostess, she tries to lead her guests to restaurants where her company has charge accounts. "Then the bill never comes," she explained.

'Random House Richer'

Charlotte Mayerson is a senior editor at Random House and takes agents and authors to lunch. When she first started in publishing, she said, credit eards were not so prevalent and she had not thought of charge accounts — "then I used to go through some complex machinations with headwaiters."

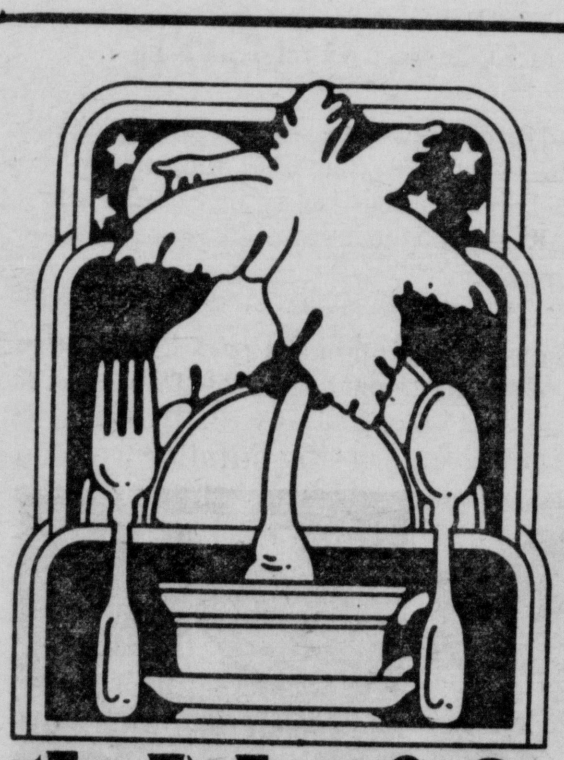

"Now they understand that if I've made the reservation, the check is presented to me," she continued. "There is sometimes a bit of trouble with an older man who was brought up in a different generation. But agents and authors are usually no trouble, even when they're rich, they know Random House is richer."

Christine Beshar, a lawyer with Cravath, Swaine & Moore, takes clients or other lawyers to lunch, usually to clubs such as the Wall Street Club, where she is one of the few women members, or to the Chambers of Commerce.

"The clubs know me, so there's no problem," she explained. "I pay ahead or a day later. At restaurants I try to arrange things beforehand, so there's never a question of who pays."
